Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what computer systems he will require to be used by companies contracting to provide medical services to the Benefits Agency in order to secure the confidentiality of the health records of benefit claimants; [17165]

(2) if the companies contracting for the Benefits Agency medical service which have other databases deriving from other contracts to provide public services will be able to match the information between databases used in the performance of these functions; and what principles concerning the transfer of information will apply. [17172]

Mr. Burt: There will be no requirement to use specific computer systems. However, the successful contractor(s) will have a mandatory requirement to take measures to ensure the confidentiality, correct use and security of all data held or transmitted electronically. They must ensure that any data passed to them by the Department or by a third party, in relation to, or revealed during the course of the contract, are used only for the purpose of delivering the medical service by the appropriate personnel, and that the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984 are complied with.

All data obtained during the course of the contract will remain in the ownership of the Department.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what system of penalties for under-performance will be in place for contractors providing medical services for the Benefits Agency;[17167]

(2) what default procedure will be incorporated into contracts for the provision of medical services for the Benefits Agency for the notification of unsatisfactory performance. [17168]

Mr. Burt: In line with standard practice for Government contracts, a breach of contract including unsatisfactory performance or under-performance would result in a lower level of payment to the contractor(s). Continual unsatisfactory performance will entitle the Department to damages and may result in termination of the contract.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if copies of contracts agreed with public sector companies for the provision of medical services to the Benefits Agency will be placed in the Library. [17169]

Mr. Burt: Copies of the contract(s) will not be placed in the Library as to do so would prejudice the effective conduct of contractual activities between the Department and the successful contractor(s). However, when the contract(s) are awarded, information regarding the services and targets for output performance that form part of the contract, the criteria for the award and the overall contract value will be published in the line with existing Government and EC procurement guidelines.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social security who will evaluate the bids by contractors for the Benefits Agency medical service; and by what criteria. [17158]

Mr. Burt: The project team taking forward the contractorisation process responsible for carrying out the evaluation.

Evaluation of the bids will be based on financial risk and qualitative criteria which will be signed off by the appropriate authority within the Benefits Agency in line with best practice. Recommendations will then be put forward to the project steering group prior to submission to the Benefits Agency management team. The final decision will rest with Ministers.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library the financial memorandums setting out the terms and conditions attached to the funding of the Benefits Agency medial service following its contractorisation. [17160]

Mr. Burt: There will be no financial memoranda. Funding for the medical service provided by the successful contractor(s) will be provided by the Department.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if directors and other staff of the companies contracting for the Benefits Agency medical service will be required to declare any relevant interests; and where such information will be published. [17163]

Mr. Burt: A formal declaration of interest will not be requested. However, staff will be required to sign a confidentiality undertaking and comply with any requirements regarding security of information and conflicts of interest.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what standards of service he will require companies contracting to provide medical services for the Benefits Agency to achieve; and if he will list each area where a higher standard than that currently in force will apply. [17179]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 19 February, Official Report, columns 590–91.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has for a code of practice covering (a) public access to information on, and (b) regular publication of key information from, private companies contracting for the Benefits Agency medical services. [17171]

(2) what statistics concerning the activity and performance of the companies contracting for the Benefits Agency medical service he intends to publish. [17161]

Mr. Burt: The successful contractors will have a mandatory contractual requirement to comply with legislation and policies which apply to this Department, including the open government code of practice on access to government information.

The arrangements for the provision and publication of statistical information are currently being developed as part of the system for contract monitoring.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what requirements of confidentiality he intends to include in (a) the contracts of employment and (b) the contracts for sessional staff working for the private contractors which will be operating the Benefits Agency medical service. [17173]

Mr. Burt: There will be no change to the current rules governing confidentiality of information.

Anyone working for, or on behalf of, the successful contractors will be subject to the provisions of section 123 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992 which makes it a criminal offence to disclose information acquired in the course of employment without lawful authority.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what mechanism he intends to establish for complaints against private companies running the Benefits Agency medical service. [17174]

Mr. Burt: The successful contractors will be subject to a mandatory contractual requirement to ensure that there is an effective procedure in place for all complaints received. The contract will not specify a mechanism for handling complaints. However, an effective procedure for handling all complaints will be a mandatory requirement.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will lay before Parliament the accounts of the private companies contracting for the Benefits Agency medical service in respect of this work. [17175]

Mr. Burt: No. The accounts of the shortlisted private sector companies, with the exception of Andersen Consulting, are available at Companies House. As a partnership, Andersen Consulting are not obliged to file accounts with Companies House. However, their corporate report which was considered as part of the evaluation process to choose the shortlisted companies is available on request.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what audit requirements he intends to impose on the contractors taking over the Benefits Agency medical service; in what respects these will differ from the statutory requirements of audit in the private sector; and if he will list the specifications on which audit of the contractors will be based. [17177]

Mr. Burt: In line with standard practice for Government contracts, the contract(s) will include audit requirements which will be contained within the contract and will give the Department, and its statutory auditors, audit access provisions over and above the statutory requirements. The audit of the contractors will be based on the audit specifications contained in the contract.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what performance measurement systems will be included in contracts to provide medical services for the Benefits Agency. [17166]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 10 February, Official Report, column 75.

The performance of the successful contractors will be monitored rigorously. The system by which performance will be monitored is under discussion with the shortlisted contractors and the users of the present medical service.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for the auditing of the Benefits Agency's performance of its responsibility to ensure that its obligations are met by the companies with which it contacts for medical services. [17170]

Mr. Burt: Contract management procedures will be set in place to ensure that companies meet their obligations under the contract. There will be regular reviews with the suppliers of the medical service.

Contract management will be subject to normal audit requirements.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what specifications and operating instructions he will give to the private contractors which will run the Benefits Agency medical service; and what are the minimum standards which he will require. [17157]

Mr. Burt: The successful service providers will have to meet a minimum set of mandatory requirements which will be as stringent as existing standards for the provision of the medical service.

Disability Payments

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of raising the level of invalid care allowance to the level of (a) the jobseeker's allowance and (b) long-term incapacity benefit for each of the years 1997–98 and 1998–99. [17095]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

£ Million

	1997–98	1998–99
Jobseeker's allowance (25 and over rate)	£130	£140
Long-term incapacity benefit	£270	£300

Notes:
1. Estimates are in cash prices rounded to the nearest £10 million.
2. Estimates take account of offsetting savings in income-related benefits.
3. The estimates compare invalid care allowance with the 25 and over rate of jobseeker's allowance.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) lone parents, (b) couples with children and (c) single people who receive (i) family credit and (ii) disability working allowance and are employed are (1) earning below the lower earnings limit, (2) earning below the tax threshold and (3) paying income tax. [17097]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is in tables:

Level of earnings of family credit recipients shown by family type as at 31 August 1996

Family type	Level of earnings
	Below lower earnings limit	Below tax threshold	Paying income tax
Lone parents	78,000	149,000	164,000
Couples	80,000	135,000	258,000

1. Couples and single people without children are not eligible to receive Family Credit.
2. Sample size is 5 per cent.
3. Figures are rounded to the nearest 1,000.

Level of earnings of disability working allowance recipients shown by family type as at 31 July 1996

Lone parents	413	692	604
Couples with children	1,042	1,512	1,400
Single people without children	1,646	2,394	2,823
Couples without children	504	674	461

1. Sample size is 100 per cent.
2. Figures are not rounded.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what internal guidelines are used by his Department on the manner of responding to parliamentary questions. [17159]

Mr. Burt: A copy of the internal guidance used by officials preparing replies to parliamentary questions has been placed in the Library. Departmental officials also use the guidance recently published in annexe C to the Public Service Committee's first special report, Session 1996–97, HC67.

State Earnings-related Pensions Scheme

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of (a) the impact on the revenue of the national insurance fund and (b) the savings in the current financial year from reduced expenditure on national insurance rebates and incentives paid on contributions made to APPs if (i) all and (ii) half of those have opted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme into appropriate personal pensions and earn under £10,000 per annum were to rejoin SERPS. [15593]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The net present value of the additional expenditure on SERPS in future years would be approximately £120 million at current prices if all those with earnings less than £10,000 were to rejoin SERPS for 1996–97 and £60 million if half of those with earnings less than £10,000 rejoined.

The savings on national insurance rebates and incentives for 1996–97 is estimated to be around £240 million if all those with earnings less than £10,000 were to rejoin SERPS and £120 million if half of those with earnings less than £10,000 rejoined.

Notes

1. A discount rate of 3.75 per cent. has been used to calculate the net present value of future expenditure. This discount rate is consistent with the Government Actuary's review of contracting out.

Disability Benefit Unit

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what responsibility the director of the disability benefit unit has for replying to letters from hon Members; for what reasons the hon. Member for Walsall, North was told in a letter of 31 January (ref. J9627090C) that the official correspondence section would be replying to him; and if he will make a statement about the internal organisation of the disability benefit unit. [16977]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Winnick, dated 24 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what responsibility the Director of the Disability Benefit Unit has for replying to letters form honourable Members; for what reasons the honourable Member for Walsall North was told in a letter of 31st January (ref. J9627090C) that the official correspondence section would be replying to him; and if he will make a statement about the internal organisation of the Disability Benefit Unit (DBU).

Can I first of all explain that as you copied me your letter of 28 January to the Director of Disability Benefits, I arranged for the issues raised to be investigated and replied personally on 20 February. Therefore the acknowledgement letter of 31 January from the Disability Benefits Director should have advised you that I would be responding. I apologise for any confusion this may have caused.

As I explained in this letter, much of the correspondence received by the Disability Benefits Director relates to the operational handling of individual cases. The Director has arranged for all issues arising from correspondence to be investigated by front line managers within the 11 Disability Benefit Centres and also the DBU. I should stress, however, the Director remains fully responsible for all replies and will, of course, respond personally if a customer remains dissatisfied,

The Agency issues guidance to managers on how to deal with official correspondence, including that from Members of Parliament. We are currently reviewing this guidance and will consider the processes in place at the DBU as part of this review.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Rehabilitation)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much time per month since January 1992 was spent by prisoners undergoing rehabilitation aimed at addressing their offending in (a) each prison, (b) each prison type and (c) the whole prison estate; [15988]

(2) how many rehabilitation courses aimed at addressing the causes of prisoners' offending were available in each month since January 1992 in (a) each prison, (b) each prison type and (c) the whole prison estate. [15969]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 26 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the availability of offending behaviour courses in prisons.

The information you requested on offending behaviour programmes by month and prison is not available. The Service provides core offending behaviour programmes which are designed centrally and delivered across the estate. The national totals of these programmes delivered each year are recorded centrally. The available figures are listed in the attached tables.

As well as the core programmes there are other offending behaviour programmes run in prisons according to need and resources. Records of these are not kept centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The Prison Service has a key performance indicator for the number of prisoners completing offending behaviour programmes which have been accredited as being effective in reducing offending behaviour. The sex offender treatment programme and the cognitive behaviour programmes have been accredited and the numbers of prisoners completing these programmes are being recorded for counting towards the key performance indicator. There is a continuing process of accreditation of offending behaviour programmes and as new programmes achieve accreditation records will become available of the details of these courses and the numbers of prisoners completing them.

Additionally, a wide range of educational and vocational courses are run which are designed to increase the skills and job prospects of offenders, thus assisting with their rehabilitation.

Prison service core offending behaviour programmes—completions since 1992–93

Year	Number completed	Hours per programme	Total hours
Sex offender treatment (SOTP) core programme—programme revised and extended with effect from April 1995
1992–93	284	80	22,720
1993–94	439	80	35,120
1994–95	554	80	44,320
1995–96	406	180	73,080
SOTP relapse prevention/booster programme—piloted in 1995–96
1995–96	33	56	1,848
Enhanced thinking skills—piloted in 1993–94—revised in April 1996 to 40 hours
1993–94	46	28	1,288
1994–95	241	28	6,748
1995–96	631	28	17,668
Reasoning and rehabilitation—piloted in 1993–94
1993–94	63	70	4,410

Prison Ship

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the decision was made to purchase a prison ship; what account was taken of experience in using ships for detaining asylum seekers; when Parliament was notified of the decision to purchase; what are (a) the total purchase costs and (b) the estimated running costs; and if he will make a statement. [15782]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 26 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking when the decision was made to purchase a prison ship; what account was taken of past experience in using ships for detaining asylum seekers; when Parliament was notified of the decision to purchase; what are the total purchase costs and the estimated running costs.

In order to respond to the rapid rise in the prisoner population several options were considered including the purchase or charter of a prison ship. The decision to purchase the prison vessel "Resolution" (to be renamed the "Weare") was made on 15 January.

We are aware of the difficulties experienced in using the "Earl William" for immigration detainees at Harwich in 1987. However, the "Earl William" was a converted ferry: the "Resolution"/"Weare" is a purpose-built vessel. It has been decided not to use the "Weare" to hold immigration detainees.

Parliament has not been formally notified of the decision to purchase the prison vessel, however Ministers have been kept fully informed. The cost of purchasing the floating prison is about £3.7 million and the cost of transporting it to the UK is about £800,000. It will provide a total of 400 places. We expect the cost per prisoner place to be approximately £16,200 which compares with an average figure for the category C estate of £16,500 (for the period April—September 1996).

Leyhill Prison (Escape)

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will order an immediate inquiry, reporting in public, into the escape of James Mynott from Leyhill prison. [16740]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Michael Stern, dated 26 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the abscond of James Mynott from Leyhill prison.

In accordance with our normal practice the governor of Leyhill prison has been instructed to conduct an inquiry into the abscond of James Mynott on 14 February 1997. The reports of such inquiries are not normally made public.

Military Corrective Training Centre

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Health and Safety regulations will still apply to the military corrective training centre after its partial conversion to a high-intensity regime. [16868]

Miss Widdecombe: The Crown's responsibilities under health and safety law are unaffected by the establishment of Colchester young offender institution at the military corrective training centre. Those responsibilities are the same in both the military and Prison Service parts of the site.

Prisoners (Ethnic Background)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current prison population by ethnic background for remand and convicted prisoners. [16870]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 26 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what is the current prison population by ethnic background for remand and convicted prisoners.

The information requested is contained in the attached table.

Population of Prison Service Establishment by Ethnic Origin, 31 January 1997[1]

Ethnic origin	Remand	[2]Sentenced	Total
All ethnic groups	11,500	46,100	57,600
White	9,310	38,030	47,340
Black	1,530	5,540	7,070
South Asian	330	1,310	1,640
Chinese and other	330	1,220	1,550

[1] All figures are provisional.
[2] Figures include those committed in default of payment of a fine.

Prisons (Drugs Testing)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, columns 211–12, when he intends to write to the hon. Member in respect of mandatory drug testing; and if he will make a statement. [16983]

Miss Widdecombe: I hope to write to the hon. Member shortly.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Ms R. McAliskey will be able to have her child with her in HM prison, Holloway should it be born while she is still remanded in custody in the United Kingdom. [17410]

Miss Widdecombe: The matter is being carefully considered.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent report by Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary on No. 5 area (south-west) of the Metropolitan police. [17971]

Mr. Maclean: Yes. I have today placed in the Library a note of the recommendations from the report, together with the responses of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and the police authority responses, which take into account the advice my right hon. and learned Friend and I have received from the Metropolitan police committee.

Special Secure Units

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been made in each month since September 1994 by prisoners within special secure units concerning (a) alleged ill-treatment and (b) sleep deprivation. [16354]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 26 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about complaints by prisoners in special secure units.

Prisoners may make complaints through a variety of channels. The detailed information required to answer your question could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Strip Searches

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) further to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 736, at what level of the Prison Service the decision was made to introduce a closed-loop video system for use in the prisoners' strip search room at Long Lartin prison; what external legal advice was sought prior to its introduction; and at what date Ministers were informed; [16629]

(2) who carried out the evaluation of the closed-loop video system for use in the prisoners' strip search room at Long Lartin prison; and if he will list the principal conclusions of that evaluation; [16630]

(3) pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 736, when prisoners who had their earnings stopped or deducted on adjudication for refusing to undergo video-recorded strip searches received (a) an explanation and (b) an apology following the quashing of the adjudication; [16631]

(4) when prisoners at HM prison, Long Lartin were informed of the discontinuation of the closed-loop video system introduced for use in the prisoners' strip search room; when the cameras were removed; and how many prisoners were subject to disciplinary measures for refusing to be strip searched on the grounds that the search would be video-recorded; [16632]

(5) on what precise date video tapes recording random strip searches of prisoners at HM prison, Long Lartin in 1996 were destroyed; on what dates their destruction was ordered; and what grade of officer was instructed to supervise this process; [16633]

(6) if he will conduct an inquiry to establish whether unauthorised copies of the video recording of intimate body searches at Long Lartin were made. [16659]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 20 February 1997]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 26 February 1997.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the use of video recording during the strip searching of prisoners at Long Lartin prison, its withdrawal from use and disciplinary measures taken against prisoners who refused to under video-recorded strip searches.

The Woodcock and Learmont reports indicated that much greater use should be made of CCTV and video in prisons as aids to security and safety, including during searching procedures.

The use of video during the strip searching of prisoners at Long Lartin was one of a number of new uses of video and/or CCTV introduced as part of the upgrading of dispersal prisons recommended by Sir John Woodcock. The overall upgrading programme was approved by me. Legal advice was not sought before the introduction of any new uses of video or CCTV. Ministers were kept informed in general terms of progress on the implementation of the Woodcock recommendations. They were not advised on the detailed operational aspects of implementation including the specific uses of video and CCTV.

The use of video during the strip searching of prisoners at Long Lartin was evaluated after four months of operation. The evaluation, carried out by the Directorate of Dispersals and Security Group at Prison Service Headquarters, concluded that the use of video recording did not provide sufficient improvement in the degree of protection to prisoners or staff to justify its continuance at Long Lartin or its introduction elsewhere.

The first prisoner to challenge his adjudication and have the result quashed was given an explanation on his complaint and request form in October 1996. The procedure for informing prisoners was then reviewed and each subsequent prisoner received a letter during December 1996 explaining that the Director of Dispersals had reviewed their case and since the study was a pilot the disciplinary awards had been quashed.

Each prisoner was also contacted to inform them what this would mean in their individual case.

A general notice to prisoners concerning the discontinuation of video recording during strip searches was not published. Prisoners were informed of the discontinuation on an individual basis. The cameras have not yet been physically removed, they have been disconnected and the recording facility has been removed. The system is therefore inoperative.

Ten prisoners were subject to disciplinary measures for refusing to be strip searched on the grounds that the search would be video recorded.

The video tapes which recorded the strip searches have not been destroyed. The tapes have been properly stored in a sealed bag and placed in a safe. The tapes will be incinerated in due course under properly supervised conditions.

No unauthorised copies of video recordings were made at Long Lartin prison. The authorised video recordings which took place were of strip searches not of intimate body searches.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration detainees have been transferred from HM prison Haslar to HM prison Rochester in each of the last three months; and if he will make a statement on the factors underlying the transfers. [17401]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 24 February 1997]: During the period 1 November to 31 January, a total of 10 immigration detainees were transferred from Haslar to Rochester. There were two such transfers in November 1996, three in December 1996 and five in January 1997.

Detainees may be transferred for a variety of reasons, but a number of transfers in early February resulted from planned refurbishment work at Haslar, which has now been postponed.

Magistrates Courts (Psychiatric Reports)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases heard in magistrates courts in England and Wales during 1995 and 1996 were adjourned for psychiatric reports; and in how many instances applications for adjournments were turned down. [16871]

Mr. Streeter: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16309]

Sir Paul Beresford: Registers recording the presence and treatment of asbestos, and any other hazardous materials, are maintained in the Department of the Environment's buildings. Assessments are carried out in accordance with current regulations.

Our procurement policy requires that no products containing ozone-depleting substances are purchased, and this was one of the aims of the contracts let in relation to the Department's two new headquarters buildings. Both buildings have been designed to achieve the highest standards in environmental performance; Eland house was recently awarded a very good BREEAM—Building

Research Establishment environmental assessment method—rating, and Ashdown house is also expected to achieve a similar rating in due course.

British Agrochemicals Association Ltd.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what meetings he has had with British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months; what was the subject of the meetings; and if he will make a statement; [16290]

(2) what representations he has received from British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months; what was the subject of those representations; and if he will make a statement. [16285]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has not met nor received representations from the British Agrochemicals Association in the last 12 months.

At the initiative of the BAA, officials in my Department and the Health and Safety Executive have met and corresponded with the BAA on a number of occasions in the last 12 months. Topics covered include organophosphate insecticides, the annual pesticide incidents report and the review of the European Community fifth environmental action programme. HSE officials also meet representatives of BAA at regular tripartite meetings under the aegis of the Health and Safety Commission and at other meetings on the operation and funding of the pesticide approval arrangements.

Energy-Efficient Housing

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action he proposes in respect of dwellings identified by the English house condition survey as not physically capable of being made energy efficient at reasonable cost; and if he will make a statement; [16580]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure the replacement of the least energy-efficient housing stock; and if he will make a statement. [16613]

Mr. Clappison: It is the responsibility of housing authorities and other owners to determine whether replacement is the best course of action for the least energy-efficient housing stock, having regard to its efficiency and other physical and social factors. However, the survey indicates that for most dwellings, including many of those not capable of being brought up to current building regulation standards, improvement to a more moderate level of energy efficiency is likely to be the most cost-effective course.

Environmental Protection and Water

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors underlie the increased provision for environmental protection and water in the spring supplementary estimates; and if he will make a statement. [16881]

Mr. Clappison: A spring supplementary estimate has been proposed to take provision of £500,000 to cover pressure on rural water and sewerage grants, £76,000, and assisted areas sewerage grants £424,000, which are demand led. In addition, it is proposed to vire £578,000 from environmental publicity and the small company environmental and energy management assistance scheme into rural water and sewerage grants.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency set up by his Department since the start of April 1992. [16967]

Sir Paul Beresford: The only executive agency for which the Department of the Environment is responsible which has been set up since the start of April 1992 is the Planning Inspectorate executive agency. It was set up on 1 April 1992 to continue the duties already being carried out by the Planing Inspectorate. The only costs involved were administrative costs. These would have been minimal; no figures are available.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each financial year from 1994–95 to 1997–98 the change in the level of grants paid to Wolverhampton metropolitan borough council by the Government due to changes in the formulae used for standard spending assessments since the 1993–94 distribution (a) expressed in pounds, (b) divided by the band D tax base for council tax setting and (c) as a proportion of that tax base and scaled by ratio of each tax band to band D. [17212]

Sir Paul Beresford: The effect of changes of methodology in the formulae for the revenue support grant is approximated by the effect of such changes on the standard spending assessment. The SSAs are adjusted to be comparable with the SSA of the subsequent year. Changes in methodology also give rise to SSA reduction grant which reduces the effect of changes on council tax payers. The amounts for Wolverhampton are given.

	Effect on SSA		SSA reduction grant
	£ million (a)	£/Band D property (b)	£ million (c)	£/Band D property (d)
1994–95	–14.5	–219	10.6	160
1995–96	–1.0	–15	6.4	96
1996–97	–0.8	–12	3.0	44
1997–98	–0.2	–2	0	0

The figures in columns (b) and (d) are then multiplied by the standard ratios 6/9:7/9:8/9:11/9:13/9:15/9:18/9 to derive equivalent figures for property bands A:B:C:E:F:G:H respectively.

Fire Safety

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects a suitable large-scale fire test for large insulated sandwich panels to be developed. [17281]

Mr. Clappison: I expect such a test, providing a harmonised European method, to be available in about two years. The International Standards Organisation is developing a still larger scale test, but I understand this may take three to five years to perfect.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to approve the removal of any fire safety legislation currently within local Acts of Parliament only where he is satisfied that there is equivalent national legislation affording the public the same degree of protection from fire. [17282]

Mr. Clappison: Fire safety provision in local Acts will be repealed where these overlap or conflict with the provision of the building regulations.

Local Authorities (Legal Costs)

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has issued to local authorities on the use of their funds for the legal costs of councillors or officers criticised by the district auditor; and if he will make a statement. [17637]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. The use of funds to meet such costs is a matter for individual authorities.

Abondoned Mines (Water Pollution)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to consult on the contents of pre-abandonment notices which mine operators will be required to prepare when section 58 of the Environment Act 1995 is brought into force. [17910]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I have issued a consultation paper today, inviting comments on our proposals for regulations.

These proposals are designed to enhance the Environment Agency's ability to tackle water pollution from abandoned mines. They set out the precise contents of the notification, which mine operators will have to send to the agency at least six months in advance of any intended abandonment.

The notification will include a range of information including the operator's opinion as to the consequences of the proposed abandonment. Variations to the timing and information requirements of the notice will apply where abandonment follows an emergency, and in certain cases of insolvency.

The prior notification to the agency of any intended abandonment will allow measures to be identified and implemented at the appropriate time to prevent or reduce water pollution after abandonment. Where a phased programme of abandonment is planned, this could be notified at one time, so as to reduce the burden of notification on the operator.

The scale of the problem of discharges from abandoned mines had to be set in context. Some 200 km of river length is affected by discharges from abandoned coal mines and some 400 km by discharges from abandoned metal mines. This, though, only represents 0.5 per cent. and 1 per cent. respectively of total river length monitored by the Environment Agency. Pollution caused by abandoned mines is a rather specialised and local problem but, where it occurs, its impact on the aquatic environment can be serious.

British Waterways Board

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to change the 1996–97 external financing limit for the British Waterways Board. [18136]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Grant in aid to the British Waterways Board is being increased by £1.233 million for 1996–97 to enable it to carry out additional major repairs to the canal network and other urgent maintenance. This increases the British Waterways Board's external financing limit to £51.033 million. It will be funded by savings on the vote and therefore does not represent an increase in public expenditure.

Noise Pollution

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the nature and terms of reference of the work commissioned by his Department to study the impact of noise pollution in the countryside; who has the contract for this work; when it commenced; and when he expects a report to be (a) completed and (b) made public; [16850]

(2) at which locations and for which activities testing for noise has taken place in South Yorkshire as part of his Department's investigations into the impact of noise pollution in the countryside; [16851]

(3) what plans his Department has to consult local environmental groups in areas where his Department is testing for noise pollution. [16852]

Mr. Clappison [holding answers 24 February 1997]: In March 1996, the Building Research Establishment was contracted by my Department to recommend a suitable technique for the measurement and assessment of noise from clay target shooting, taking into account its impact on local communities. The recommended technique will be incorporated into a new code of practice on minimising noise from clay target shooting being prepared by the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health, the Clay Pigeon Shooting Association and the British Shooting Sports Council.

The research involves the measurement of noise from 16 shooting sites in England, together with surveys of the reaction to the noise of residents living close to the sites. In South Yorkshire, measurements and surveys have been undertaken in Grenoside, Sheffield. The research does not involve consultation with local environmental groups.

The work is expected to be completed by the end of March 1997. My Department's policy is that, unless there are overriding reasons to the contrary, research findings are published as soon as possible after completion of the project.

Groundwater Levels

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on current levels of groundwater in the United Kingdom; and what assessment he has made of the possibility of water shortages in summer 1997. [17273]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 24 February 1997]: The main aquifers are in England and north Wales. January 1997 levels in the sandstone were commonly the lowest on record. Levels in the chalk were also very depressed. Levels in the small aquifers of Scotland and Northern Ireland are within normal variation.

My Department receives weekly reports from the Environment Agency on the water resources position in England and Wales. In view of the predominantly dry weather during much of the winter, we have commissioned from the Environment Agency a report on the prospects for public water supplies this year, to be based on the water resources position at 28 February. We expect to receive this in mid-March.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new proposals he has for improving the home energy efficiency scheme. [17430]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 24 February 1997]: My hon. Friend the Minister for Construction, Planning and Energy Efficiency announced last December that this popular grant scheme, which has already improved more than 2 million homes occupied by the most vulnerable families, is to be upgraded. The changes, due to take effect in July this year, will make the scheme more flexible and capable of delivering even greater social and environmental benefits. The key feature of the new scheme will be the ability of eligible householders to select a package of work best suited to their own homes from a wider range of energy-efficiency measures.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Contracts

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list Government contracts and commitments which are (a) contractually and (b) non-contractually linked to the retail prices index. [17359]

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not held centrally, and may be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prince's Trust

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to increase the participation of civil servants in Prince's Trust volunteers schemes. [18077]

Mr. Freeman: The Government are committed to increasing the civil service contribution to the Prince's Trust target of 25,000 volunteers annually by the year 2000. To this end, I have set a civil service-wide benchmark of 3 per cent. of civil servants aged 16 to 25 participating in PTV schemes by the same year. This compares to current participation running at a little under 1 per cent.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

New Parliamentary Building

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Jarrow (Mr. Dixon) of 3 February, Official Report, columns 458–59, on the new parliamentary building, what estimate he has made of the additional costs arising from the delay. [17197]

Sir Raymond Powell: There are too many imponderables at this stage to be able to give a reliable forecast of the costs.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16797]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: A list of the number of written and oral parliamentary questions answered by this Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, has been placed in the House Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available.

The rest of the information requested could be provided only at disproportional cost.

United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will pursue again with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees the question of a further tranche of funding for the programme for national persecutees by the German Government referred to in the answer of 30 June 1993, Official Report, column 497. [17143]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The UNHCR wound up its indemnification hardship fund for national socialist persecutees in 1993. We do not intend to pursue the question of further funding with the UNHCR or the German Government.

UK Students (Foreign Residence Restrictions)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what restrictions apply to the length of time United Kingdom students may reside in (a) Australia, (b) Canada, (c) New Zealand and (d) South Africa; and what permits are required. [17354]

Mr. Hanley: Visa and immigration policy is a matter for the Governments of the countries concerned. I recommend that questions on entry clearance matters should be addressed to the appropriate high commission.

Albania

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many projects in Albania and at what cost have been supported by the Westminster Foundation on application from the Conservative party. [17285]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 February, Official Report, column 579–80.

Internal Market Advisory Committee

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the specific complaints his Department has raised at the Internal Market Advisory Committee since May 1995. [17111]

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

My Department's action single market—formerly the single market compliance unit—has arranged for 22 new cases to be raised at the Internal Market Advisory Committee since May 1995. These have covered:

Greek restrictions on cruises involving yachts registered and flagged outside Greece;

delays in the refunding of VAT by the Luxembourg authorities;

French refusal to accept international quality assurance certification;

restrictions on the organisation of sales and markets in Spain;

German ban on azo pigments;

Greek restrictions on the television advertising of toys;

German "Ü" marking requirements for steel construction products;

German re-testing requirements for engineering equipment;

French fire resistance certification requirements;

alleged ineffective enforcement in other member states of a directive concerned with dangerous imitations of foodstuffs;

French restrictions on the use of certain fuel tanks on commercial vehicles;

German "GS" marking requirements for medical products;

Irish mutual recognition failure in respect of plug standards;

discriminatory operation of the Finnish alcohol monopoly;

additional testing requirements for mobile cranes in several member states;

a discriminatory Finnish confectionery tax;

Dutch restrictions on the sale of blended edible oils;

non-recognition in France of British ski instructor qualifications;

Spanish marking of fuel for fiscal purposes;

a Dutch prohibition on the marketing of a particular type of saw;

Belgian restrictions on the use of air cleaning equipment;

Spanish type approval requirements for glass etching equipment.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the outcome of the single market complaints raised by his Department's single market compliance unit raised by his Department's single market compliance unit with the Internal Market Advisory Committee. [17112]

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

Of the 36 cases raised by action single market—formerly the single market compliance unit—at the Internal Market Advisory Committee, 12 have been resolved. The resolved cases are those concerned with:

Italian taxation of cars over 2 litres;

Dutch waste water regulations;

requirements for stack gas analysers to be tested to German standards;

Greek regulations on the content of soft drinks;

Dutch requirements involving the double-testing of electric fencing;

Portuguese requirements concerning lighting devices on tractors;

German requirements for re-testing of samples for liquid density standards;

delays in the refunding of VAT by the Luxembourg authorities;

French refusal to accept international quality assurance certification;

German "Ü" marking requirements for steel construction products;

French fire resistance certification requirements;

French restrictions on the use of certain fuel tanks on commercial vehicles.

Action single market is continuing to press for the successful resolution of the other cases which it has raised at the Internal Market Advisory Committee.

SCOTLAND

Easterhouse Police Office

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on Strathclyde police's statement regarding an alleged assault in a cell in Easterhouse police office on 14 February. [17114]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand that a man has been charged with attempted murder following the assault and that a report has been submitted to the procurator fiscal in Glasgow and that the matter is under further investigation. It would be inappropriate, therefore, to comment further at present.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency set up by his Department since the start of April 1992. [16970]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The work involved in establishing my Department's executive agencies has been undertaken mainly by officials as part of their normal duties. Estimates of the effort involved could at this stage be calculated only at disproportionate cost. In the case of the Fisheries Research Services, which is to become an agency on 1 April 1997, I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for industry and local government to the hon. Member for East Kilbride (Mr. Ingram) on 15 January 1997, Official Report, columns 277–78.

Mortality Rates

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what have been the excess winter mortality rates in Scotland for each of the past 10 years in terms of (a) numbers and (b) percentages for (i) people over the age of 65 years, (ii) single parent families, (iii) people in receipt of income support, (iv) people with disabilities and (v) other; [17202)]

(2) what have been the excess mortality rates in Scotland for each of the past 10 years expressed (a) in excess numbers and (b) as percentages. [17442]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is no universally accepted definition of excess winter deaths and it would not be possible to calculate a rate for these. Details of family status, income support and disability are not collected at registration of death, the source of these statistics. The total number of deaths, and the number of deaths of those over the age of 65 years, by month for each of the past 10 years are given in the tables. The figures for 1996 are still provisional.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is no universally accepted definition of excess mortality. Cold-related Illnesses

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland received treatment by NHS doctors for cold-related illnesses for the periods December 1996 and January 1997; and what was the average figure for similar periods in each of the past 10 years. [17216]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the excess winter treatment rates for cold-related illnesses in hospitals in Scotland for (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients for each of the last 10 years. [17215]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In-patient admissions with a main diagnosis of cold-related illness—influenza, pneumonia and bronchitis—for the months of December to February and for the rest of each of the past 10 years are given in the table, together with the ratio of the December to February figures to the three-monthly average for the rest of the year. Information on out-patients is not held centrally.

Ambulance Service Training Courses

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in respect of the Scottish ambulance service management training courses at Barony castle, (a) how many people have participated in the courses, (b) what guidelines are issued to those participating, (c) what provision there is for opting out of courses or part of courses and (d) what equipment is available in the event of medical emergencies. [17134]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Forty-two operational managers have completed 10 or 12-day classroom-based management training courses, which include a two-day outdoor module; a further 20 operational managers participated in the most recent course, which was suspended on 15 February.

(b) Course participants receive a comprehensive two-hour briefing for the two-day outdoor module. This includes guidance on safety, communication arrangements, map reading skills and the country code.

(c) The Scottish Ambulance Service NHS Trust attaches the highest priority to the need for formal management training where previously there was none. Accordingly, it would normally expect operational ambulance managers to take part in its management training programme. The leadership element of the course was designed by external consultants to be physically achievable, even by those of moderate fitness. Despite this, students are encouraged to express any doubts or concerns they may have about participating in the outdoor activities and there have been occasions when alternative arrangements have been made at the request of individuals unable to complete this element of the course.

(d) During the outdoor module each of the walking groups is accompanied by a safety supervisor who has a first aid kit consisting of dressings and plasters, a walkie-talkie radio, mobile phone, flares, strobe light and portable cooker. Every member of each group is also equipped with various items of survival equipment. The groups use as a base a cottage equipped with modern amenities and a patient transport vehicle carrying emergency response equipment and drugs, a stretcher and blankets. A 4-wheel drive vehicle is also available at the cottage.

The trust has suspended the course and is carrying out a full review of it, in light of the death of one of the participants on 15 February.

M74

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, Official Report, columns 481–82, on junctions on the M74 motorway, how many entry-exit junctions are planned to be included over the proposed M74 route from Carlisle to Glasgow. [17046]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There will be a total of 19 junctions on the completed motorway between the M6 junction 44 at Carlisle and the Maryville interchange, inclusive.

Braer Oil Spill

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current estimate of the costs incurred by his Department and agencies for which his Department is responsible in the clearing-up operation which followed the grounding of the MV Braer on Shetland in January 1993. [17699]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The clearing-up operation was undertaken on behalf of the Government by the Department of Transport. The costs incurred by my Department related primarily to testing and monitoring for traces of oil and amounted to some £900,000.

Electoral Register

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the current number of electors in each parliamentary constituency in Scotland. [17539]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: For the latest information held centrally I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe) on 6 February 1997, Official Report, columns 690–93.

Law Reform Projects

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals the Scottish Law Commission has for future law reform projects. [18210]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Lord Advocate has recently agreed with the Scottish Law Commission a fifth programme of law reform. This was presented to Parliament yesterday and is published today. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The new programme, which supersedes the existing four programmes, describes the short, medium and long-term projects on which the commission will be working between now and the end of 1999. Timetables are set for the short and medium-term projects.

The centrepiece of the projects in the fifth programme is the commission's work on property, including feudal tenure reform and reform of the law of the tenement. Recommendations on the law of the tenement are expected before the end of 1997 and on feudal tenure reform before the end of 1999. Other matters on which recommendations are expected before the end of 1997 include diligence on the dependence and admiralty arrestments and unjustified enrichment.

The Government welcome this programme which concentrates on a number of important ant timely law reform projects. The fixing of priorities and timetables is particularly welcome and will help all of those with an interest in law reform to keep track of and prepare for changes in the law which the commission might recommend.

Leasehold Casualties

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of state for Scotland what plans he has to reform the law on leasehold casualties in Scotland. [18244]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: In view of the difficulties which are being caused to some tenants by the operation of the existing law on leasehold casualties, my right hon. Friend has formally written to the Scottish Law Commission asking commissioners:

"To consider the law on leasehold casualties and advise on possible reforms".

I hope that the commission will be able to consult and report by March 1998.

Homelessness

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were accepted as homeless by each local authority in Scotland for each year since 1990. [17230]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The available information is set out in the table.

Notes:

1. The term "accepted" has been taken to include households assessed as homeless or likely to become homeless within 28 days for whom the local authority secured that accommodation was available. The figures given include cases where the authority has taken action to ensure that the household can retain or return to its present or previous accommodation.
2. The figures given are taken from detailed individual case returns which are available for around 95 per cent. of applications, though the proportion varies between local authorities.

Offshore Installations

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals the Government have to require operators to clean up the sea bed around offshore installations on the UK continental shelf. [17000]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 24 February 1997]: Removal of installations and any debris will be addressed at end of field life in the abandonment programme approved by the Department of Trade and Industry. In addition, part II of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 includes powers to take action in response to instances of illegal dumping.

In relation to operational discharges from offshore installations, a recent study funded jointly by the United Kingdom Offshore Operators Association and the Department of Trade and Industry identified a range of options for dealing with drill cuttings piles at the decommissioning stage. All the options require further investigation and the Government are considering how this might best be undertaken.

Human Growth Hormone

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland (a) before 1 July 1977 and (b) after 1 July 1977 have (i) received human growth hormone treatment, (ii) died as a result of human growth hormone treatment, and (iii) been diagnosed as ill as a result of human growth hormone treatment; and how many court actions have been raised, or are currently pending, as a result of death or illness following such treatment. [17261]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 February 1997]: The Institute of Child Health holds and is continuing to develop a UK register of patients treated with pituitary-derived human growth hormone. The current register does not identify separately whether treatment took place before or after 1 July 1977. In total, 144 patients received pituitary-derived human growth hormone at treatment centres in Scotland. Four of these have subsequently died from Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. None of the remaining patients is currently known to be suffering from the disease. I am not aware of any legal actions on this mater raised in the Scottish courts. Two actions including an appeal are currently pending at the High Court in England.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Rape and Sexual Violence (Prosecutions)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Attorney-General what factors underlie the recent decline in prosecutions for rape and sexual violence; and if he will make a statement. [16656]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service's case work statistics do not separately record the number of prosecutions for offences of rape and sexual violence. The table shows the Home Office statistics for prosecutions of offences in rape, indecent assault on a female, unlawful sexual intercourse and buggery in England and Wales. The total number of prosecutions in 1995 was 5,715, compared with 6,276 in 1994.

The reason for this reduction is not known. The Home Office is conducting a major research project into rape cases.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Attorney-General how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16792]

The Attorney-General: A list of the number of written and oral questions answered by my Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, has been placed in the House Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available.

The number of replies given by my Department stating that information could be provided only at disproportionate cost, or was not available centrally, was eight in the Session 1995–96, plus five instances where part of the information requested was available. Details of replies given in previous Sessions could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17059]

The Attorney-General: Information on items stolen or otherwise unaccounted for during the 12 months to 31 January 1997 is as follows for my Departments and agencies:

Crown Prosecution Service

1. Non-IT equipment and furniture:

Eleven items were stolen, at a total cost of £1,884.

Five items were otherwise unaccounted for, at a total cost of £85.

2. IT equipment:

Fifteen items were stolen (including one file server valued at £5,000), at a total cost of £21,755.

Serious Fraud Office

Two non-IT items were reported as stolen or otherwise unaccounted for, at a total value of £140.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

Two non-IT items were stolen, at a total value of £60.

Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers

One lap-top computer was stolen, cost £2,000.

TREASURY

Short-term Financial Assets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present total of short-term financial assets held by the Government; if he will list the major categories of such short-term financial assets held; and if he will make a statement. [17183]

Mr. Jack: Identifiable short-term financial assets of central Government were over £8 billion at the end of September 1996. These assets consisted of sterling bank deposits, £6.7 billion; foreign currency bank deposits, £500 million; and holdings of short-dated bills by the issue department of the Bank of England, £900 million. Non-identifiable short-term financial assets include a proportion of the official reserves—the total value of which was £28½ billion at the end of September 1996—and of Government holdings of local authority and public corporation debt—£42 billion and £21 billion, respectively. Figures for the maturity structure of these assets could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Government debt, net of financial assets, was reduced by nearly £6 billion in January. This was the largest repayment of debt in a single month for eight years.

Money Supply and Inflation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his assessment of the relationship between the money supply and the future rate of inflation. [17647]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government consider all the relevant information when assessing the prospects for inflation up to two years ahead. The growth of the money supply is just one of the many indicators examined when making this assessment. The relationship between money growth and inflation has varied considerably in the past, for instance when financial markets were liberalised in the 1980s.

Privatisation (Advertising)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost has been of advertising each privatisation since 1979. [17642]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 25 February 1997]: The table shows the cost to the Government of advertising in each privatisation or secondary sale since British Telecom, in 1984. The overall cost represents 0.29 per cent. of aggregate proceeds from these sales. Information on advertising costs of earlier sales is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Deaths (Respiratory Illness)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, Official Report, columns 376–77, on what approximate date he expects the completed figures for January 1997 deaths from pneumonia, influenza and bronchitis to be available; and if he will make arrangements for the completed figures to be placed in the Library. [17254]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 24 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 26 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question concerning the approximate date when he expects the completed figures for January 1997 deaths from pneumonia, influenza and bronchitis to be available, and whether he will make arrangements for the completed figures to be placed in the Library.

Final figures on monthly deaths from pneumonia, influenza and bronchitis will not be available in published form until the end of 1998. Reasonably usable (unpublished) data for deaths in January 1997 from these conditions should be available by the end of March 1997. These should differ only slightly from the definitive figures to be published next year.

Whereas it would be possible to give a virtually complete figure for deaths registered in January 1997, figures for actual occurrences in January would be low because of the delay between the event and its registration. The registration figures for January would include deaths that occurred in the preceding December and earlier.

I hope this reply has been helpful.

Full-time Permanent Jobs

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many full-time permanent jobs have been (a) lost and (b) created in each of the past 10 years; [17455]

(2) what is his Department's estimate of the number of full-time permanent jobs which will be created over the next five years. [17468]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 24 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 26 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent questions in which you asked about the number of full-time permanent jobs lost or created in each of the last ten years together with projection for the next five years.

Information is available only for the net change in employees between 1986 and 1996. This is provided in the attached table. The Office for National Statistics does not produce projections of employment levels.

Gastroschisis

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the incidence of gastroschisis per 1,000 births for each health authority area for the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [17276]

(2) if he will list the number of cases of gastroschisis per 1,000 births in each year since 1970. [17278]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 24 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. John Austin-Walker, dated 26 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question concerning the number of cases of gatroschisis per 1,000 births in each year since 1970.

The table below shows data for Anomalies of Abdominal wall (International Classification of Diseases 9th revision code 756.7) which include exomphalos, gastroschisis and prune belly (syndrome). Gastroschisis figures are only available separately at a disproportionate cost. The data are shown from 1979, as before then it was not available on a comparable basis. The rates are calculated per 10,000 live/stillbirths.

Number of cases and rates[1] for anomalies of abdominal wall in England and Wales, 1979 to 1993

Year	Number of cases	Rates[1]
1979	188	2.9
1980	184	2.8
1981	166	2.6
1982	162	2.6
1983	168	2.7
1984	122	1.9
1985	126	1.9
1986	125	1.9
1987	134	2.0
1988	147	2.1
1989	133	1.9
1990	174	2.5
1991	165	2.3
1992	144	2.1

[1] Rates per 10,000 live/stillbirths.

You also asked for the incidence of gastroschisis per 1,000 births for each health authority area for the most recent year for which figures are available. This information is available in Table 4A of the Annual Reference Volume publication: Series MB3 no. 9 Congenital Malformation Statistics 1993, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

The table shows data for Anomalies of abdominal wall (International Classification of Disease 9th revision code 756.7) under the heading of exomphalos, gastroschisis. Again, figures dealing solely with gastroschisis are not available except at disproportionate cost.

I hope this reply has been helpful.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Civil Disturbances (Deaths)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were killed in Northern Ireland due to the civil disturbances between 12 August 1970 and 11 February 1992; and how many of these deaths have been attributed to the Provisional IRA. [15341]

Sir John Wheeler: Deaths due to the security situation between 12 August 1970 to 11 February 1992 totalled 2,952.

Attribution to specific organisations is not available, but 1,746 of the above deaths have been attributed to republican organisations.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment his Department had made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16313]

Mr. Moss: The policy statement on green housekeeping for all Northern Ireland Departments published in March 1993 requires the removal of all materials containing asbestos products from Northern Ireland civil service buildings whenever they present a hazard and also requires the use of alternative materials in all future building projects carried out for the service. It also requires that the use of products containing chlorofluorocarbons, halons, carbon tetrachloride or 1.1.1. trichloroethane are eliminated in the Northern Ireland civil service. Additionally, suppliers of goods and services are required to comply with the guidance set out in the publication "Selling to Government" produced by the Department of the Environment. This contains specifications about hazardous materials and ozone-depleting substances and all Departments are obliged to comply with these requirements.

Departments have in place safety management systems which promote the concept of risk assessment. Within this system, premises are assessed for hazardous materials.

Specific assessments include compliance with:

1. COSHH

Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995.

2. Asbestos

Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1988.

The assessments are reviewed on an annual or bi-annual basis to ensure that they are valid.

The policy of NI Departments on ozone-depleting substances is that they are no longer purchased and that they be reduced and ultimately their use in government buildings eliminated. Fire extinguishers containing halon are being removed, disposed of safely and replaced with ozone-friendly alternatives. There is a programme of replacement of fridges and freezers which contain CFCs and only CFC-free insulation materials are used.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16786]

Sir John Wheeler: Figures for the Sessions 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available. A list of the number of written and oral Parliamentary questions answered by this Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, has been placed in the Library.

The rest of the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Area Plans

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 5 November 1996, Official Report, column 478, when the reviews and work on the area plans in respect of the Down and Newry and Mourne district council areas will take place. [16992]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Planning Service under its chief executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 26 February 1997:

Mr. Moss has asked me to reply to your Question about when the review and work in respect of the area plans for the Down and Newry and Mourne District Council areas will take place.

The Area Plan programme for 1997/98 has not yet been finalised. However, I can assure you that the matter is being actively considered, and a decision is expected shortly. I will, of course, write to you when the programme has been agreed, to let you know the position.

Mortality Rates

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what have been the excess weekly mortality rates in Northern Ireland for (a) December 1996 and (b) January 1997 in terms of numbers; and what was the average figure for similar periods in the past five years; [17205]

(2) what have been the excess mortality rates in Northern Ireland for each of the last 10 years expressed (a) in excess numbers and (b) as percentages; [17433]

(3) what have been the excess winter mortality rates in Northern Ireland for each of the past 10 years in terms of (a) excess numbers and (b) percentages for (i) people over the age of 65 years, (ii) single–parent families, (iii) people in receipt of income support, (iv) people with disabilities and (v) others. [17472]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Statistics and Research Agency under its chief executive, Mr. E. F. Jardine. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. F. Jardine to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 26 February 1997:

You recently tabled three questions asking the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for information on excess deaths in Northern Ireland as a result of winter hardship.

The first of these questions (347, tabled on 19 February) asked, what have been the excess weekly mortality rates in Northern Ireland for (a) December 1996 and (b) January 1997 in terms of numbers; and how these compare with the weekly death rates for the same period in each of the previous five years.

As deaths data from 1996 onwards have still to be finally collated, I am unable to supply you with the information you have requested for the months of December 1996 and January 1997.

Average weekly mortality rates for the months of December and January in the five years previous to those specifically requested are shown in Table 1 below. This table also details the annual average weekly mortality rates over the period in question and the resultant excess rates for January and December.

Rates per 1,000 population

Year	December average weekly mortality rate	January average weekly mortality rate	Annual average weekly mortality rate	Excess December rate	Excess January rate

Winter 1990–91	0.22	0.23	0.17	0.05	0.06

Your second and third questions (359 and 363, tabled on 20 February) asked, what have been the excess mortality rates in Northern Ireland for each of the last 10 years expressed (a) in excess numbers and (b) as percentages, and, what have been the excess winter mortality rates in Northern Ireland for each of the past 10 years in terms of (a) excess numbers and (b) percentages for (i) people over the age of 65 years, (ii) single parent families, (iii) people in receipt of income support, (iv) people with disabilities and (v) all other people not included in the above.

The mortality rates requested are shown in Tables 2, 3 and 4 below. For the purpose of this exercise winter has been taken to mean the four month period extending form December to March.

Winter 1985–86	1.08	1.01	0.07	7

The mortality rates shown in these tables are based on date of occurrences of death and broadly take account of deaths registered within one year of death. In Tables 2, 3, and 4 1996 death registrations for deaths occurring in 1995 have been estimated.

There is no information available on death rates for single parents, people in receipt of income support or people with disabilities.

I trust this information is sufficient and if I can be of further assistance please do not hesitate to contact me.

Prospect Downs Development

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when work commenced on the housing development known as Prospect Downs, Carrickfergus; and when house building on this estate was completed. [17047]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not held centrally by the Department or by any of its agencies. Information received from the building control department of Carrickfergus borough council, however, indicates that development in the Prospect area of Carrickfergus commenced late in 1975 and continued through to late 1994. The works were carried out in several phases by a number of different developers.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish a breakdown of expenditure by the (a) Department of Education, (b) Department of Economic Development, (c) Department of the Environment, (d) Department of Health and Social Services and (e) Department of Finance and Personnel in each parliamentary constituency in each of the past three months; [17303]

(2) if he will publish a breakdown of proposed expenditure by the (a) Department of Education, (b) Department of Economic Development, (c) Department of the Environment, (d) Department of Health and Social Services and (e) Department of Finance and Personnel in each parliamentary constituency for the next two months. [17304]

Sir John Wheeler: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nature Reserves (Contracting Out)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) job numbers, (b) consistency of management, (c) management expertise, (d) the United Kingdom's commitment to biodiversity made at the Rio summit and (e) accountability of the contracting out of the management and maintenance of Northern Ireland's national nature reserves. [17387]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Environment and Heritage Service under its chief executive, Mr. Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 26 February 1997:

As Chief Executive of the Environment and Heritage Service, I am responsible for operational aspects of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland's work on nature reserves.

I am therefore responding to the Parliamentary Question which you put down in the House of Commons:

"To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) job numbers, (b) consistency of management, (c) management expertise, (d) the United Kingdom's commitment to biodiversity made at the Rio Summit and (e) accountability of the contracting out of the management and maintenance of Northern Ireland's National Nature Reserves."

The Prior Options Study leading to the creation of the Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) as a next steps agency took into consideration the four strategies published in January 1994 as apart of the government's follow-up action to the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development at Rio de Janeiro. The Study determined that it was not inconsistent with those strategies to explore whether any non-government body would have the expertise to manage and maintain Northern Ireland's National Nature Reserves.

Management/Operational plans for each Reserve are currently being devised following which those bodies which have declared an interest will be assessed to determine whether they have the expertise to carry out the plan effectively, efficiently and economically. No property will be transferred unless I and my Directors are satisfied that the transferee has the necessary expertise and capacity to care for the property. Accountability for management and maintenance will remain with the EHS.

No jobs will be lost as a result of any transfer.

Electoral Register

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the current number of electors in each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland. [17538]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) on Monday 24 February 1997, Official Report, columns 95–96.

Magheramorne Landfill Project

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to which individual or organisation his Department is paying the costs associated with the hire of the consultant mentioned in his answer to the hon. Member for East Antrim (Mr. Beggs) of 27 January, Official Report, columns 53–54; and what those costs are. [17628]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Environment and Planning Service under its chief executive, Mr. Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Mr. Jim Dowd, dated 26 February 1997:

As Chief executive of the Environment and Heritage Service I am responsible for all operational aspects of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland's environment policies.

I am therefore responding to the Parliamentary Question No. 376 which you put down in the House of Commons:-

> "To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, to which individual or organisation his Department is paying the costs associated with the hire of the consultant mentioned in his Answer to the honourable member for East Antrim of 27th January, Official report, columns 53–4; and what those costs are."

The successful competitive tender for the contract for the provision of Preliminary Waste Strategy and Site Audit Specification was Haul Waste Ltd who nominated a single consultant to carry out the work. Payments for the services of that individual are made to Haul Waste Ltd at a rate of £9,500 per four months.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Swan Hunter (Privatisation)

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade under what statutory basis the Swan Hunter shipbuilding yard was privatised; and if he will make a statement on the degree of indemnity given to (a) the new owners, (b) the shareholders and (c) the new company officials against claims for (i) faulty design and (ii) poor construction conducted on vessels built during the period of public ownership. [15567]

Mr. Greg Knight: The Swan Hunter shipbuilding yard was privatised under the terms of the Aircraft and Shipbuilding Industries Act 1977, as amended by the British Shipbuilders Act 1983, which regulates the activities of British Shipbuilders. An indemnity was given by British Shipbuilders to the purchasers of Swan Hunter Shipbuilders Ltd. on 20 January 1986. This indemnity, in brief, relates to demands, claims, liabilities, costs and expenses relating to vessels constructed by Swan Hunter Shipbuilders Ltd. prior to completion of privatisation, and other work carried out prior to completion, excluding work in progress. The indemnity does not cover the new company officials at Swan Hunter.

Low Pay

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the proposal of the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) in relation to low pay expressed in the debate on the Queen's Speech of 23 October 1996, Official Report, column 87. [16070]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government share the view of my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton that statutory pay fixing, such as a national minimum wage, would destroy many thousands of jobs. However, the proposal that low-paying employers could face legal sanctions would also place an unacceptable burden on companies and damage employment. We believe that pay is a matter to be decided by the parties concerned in light of their particular local circumstances. Businesses are best able to judge what they can afford to pay and what rates are needed to recruit, retain and motivate suitably qualified staff.

Overspill Surveillance Flights

Mr. Dunn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the overspill surveillance flights carried out on behalf of his Department. [18139]

Mr. Page: For the month of January 1997, no oil at all was detected by the surveillance aircraft employed by the DTI. Two hundred and eighty-four installations were surveyed during this time with aircraft and equipment capable of detecting, by day or by night, spills as small as a few litres. These results are confirmation of the offshore industry's continued good environmental performance.

The total amount of oil from positive detections in 1996 from 3,336 overflights was 5.67 tonnes. This is to be compared with natural seepage into the North sea of 1,000 tonnes each year and discharges from rivers amounting to about 30,000 tonnes.

Balance of Trade (European Union)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade with which European Union countries the United Kingdom had a surplus in trade in goods and trade in services, transfers and investment income in each of the most recent three years for which figures are available. [15935]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The information requested is given.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will rank the European Union countries by their balance in trade in goods with the rest of the European Union, based on figures for the latest available year (i) in pounds sterling and (ii) as a percentage of gross domestic product. [15936]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The information requested is in the following table. For completeness, information is also included on the UK's balance of trade in services and in goods and services combined. For trade in services, data are not yet available for 1995 and the figures shown relate to 1993, which is the latest year for which an analysis of services earning by partner country is available. The country composition of the tables reflects EU membership at the time. Overall, the current account is close to balance and at its strongest for a decade.

Reinsurance Companies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what inquiries the Serious Fraud Office has carried out (a) on its own behalf and (b) on the behalf of non-United Kingdom police and regulators into the affairs of Dai Ichi Kyoto, Kobe Reinsurance, North America Fidelity and CRM Insurance Services. [16946]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 February 1997]: I understand that it is the policy of the Serious Fraud Office not to give operational details of inquiries it may make or be asked to make pursuant to mutual legal assistance arrangements relating to alleged fraud.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many managing agents for reinsurers are located in the United Kingdom. [16942]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 February 1997]: A figure for the number of managing agents of reinsurance companies is not readily available.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what investigations his Department has carried out into the London managing agency CRM Insurance Services; and what conclusions were reached; [16945]

(2) what investigations his officials have carried out into the reinsurance companies, Dai Ichi Kyoto, Kobe Reinsurance and North American Fidelity; and what conclusions were reached. [16947]

Mr. Nelson [holding answers 24 February 1997]: My Department will always consider carefully any information brought to its attention which may be relevant to its regulatory responsibilities for insurance; but it is the Department's policy not to confirm or deny whether it has carried out an investigation into the affairs of particular companies.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) which bodies have regulatory responsibility for the London reinsurance industry and its managing agencies; and by what means they report to Parliament; [16943]

(2) what recent reviews he has conducted of the regulation of United Kingdom managing agents for offshore reinsurers. [16941]

Mr. Nelson [holding answers 24 February 1997]: Reinsurance companies which carry on insurance business in the United Kingdom in the terms of the Insurance Companies Act 1982 are required to be authorised and regulated by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, who is directly accountable to Parliament. Managing agents are not subject to regulation separate from that applied to the reinsurance company or companies they represent. Agents who are registered brokers are, however, subject to control by the Insurance Brokers Registration Council, which is an independent statutory body. There is no requirement on it to report to Parliament but the Secretary of State has responsibility for approving its rules and for the appointment of five of the 17 members of the Council. Members of Lloyd's and Lloyd's managing agents are regulated by the Council of Lloyd's under the Lloyd's Acts 1871 to 1982.

My Department is currently considering what, if any, further measures might be appropriate in relation to the provision of insurance in the UK by overseas reinsurers or insurers which are neither authorised under UK legislation nor entitled to provide insurance in the UK on a services basis on the basis of an authorisation issued in another European Economic Area member state.

Research Councils

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the success rates for applications for project and programme grants to each research council in each year since 1979. [17364]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 24 February 1997]: This information is not available for all councils for some of the earlier years. There has been some increase in the number of grant applications, fuelled by the increase in numbers of researchers in the system, both as a result of the change of status of the "new" universities and increasing numbers of contract researchers drawn into the "old" universities by the growth in research funding in the university system. The success rates by number of grant applications are as follows:

DEFENCE

Range Facilities

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, columns 228–30, if the calculations of income, operating cost and range use were prepared on the same basis for both the Eskmeals and Shoeburyness ranges; and if he will make a statement. [16955]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 25 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your follow-up question about the income, operating cost and range use figures for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness, since as Chief Executive of DERA this is a matter for which I am responsible.

The figures which I gave in my letters of 14 January on these issues were prepared on the same basis.

I hope this is helpful.

Gulf War-related Illnesses

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make available to the House the findings of the further investigation into the advice given to Defence Ministers concerning organophosphate pesticide used during the Gulf war, announced by the Minister of State for the Armed Forces on 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 122. [18140]

Mr. Soames: The further investigation has now been completed. It came to the following conclusions:

(a) The answers to six PQs in 1994 concerning pesticide usage during Operation Granby were incorrect because Ministers were given flawed advice by Service and Civil Service staff, who had obtained and used inaccurate information when preparing the draft answers.

(b) The submission of flawed advice concerning pesticides to Ministers in July 1994 and again in November 1994, together with repeated submissions of the same inaccurate information at later dates, constituted a fundamental failure of the working practices adopted by Service and Civil Service staff within the area of MOD concerned.

(c) As a result of internal confusion about the subject, MOD gave incomplete information to the HCDC in a memorandum dated 9 December 1994 concerning the non-OP pesticides which had been used during Operation Granby.

(d) In the course of 1995, MOD Service and Civil Service staff received a number of indications that during the Gulf War British troops might have obtained locally and also used some OP pesticides, but this information was neither assessed nor followed up properly.

(e) No later than early June 1996, some MOD Service and Civil Service staff knew that OP pesticides had been used more extensively during Operation Granby than had previously been reported and that this new information would embarrass the Department. However, appropriate action was not taken.

(f) Although new information concerning OP pesticide usage during Operation Granby had emerged much earlier, MOD Service and Civil Service staff failed to provide Ministers with appropriate written advice on the subject until 25 September 1996. Thereafter Parliament was informed at the earliest opportunity that incorrect statements had been made.

The investigation also identified an additional occasion, in March 1995, when a ministerial private office received advice which included material relating to possible OP pesticide use in the Gulf war. A memorandum concerning the investigation is being published today and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House, together with a copy of my letter to the Chairman of the Defence Select Committee dated 20 February 1997.

Taken together, the six conclusions constitute serious failures in the formulation of advice within the MOD. I must once again apologise for the way in which flawed advice was presented to Parliament.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on seeking costs in respect of action for compensation for undiagnosed Gulf war-related illnesses taken by ex-service men and women; what plans he has to review that policy in respect of Gulf war veterans ineligible for legal aid; and if he will make a statement. [17675]

Mr. Soames: My Department's general policy is to seek to recover its costs where a case is successfully defended only where claimants are not legally aided. There are no plans to review this policy in respect of Gulf war veterans. However, if illness or injury can be shown—to the satisfaction of a court if necessary—to have resulted from MOD negligence in individual cases which are legally aided, and the same particular circumstances can be shown to apply to non-legally aided claimants, those individuals will not be forced by the MOD to enter into litigation to establish their own right to compensation.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the terms of reference of his organophosphate pesticide investigation team; and if he will make a statement on its work. [17676]

Mr. Soames: I wrote to the right hon. Member on 18 February, enclosing a copy of the terms of reference of the organophosphate pesticide investigation team. A copy of that letter was also placed in the Library of the House.

Pilots (Flying Hours)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average number of hours flown by RAF fast jet pilots in each of the last three calendar years; and how many hours are funded for 1997. [16805]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is shown. Funded hours are calculated on the basis of financial years; total funded hours per pilot for 1996–97 are therefore given.

Aircraft type	Calendar year 1994	1995	1996	Funded in 1996–97
Harrier	203.25	210.89	212.18	232
Jaguar	225.53	201.21	189.89	222
Tornado F3	214.59	211.94	190.09	222
Tornado GR	224.36	222.35	212.93	222
Hawk: 100 Squadron only	n/a	n/a	291	280

The Hawk fleet is primarily used for fast jet pilot student training at RAF Valley. Hours flown by students and instructors are dependent on the length of the training programme. The figures shown above for Hawk refer only to 100 Squadron, which provides a target towing capability; data prior to 1996 are not readily available in the form requested and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average number of hours flown per annum by Royal Navy Sea Harrier pilots in each of the last three calendar years; and how many hours are funded for 1997. [16804]

Mr. Soames: The average annual number of hours flown per pilot by Royal Navy Sea Harrier pilots in each of the last three calendar years is as follows:

1994: 170 hours

1996: 165 hours.

The funded level for financial year 1996–97 was 215 hours. The funded levels for 1997–98 have not yet been finalised.

Joint Service Command and Staff College

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost of providing a joint service command and staff college at Shrivenham. [17056]

Mr. Soames: The estimated cost of contractor-provided permanent facilities and services for the joint service command and staff college at Shrivenham, as proposed by the Defence Management Consortium, is approximately £500 million—undiscounted and VAT inclusive—for a 30-year period. This covers provision of teaching and residential accommodation for some 650 students at a time—to meet a total annual throughput of over 2,000 students—facilities management and some academic support.

Cadets

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current level of funding for the air cadets. [17427]

Mr. Soames: The level of funding for the air cadet organisation for the financial year 1996–97 is £18.735 million.

Submarine Reactor Cores

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been average annual running cost of transporting used submarine reactor cores over the past 10 years. [17635]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The average annual running cost to MOD of transporting used submarine reactor fuel, using used core transport packages prior to 1992, was approximately £200,000 per year. The average cost after that time is higher at approximately £780,000 per year. The cost increase is due both to the smaller capacity of our current fuel transport flasks, and an increase in reactor core movements.

New fuel transport flasks being constructed by British Nuclear Fuels, which are larger than the current design, will be introduced into service at the end of 1998.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress being made towards introducing the new core transport package flasks for the transport of submarine reactor cores. [17634]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer to the hon. Member to the answer I gave on the 6 June 1996, Official Report, columns 521–22, to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell). Satisfactory progress is being made towards introducing the new used core transport package flasks for the transport of submarine reactor cores at the end of 1998.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the location of each of the used reactor cores from his Department's nuclear-powered submarines. [17636]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Currently, 45 used submarine reactor cores are held in long-term storage at BNF plc Sellafield and three are held in temporary storage—one each at Rosyth dockyard, Devonport dockyard and the naval reactor test establishment at Dounreay.

MOD policy is to remove all used submarine reactor cores to long-term storage at BNF plc Sellafield as soon as possible after defuel. The cores currently in temporary storage will be removed at the first available opportunity.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI and (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17611]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The table summarises the number of contracts recorded on my Department's headquarters contracts database for each of the companies and each of the years requested. Because of the way in which the information is recorded, this is shown by financial year ending 31 March, rather than calendar year. I am withholding under exemption 7 of the code of practice on access to government information details of individual contract values and, when there are only a few contracts, total values.

To list each contract individually and research even the broad function of each could be carried out only at disproportionate cost.

	Financial year
	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	[1]1996–97
EDS	58	66	72	47	31
Andersens	9	6	1	nil	2
BMI	nil	1	nil	nil	nil
Capita	nil	1	nil	6	nil
Sema	9	6	6	6	3

[1] To January.

The data do not include contracts placed by MOD agencies. I have asked chief executives to write to the hon. Member separately if they hold relevant information.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 26 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) to your question asking for a list of contracts awarded to EDS, Andersons, BMI, Capita and Sema since 1992 together with the function of the contractor and value of contract in each case.

I am afraid that it is not our practice to give details of individual contracts, either by function or value, as this information is commercially confidential but I list below the numbers of contracts placed by DERA with Anderson, Capita, EDS and Sema since 1992 and the approximate total value of the contracts for each company. DERA has placed no contracts with BMI since 1992.

Company	Number of contracts	Total value £ million
Anderson	2	0.2
Capita	6	0.2
EDS	412	39.0
Sema	126	8.0

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 26 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about contracts awarded to EDS, Andersens, BMI, Capita and Sema since 1992, as this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office.

Of the companies you list the Meterological Office has, since 1992, awarded:-

(a) a software development contract to EDS Defence Ltd valued at £27K, VAT exclusive

(b) a contract for consultancy support for the introduction of a new Management Information System placed with Capita Recruitment, with a value of £72K, VAT exclusive.

I hope this answers your question.

Letter from Michael R. Pack to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 26 February 1997:

1. You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence a Parliamentary Question about contracts awarded by the Ministry of Defence to a number of commercial companies.

2. For the United Kingdom Hydrographic Office Defence Agency, the issues raised fall within the responsibilities delegated to the Chief Executive, Rear Admiral J P Clarke. In the normal course of events, Admiral Clarke would have replied to you personally but he is at present absent from the Office on official duty so I am replying on his behalf.

3. Before 31 March 1996, contracts were not let by the Hydrographic Office but by the appropriate contract branch within the Ministry of Defence. Since becoming a Trading fund on 1 April, however, we have let one small contract with EDS to provide training in a software package for the management of geographic data; and a more substantial contract to provide post design services for the documeni management and geographic management systems themselves. The former is complete; the latter ongoing.

5. As regards the value of the contracts I am sure you appreciate that such information is commercially sensitive.

Ion Exchange Resin

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many modified magnox flasks and resin catch tanks are being used at Rosyth and Devonport to store ion exchange resin. [17633]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Ships Support Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. V. Babington to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 26 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the numbers of modified magnox flasks and resin catch tanks presently being used at Rosyth and Devonport to store ion exchange resin, as this is related to my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

The details you have requested are:

Rosyth Royal Dockyard: Thirty nine resin catch tanks are presently being used;

Devonport Royal Dockyard: Twenty eight resin catch tanks and eleven modified magnox flasks are presently being used.

Territorial Army Centre, Cardiff

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on the recent refurbishment of the Territorial Army centre in central Cardiff; and what compensation arrangement has been negotiated as a result of the changes required by the proposals for the new national stadium. [17411]

Mr. Soames: The total cost of the rebuild of the Territorial Army centre at Park street, Cardiff, which was completed in July 1994, was £2.041 million. In return for our vacating this site to allow for the redevelopment of the national stadium, the Welsh Rugby Union will make provision for facilities for the Army cadet force detachment within the new stadium complex and construct a new TA centre elsewhere within Cardiff. This will be larger than the current site and will, therefore, be capable of housing an additional unit. Its construction will be at no cost to the Ministry of Defence. The Welsh Rugby Union has also indicated that it will provide an advertising hoarding within the national stadium for reserve force recruiting for a period of 10 years.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Grant-maintained Schools

17. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the performance of grant-maintained schools. [16069]

Mr. Forth: The performance of pupils attending grant-maintained schools has improved year on year.

Jobseeker's Allowance

18. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applicants for the jobseeker's allowance have been denied benefit since the inception of the allowance. [16071]

Mr. Forth: An estimated 96,000 claims for jobseeker's allowance have been refused since 7 October 1996.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people currently in receipt of jobseeker's allowance have placed restrictions on their availability for work by virtue of (a) physical and mental limitations and (b) caring responsibilities. [17601]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 26 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about the number of people who are currently claiming Jobseeker's Allowance and who have placed restriction on their availability for work by virtue of physical or mental condition or caring responsibilities.

Unfortunately, we do not hold information on the number of people, with either a physical or mental condition or who have caring responsibilities, who have agreed with an employment adviser a pattern of availability which included restrictions. The only information held is on the number of claims referred to the adjudication authorities where there is a doubt on availability because of a restriction and the number of decisions made.

This information, together with statistics on the other adjudication officer decisions and disallowance rates, is contained in a published document entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officer Decisions". This provides information on all the main entitlement questions arising on claims. The latest information related to the quarter ending 30 September 1996. The first information relating to Jobseeker's Allowance will be in the publication for the quarter ending 31 December 1996. This is expected to be published by the end of March 1997 and copies will be placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what benefit sanction will be imposed on a jobseeker's allowance claimant who is given a jobseeker's direction to apply for a specific part-time vacancy of less than 24 hours per week if (a) he refuses to apply for the vacancy in question, (b) he agrees to apply but is not offered the job and (c) he is offered the job which he then refuses; and if she will make a statement. [17624]

Mr. Forth: A fixed-length sanction of loss of benefit for two weeks—or four weeks if a separate fixed-length sanction has already been imposed within the previous 12 months—will be imposed if, without good cause, a JSA claimant refuses or fails to carry out a reasonable jobseeker's direction to apply for a particular job of less than 24 hours per week. No sanction will be imposed if the jobseeker carries out the direction but is not offered the job, nor if he is offered the job and then refuses it.

Guidance is issued to Employment Service jobcentres that staff should be particularly careful before giving a jobseeker's direction in respect of a job of less than 24 hours a week. Jobseekers should be directed to apply for such jobs only if this would improve their prospects of finding further work, or the job is sufficiently well paid to enable them to leave JSA altogether.

Schools Funding (East Sussex)

19. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on schools funding in East Sussex in 1997–98. [16072]

Mr. Robin Squire: East Susssex's 1997–98 education standard spending assessment is £151.4 million—an above average increase of some £7 million, or 4.8 per cent. It is up to the authority to ensure that the increase in spending power that we are providing reaches its schools.

Class Sizes

20. Mr. Brian David Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the change in the number of children in primary classes of over 30 since 1992; and what is the current figure as a percentage of all children in primary classes. [16073]

Mr. Robin Squire: From 1992 to 1996, the number of children in single-teacher primary classes of over 30 rose by 358,000. In 1996, 31.8 per cent. of primary children were in such classes, compared with 35.3 per cent. in 1979.

Grammar Schools

21. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make it her policy to increase the number of grammar schools. [16074]

Mr. Forth: The Government's policy is to encourage more grammar schools wherever parents want them, because that will promote choice, diversity and higher standards.

28. Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received regarding the future of grammar schools. [16082]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend receives a range of views on this as on other matters. The Government welcome the high standards which many grammar schools achieve. They are committed to retaining the existing grammar schools, and supporting the development of new ones, as an important element in promoting diversity and choice for parents.

School Repairs

22. Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to tackle the repairs backlog in schools. [16075]

Mrs. Gillan: It is for local education authorities and school governors to assess the need for maintenance work in respect of school premises which they own and maintain.

Employment Policy

23. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the implications for employment policy of the changing balance between part-time and full-time work. [16076]

Mr. Forth: Both full and part-time jobs are increasing. We shall continue with the policies under which 900,000 more jobs have been created and unemployment has fallen by over 1 million since 1992.

Dyslexia

24. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provisions she has made for the proper teaching of children with dyslexia. [16077]

Mrs. Gillan: The special educational needs code of practice offers guidance on the assessment of a dyslexic child. The Department supports training for teachers of dyslexic pupils through the grant for education support and training programme and is consulting over the national curriculum for initial teacher training, which has a particular focus on literacy.

School Transport

25. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from education authorities on the provision of school transport under the recent standard spending assessment settlements; and if she will make a statement. [16078]

Mrs. Gillan: None.

Capital Borrowing Allocation (Birmingham)

26. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the capital borrowing allocation to Birmingham (a) for 1997–98 and (b) 1996–97. [16079]

Mrs. Gillan: Birmingham's annual capital guideline for education for 1997–98 is £1.06 million, and for 1996–97 is £5.38 million.

In addition, the authority has received a supplementary credit approval of £0.1 million for 1997–98, and £1.28 million for 1996–97.

School Discipline

27. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to ensure that high standards of discipline are upheld in schools. [16081]

Mr. Forth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Mr. Thompson).

School Performance (Harrow)

29. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the performance of maintained schools in the Harrow East division of the London borough of Harrow in respect of the league table system and exam and assessment measurements. [16083]

Mrs. Gillan: The 1996 secondary school performance tables show that 53 per cent. of pupils attending the six maintained secondary schools in East Harrow obtained five or more A*–C GCSE grades, against an England average of 44.5 per cent. National curriculum assessment results are not published centrally for individual schools, although key stage 2 results will be published shortly in the primary school performance tables.

Premature Retirement (Education)

30. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards premature retirement in educational institutions. [16085]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government's policy is that education employers should be accountable for the cost of their decisions on premature retirement. The Government intend premature retirement to continue to be available as a management tool, and have made funds available for that purpose.

Grammar School Leavers (Unemployment)

31. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the number of people who have left grammar schools in the last three years who are registered as unemployed. [16087]

Mr. Paice: The Department does not collect the information requested.

Assisted Places Scheme

32. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the assisted places scheme in enabling poorer parents to provide their children with a private education; and if she will make a statement. [16088]

Mrs. Gillan: The assisted places scheme gives able children from low-income families the opportunity of an independent education that they would not otherwise have had.

Jobseeker's Allowance

33. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the impact of the jobseeker's allowance on rural areas; and if she will make a statement. [16089]

Mr. Forth: We have commissioned a full evaluation of JSA policy from the centre for research in social policy at Loughborough university. The Employment Service itself will be carrying out local monitoring of delivery.

Lone Mothers

34. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to extend job opportunities for lone mothers. [16090]

Mrs. Gillan: A flexible labour market without unnecessary regulations creates job opportunities for all groups, and the United Kingdom has more of its people in work than any other major EU country.

Unemployment

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the level of unemployment as measured by the claimant count. [16068]

Mr. Forth: Claimant unemployment has fallen by over 1.1 million since December 1992.

Permanent Jobs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to encourage the creation of more permanent jobs. [16091]

Mr. Forth: This Government will continue with the policies of reducing burdens on business and creating the framework for economic growth, which have resulted in the creation of nearly 900,000 jobs and a reduction in unemployment of over 1 million since the recovery began in December 1992.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many questions were tabled for reply by her Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16806]

Mr. Robin Squire: A list of the number of written and oral parliamentary questions answered by the Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information system unit, has been placed in the Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–92 are not available.

The rest of the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Education (Humberside)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment the Office for Standards in Education has made of the quality of education delivered by the former Humberside county council, relative to the national average. [17045]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is primarily a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools. However, I understand that the former Humberside county council was not among the authorities which have been reviewed by Ofsted, and it has not therefore made any assessment of this kind.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from her Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17061]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following information details the number of items stolen or otherwise unaccounted for during the 12-month period from 1 February 1996 to 31 January 1997:

	Items of miscellaneous equipment/furniture not accounted for	Items of IT equipment stolen	Items of IT equipment not accounted for	Total value £	Items valued: £5,000 or over
DfEE HQ	2	6	1	8,845	nil
Employment service	0	269	0	484,000	4 network fileservers

Computer Software Courses

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will conduct a survey of employers' attitudes to the quality of computer software courses available at different educational institutions. [17645]

Mr. Robin Squire: No. This is the responsibility of the institutions and examining bodies concerned.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what information she has collated on the number of children excluded from (a) primary and (b) secondary schools (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) in other OECD countries; and if she will make a statement. [17662]

Mr. Forth: The latest figures on exclusion from schools in England relate to the school year 1994–95. These show that 1,365 pupils permanently excluded from primary schools, and 9,197 from secondary schools; a further 522 were excluded from special schools.

Data on exclusions from schools in other parts of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. Information on exclusions in other OECD countries is not available.

Teachers (Staffordshire)

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers were employed by Staffordshire county council in each of the past 15 years. [17509]

Mr. Forth: The number of teachers employed by Staffordshire LEA are shown in the following table. Staff in grant-maintained schools are excluded.

Full-time equivalent (fte) numbers of teachers in the LEA maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special education sector

Early Retirement (Teachers)

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers in East Sussex retired before the age of 60 years other than for reasons of health or disability in each of the past six years. [17598]

Mrs. Gillan: Teachers from the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special sector in East Sussex, who took premature retirement on grounds other than ill-health or disability from 1990–91 to 1995–96, are shown in the following table.

Financial year	[1]Number of premature retirements

Jobmatch Scheme

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of (a) the costs and (b) the numbers gaining if the national jobmatch scheme for under 25-year-olds was available on the same basis to (1) unemployed people of any age who have been unemployed for (i) at least six months, (ii) at least one year and (iii) at least two years and (2) unemployed people over the age of 50 years who have been unemployed for (A) at least six months, (B) at least one year and (C) at least two years. [17600]

Mr. Forth: The jobmatch programme is an intensive measure designed to help very long-term unemployed people to leave unemployment for a part-time job. We have developed a range of measures designed to meet the diverse needs of unemployed people, with the most intensive such as jobmatch targeted on those who need the most help to get back to work. It would not be a cost-effective use of the taxpayer's resources to make jobmatch available to shorter-term unemployed people.

From April, jobmatch will be available to those young people aged 18 to 24 who have been unemployed for two years or more. We estimate that the costs of making jobmatch available, on the same basis, to all people unemployed for two years or more would be some £47 million in 1997–98; and the costs of making it available to those aged over 50 who have been unemployed for two years or more would be some £11 million in 1997–98.

It is not possible accurately to estimate the programme costs of a national jobmatch scheme for groups of people who have been unemployed for less than two years. That is because jobmatch has been piloted only among very long-term unemployed people, and it cannot be assumed that take-up of the scheme among shorter-term unemployed people would be the same.

Hearing-impaired Children (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools in each London borough provide specific teaching for children with hearing difficulties; and if she will make a statement. [17589]

Mrs. Gillan: There are five special schools maintained by local education authorities in London which cater specifically for children with hearing impairments—one school in each of Camden, Haringey, Lambeth, Waltham Forest and Wandsworth. The majority of hearing-impaired children are educated in mainstream schools, with specialist support. Records of this provision are not maintained centrally.

LEAs have a duty to place children with special educational needs in mainstream schools where this is compatible with the wishes of parents, the needs of the child, the needs of other children at the school, and with the efficient use of resources. The Government also recognise a continuing need for special school provision where that is necessary and where parents want it.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many new nursery voucher places for four-year-olds have been created in each of the four pilot local education authority areas; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [16139]

Mr. Robin Squire: The nursery education voucher scheme has already stimulated an encouraging expansion of places in the phase 1 areas, as described in paragraphs 8.21 to 8.25 of the Department's report on phase 1, copies of which have been placed in the Library. I expect that expansion to continue in phase 2.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice she plans to issue to pre-school providers on the admission of four-year-olds who do not have a nursery education voucher from April 1997. [16056]

Mr. Squire: The Department has sent advice to all providers who will participate in the nursery education voucher scheme from April, and additional guidance to LEAs and maintained primary schools.

Foreign Language Teaching

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to encourage the teaching of foreign languages in primary schools; and if she will make a statement. [16080]

Mrs. Gillan: We have promised no further change to the national curriculum until 2000. Primary schools which have the necessary staffing and other resources are free to teach foreign languages now, and many do. For the present, our priority is to ensure that all secondary schools pupils learn a modern language to a worthwhile level of competence. This is where available resources must be directed for the time being.

Your second and third questions (359 and 363, tabled on 20 February) asked, what have been the excess mortality rates in Northern Ireland for each of the last 10 years expressed (a) in excess numbers and (b) as percentages, and, what have been the excess winter mortality rates in Northern Ireland for each of the past 10 years in terms of (a) excess numbers and (b) percentages for (i) people over the age of 65 years, (ii) single parent families, (iii) people in receipt of income support, (iv) people with disabilities and (v) all other people not included in the above.

The mortality rates requested are shown in Tables 2, 3 and 4 below. For the purpose of this exercise winter has been taken to mean the four month period extending form December to March.

HEALTH

Oral Contraceptives (Safety)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the report on the role played by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in his announcements on the safety of third generation combined oral contraceptives in October 1995. [17141]

Mr. Malone: The announcement to which the hon. Member refers was made by the Committee on Safety of Medicines. The role of the CSM is as an expert advisory committee to the licensing authority, as embodied in the Medicines Act 1968 There is no report on its role in the announcement. The advice given by the CSM in October 1995 still stands and is published in the British National Formulary.

Lariam

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 February, Official Report, column 284 what proposals have been made by the Medicines Control Agency to end the delay in reporting full details of the degree of severity of side effects of the drug Lariam; [17208]

(2) if he will list the terms of reference and membership of the Malaria Advisory Committee; what reports have been made to the Medicines Control Agency and his Department since 1990 by this committee (a) involving and (b) not involving the use of the drug Lariam; and when the latest malaria guidelines were published by this committee. [17206]

Mr. Malone: The guidelines of the use of malaria prophylaxis are prepared by an informal group of experts who have no formal terms of reference or fixed membership. The group does not report to the Medicines Control Agency The guidelines are aimed at health professionals and have been published in the British Medical Journal—most recently, 1993; 306:1247–1252 and 1995; 310: 709–7144—where they are available to all those with an interest. These reports include advice on the use of mefloquine, Lariam, and give the names of those who have collaborated in drawing up the guidelines. Copies of the journal are in the Library.

Residential Care (Coventry)

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, columns 161–62, if he will ascertain the occupancy rates of local authority homes, voluntary sector residential homes and private sector residential homes in Coventry; and if he will henceforth publish data on occupancy separately for private and voluntary sector nursing homes. [17055]

Mr. Burns: The latest information with which to calculate occupancy rates of residential homes was published in "Residential Accommodation Statistics 1996"—Statistical Bulletin 1996/25—and is summarised in the table. Data collected centrally do not separately identify private and voluntary sector nursing homes.

Registered beds, occupied beds and occupancy rates in residential and nursing homes in Coventry, at 31 March 1996

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17064]

Mr. Horam: For the purposes of the table, items of equipment and furniture stolen and otherwise unaccounted for are combined because it is not possible in all cases to distinguish one from the other. There are no items valued at £5,000 or more. The Department constantly reviews its security measures in the light of losses.

Vacant Consultant Posts

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant posts were vacant in the Northern and Yorkshire regions in each specialty according to the medical and dental work force census in September 1994, 1995 and 1996. [17486]

Mr. Malone: Information on hospital medical and dental consultant vacant posts by region and by speciality for 1994 and 1995 is available in "Hospital Medical Staff—England and Wales: Consultant, Staff Grade, Senior Registrars and Senior House officers—Regional Whole Time Equivalent and Vacant Posts, Table R5", copies of which are available in the Library. Data for 1996 will be available later this year.

NHS Audits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS audit activity was devoted to probity audits in (a) 1990 and (b) 1996. [17685]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not held centrally. The examination of probity forms one part of the work carried out by internal and external auditors, and cannot readily be quantified.

NHS Waiting Lists (Patients off Sick)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of days patients are off sick while waiting for treatment on the NHS in each of the last five years. [17863]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not collected centrally.

NHS Hospitals

Sir George Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS hospitals there were in the United Kingdom in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; and how many cottage hospitals there were in each of those years. [17532]

Mr. Horam: The information is not collected centrally.

Blood Pressure Control Products

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the expenditure per head of population in each health district on blood pressure control products prescribed by GPs and recorded in the prescribing analyses and costs systems for the last three years for which information is available. [17537]

Mr. Malone: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Strokes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the incidence of (a) stroke and (b) death from stroke in each health district in England in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [17597]

Mr. Horam: Information on deaths from stroke—cerebrovascular disease—in 1993, 1994 and 1995 for each health authority in England is published by the Department of Health in the "Public Health Common Data set 1996" copies of which have been placed in the Library. Data on the precise incidence of stroke are not collected centrally.

TRANSPORT

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16791]

Mr. Bowis: A list of the number of written and oral parliamentary questions answered by my Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, has been placed in the Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available.

The remainder of the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Greenwich Exhibition Site

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the additional costs of constructing the station at the Greenwich exhibition site so that it can cater for visitors to the exhibition. [17646]

Mr. Bowis: The additional road traffic arising from the development of the millennium exhibition site requires the access road to the station to be constructed to dual carriageway standard, at an additional cost of £700,000. This cost will be met from developer contributions. No design changes to the station itself are expected, based on current forecasts for demand arising from the exhibition.

Coaches and Minibuses (Seat Belts)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review his policy in respect of children's travel on school trips on coaches built prior to 1988; and if he will make a statement. [17687]

Mr. Bowis: From 10 February next year, coaches first used before 1 October 1988 will have to be provided with seat belts if they take children on organised trips. These older coaches have been allowed an extra year to have belts fitted for children because it was recognised that some of them would require extensive strengthening work in order to meet the new requirements. Minibuses and coaches already have one of the best safety records of any form of road transport and the new seat belt regulations will improve this even further. I have no plans to review the policy.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce an inspection system to ensure that seat belts used in coaches and minibuses comply with EEC directive EEC/76/115. [17688]

Mr. Bowis: No. Not all seat belts in coaches and minibuses have to comply with the seat belt anchorage directive EEC/76/115.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the inspection regime in respect of recent seat belt legislation applicable to coaches and minibuses. [17689]

Mr. Bowis: We take the issue of the adequacy of seat belt installations very seriously and have issued technical advice on what we consider to be "best practice" for seat belt installers. We have also stressed the importance of good installation in advice we have issued for users and operators.

I have decided that these belts should be examined as a part of the annual MOT test and we shall be consulting on the details of this. I have also decided that the Vehicle Inspectorate will include the condition of minibus and coach seat belts in the other enforcement checks they carry out during the year.

Ms Walley: To ask the secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce a requirement for new minibuses and van conversions to be fitted with seat belt anchorage systems which have passed Vehicle Certification Agency witnessed teats to M2 level. [17690]

Mr. Bowis: Manufacturers of line built vehicles already have seat belt anchorages approved using a destructive test on an example of their vehicle. Such an approval requirement would be inappropriate for low-volume or specialist conversions.

Road Network (Dual Carriageways)

Mr. Garrett: To ask the secretary of State for Transport how may towns and cities in England with a population of between 75,000 and 100,000 are connected by dual carriageway to the national motorway network; and if he will list them. [17310]

Mr. Watts: There are 30 towns and cities with a population of between 75,000 and 100,000 that are connected via a dual carriageway to the national motorway network. They are:

Ashford
Barnsley
Birkenhead
Burnley
Cheltenham
Chester
Chesterfield
Crawley
Dartford
Darlington
Gateshead
Gillingham
Gloucester
Gravesham
Grimsby
Hove
Lewes
Redditch
Rochdale
Salford
Scunthorpe
Stevenage
Stockton
Taunton
Wakefield
Watford
Welwyn Hatfield
Wigan
Worcester
Worthing

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the roads in England which have been designated part of the trans-European networks which are not currently dualled; and what percentage these non-dualled roads are of the total mileage of the trans-European networks within England. [17311]

Mr. Watts: The trans-European road network within the United Kingdom is 4,111 miles long. Of that length, 1,220 miles—29.7 per cent.—are single carriageway. Figures for the constituent parts of the United Kingdom are not readily available.

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many towns and cities in England with a larger population than that of Norwich are not connected by dual carriageway to the national motorway network; and if he will list them. [17312]

Mr. Watts: There are two towns with a population larger than that of Norwich which are not connected by dual carriageway to the national motorway network. They are Huddersfield and Poole. The trunk road programme includes schemes to complete the dualling of the A11 to Norwich.

North London Railway Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the total planned investment in track renewal, bridge repairs and station refurbishment on the Barking to Gospel Oak branch of the North London line; [15997]

(2) what reports he has received on the condition of bridges on the Barking to Gospel Oak branch of the North London line; and if he will make a statement. [15998]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 14 February 1997]: These are operational matters for Railtrack. However, Railtrack has confirmed that the bridge over the River Lea at South Tottenham was closed for safety-related repair work during the period 7 to 10 February. Further information can be obtained from Railtrack.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Correspondence

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the hon. Member for North-East Derbyshire will receive a reply to his letter written in response to the Minister's letter, reference C95/23361/13551. [16917]

Mr. Sproat: A reply will be sent to the hon. Member shortly.

National Lottery Grants

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list for each county in England and Wales and each region of Scotland, the total amount of national lottery grants awarded, expressed as an amount per head of population. [15245]

Mr. Sproat: To date, 12,657 awards totalling more than £1.9 billion have been announced for projects in England, Wales and Scotland. The list for amount per head of population is as follows:

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the contracts awarded by her Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992, and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17612]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage has awarded one contract to Sema Group from 1993, for outsourced IT service provision, valued at about £1 million per annum, and one non-IT consultancy contract to Capita in 1994 worth about £30,000. The Department has not awarded any contracts to the other companies mentioned.

University and College Sport

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many universities and colleges have applied for lottery funding in order to improve their provision for sport. [17406]

Mr. Sproat: To date, 96 applications have been made for a total of £162 million. These figures include successful, unsuccessful, withdrawn and lapsed applications, and those currently under consideration.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many universities and colleges have successfully applied for lottery funding in order to improve their provision for sport. [17407]

Mr. Sproat: To date, the national lottery distributing bodies have announced 43 awards for the provision of sport in universities and colleges, for a total of £26.2 million.

British Academy of Sport

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the current position of the planning of the British Academy of Sport. [17413]

Mr. Sproat: We announced on 25 February that the preferred site for the British Academy of Sport will be chosen from three contenders: the Central Consortium, the Heyford Consortium and the Sheffield Consortium. These proposals will now be considered in more detail by the United Kingdom Sports Council and my Department.

WALES

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15926]

Mr. Hague: There is no specific legislation for minimum age requirements which applies only to Wales.

"Government Expenditure and Revenue, Wales, 1994–95"

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a breakdown of the £3.5 billion described as "All Other Revenues" raised by the Government in Wales in section 6 of the Welsh Office publication "Government Expenditure and Revenue, Wales, 1994–95", allocating the revenues to the headings set out in appendix B of that document. [16270]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Estimated general Government receipts, Wales, 1994–95
"Other revenues" by source

	£ million
Corporation tax	924
Capital gains tax	39
Inheritance tax	50
Stamp duties	65
Petrol, derv, etc.	562

Estimated general Government receipts, Wales, 1994–95
"Other revenues" by source

	£ million
Cigarettes and tobacco	388
Alcoholic drink	238
Betting and gaming	62
Customs duties	84
Agricultural levies	7
Air passenger duty	4
Motor vehicle excise duty	174
Other taxes and royalties	244
Interest and dividend receipts	213
Gross trading surpluses and rent	223
Imputed charge for capital consumption	176
Other receipts (including insurance premium tax)	52
Total	3,505

Powered Wheelchairs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make available powered wheelchairs to all those disabled in Wales who request them. [16620]

Mr. Hague: An additional £500,000 will be available each year from 1 April 1997 to provide indoor-outdoor powered wheelchairs. Up to 300 will be provided in 1997–98. The artificial limb and appliance service will be consulting relevant bodies about the criteria for their issue.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will inform family doctors in Wales that they should draw to the attention of their patients' possible entitlement to disability living allowance; and if he will make a statement. [16624]

Mr. Hague: Family doctors are independent contractors—responsible for providing general medical services only. However, family doctors have access to a wide range of information about possible entitlement to social security benefits through leaflets, which are available in both English and Welsh, and may if they wish bring these to the attention of patients.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many community hospitals there were in the NHS in Wales in April 1992; what is the current number; and what will be the numbers, on the basis of current plans, in April 1998. [16626]

Mr. Hague: There were 93 NHS community hospitals—excluding major acute, psychiatric and specialist hospitals—in the NHS in Wales in April 1992, the number at present is 88. It is not possible to speculate on the number of community facilities that will exist in 1998.

Inward Investment (South-west Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what incentives he proposes for companies to locate new projects in (a) the south-west of Wales and (b) the western part of the coalfield valleys; and if he will make a statement. [16625]

Mr. Hague: Significant incentives are already available to companies wishing to locate in these areas through regional selective assistance, the Welsh Development Agency's various programmes and its promotion of the area for inward investment.

I want to see the benefits of our success in attracting inward investment spread more widely and have therefore announced that I shall be setting new and more demanding targets for the agency with the aim of securing a greater proportion of jobs and investment in those areas of Wales which are outside the eastern M4 and A55 corridors. I have also said that I will be asking the agency, within European Commission and other limits, to recognise the extra cost of locating in those areas.

Ysbyty Glan Clwyd Cancer Facility

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of the cancer facility for Ysbyty Glan Clwyd; and what additional finance will be made available by the Welsh Office to the North Wales health authority to meet these costs. [16616]

Mr. Hague: The capital cost of the centre is estimated at £20 million and will be met by the Welsh Office.

North Wales health authority estimates that, over the first 17 years of operation, the revenue cost of the cancer centre at Ysbyty Glan Clwyd will be £92.3 million, at 1996–97 prices. The Welsh Office will contribute an additional £36.9 million through revenue support and capital charge funding.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16787]

Mr. Hague: A list of the number of written and oral parliamentary questions answered by my Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the POLIS unit, has been placed in the House Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available.

The rest of the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency set up by his Department since the start of April 1992. [16969]

Mr. Hague: No executive agencies for which the Welsh Office has sole or lead responsibility have been set up from that date.

Bryn Y Neuadd Hospital (Advocacy Schemes)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will re-establish direct Welsh Office funding for advocacy schemes at Bryn Y Neuadd long-stay hospital for those with learning difficulties; and if he will make a statement on the future of the schemes. [16958]

Mr. Hague: Local authorities have for some time had flexibility in determining which local projects should receive funding under the Welsh mental handicap strategy. In 1997–98 we are beginning the process of transferring financial accountability for these funds to authorities. This underlines our view that decisions as to which projects for people with a learning disability should be supported from the funds available are best taken at the local level. This is not a principle with which I would now wish to interfere.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest planned expenditure for Health in Wales for 1997–98; and how this figure differs in real terms from that planned for 1997–98 when the figure was first included in the Welsh Office forward financial programme. [17187]

Mr. Hague: Planned expenditure for 1997–98 for health and personal social services was first included in the Welsh Office departmental report 1995–96 to 1997–98 (Cm 2815). This was £2,321 million at 1995–96 prices and including forecast gross domestic product inflation as at November 1994. The 1997–98 provision for health and personal social services is £2.368 million at 1997–98 prices, including forecast GDP inflation as at December 1996. On a common price basis, 1997–98 provision represents a real-terms increase of £53 million over the earlier plans figure.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17069]

Mr. Hague: For the Welsh Office and its agency the information is:

	Non IT		IT material
	Number	Value	Number	Value
(a) Items of equipment and furniture stolen:
1996–97	3	£8,778.03	nil	—
(b) Items of equipment and furniture unaccounted for:
1996–97	3	£138.11	nil	—

There were no individual items valued at £5,000 or more.

River Dee Estuary

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the environmental protection measures he has taken in respect of the River Dee estuary. [17533]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The River Dee estuary has been classified as a special protection area under the EC wild birds directive in recognition of its internationally important populations of wintering and passage wildfowl, and designated as a wetland of international importance under the Ramsar convention.

Power Station Vapour Plumes (Deeside)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact on Deeside of power station vapour plumes; and if he will make a statement. [17507]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None. The regulation of emissions from power stations is the responsibility of the Environment Agency.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cash Limits

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes are proposed to the cash limit for class III vote 2, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for 1996–97. [18138]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The cash limit for class III vote 2 for 1996–97 will be reduced by £20,000,000 from £912,586,000 to £892,586,000 to offset increased non-cash limit expenditure for class III vote 1—the Intervention Board executive agency. This reduction comes from a mixture of savings on BSE-related schemes in the current financial year.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Policy Initiatives

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security to which policy initiative he has devoted most funding in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement on progress with each initiative. [15243]

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's priorities are: to ensure that the overall cost of delivering the social security programme does not outstrip the nation's ability to pay; to bear down on fraud and abuse; to focus benefits on those who need them most; to improve incentives to work and save; and to encourage personal responsibility.

In order to meet these priorities, the following key initiatives have been launched over the last five years.

The Child Support Agency was launched in April 1993 to ensure both parents take financial responsibility for their children whenever they can afford to do so and is now securing consistently higher levels of maintenance for many thousands of lone parents.

Incapacity benefit was introduced in April 1995 to simplify the structure of provision for the sick and disabled and improve the targeting of resources on the long-term sick. The reforms are expected to reduce benefit expenditure by over £2 billion in the long term.

In July 1995, my right hon. Friend launched the security strategy to combat benefit fraud, putting new emphasis on prevention and deterrence whilst continuing to strengthen detection measures. The strategy has produced year on year record savings and, under the "spend to save" initiative in the Budget, we expect to save a total of £7 billion over the next three years.

The Pensions Act 1995 introduced major reforms to both state and private pensions. The equalisation of state pension age at 65 for men and women will strike the right balance between working population and pensioners. The reforms in private pension provision, most of which will come into force in April, will improve the security of pension funds without placing excessive burdens on employers, and strengthen the whole system of pension provision.

Jobseeker's allowance was introduced in October 1996 to help people back into work by providing more assistance in their search for a job and work incentives such as the back to work bonus, and to target resources on those most in need.

The Disability Discrimination Act 1995 is the first legislation of its kind anywhere in Europe. From 2 December 1996, the Act makes it unlawful for an employer with 20 or more staff—employers with fewer than this number are exempt from the Act's employment provisions—unjustifiably to treat a disabled employee or prospective employee less favourably than other people for a reason relating to his or her disability and for service providers to deny disabled people access to their services. The Act also creates new powers to set minimum access standards for new buses, taxis, trains and trams. The Act also established the National Disability Council to advise the Government on matters relating to the elimination of discrimination against disabled people and the operation of the Act.

A three-year pilot of the earnings top-up scheme was launched in October 1996 to help people without dependant children enter and remain in work. We are also investing £20 million in our "parent plus" initiative which, from April, will offer help and advice to lone parents who want to work. A range of options will be tested over three years, including the involvement of the private sector.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the number gaining and (b) the annual cost of extending payments of incapacity benefit for four weeks once a claimant has found a job. [15796]

Mr. Burt: Information on which to base such an estimate will not be available until early 1998 when results are due from the current survey of people leaving incapacity benefit.

Benefits (Effects of Study Rule)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the annual cost and (b) the numbers gaining, broken down by benefit for (i) under-19-year-olds, (ii) those between 19 years and 25 years and (iii) over-25-year-olds of allowing a 21 hours per week study rule across all means-tested contributory and non-contributory benefits. [15868]

Mr. Roger Evans: There is insufficient information on which to base an estimate.

Allowing a 21-hour study rule would affect only the income-related benefits and both the income-based and contribution-based routes into jobseeker's allowance because other benefits already allow study of up to 21 hours without loss of entitlement, or place no restrictions on hours of study generally.

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15920]

Mr. Burt: The minimum age at which social security benefits become payable, and liability for national insurance contributions commences, is usually 16 years. Other minimum ages are given in the table.

Benefit description	Minimum age (years, unless stated otherwise)
Category A and B retirement pension; graduated retirement benefit	65 (men)
	60 (women)
Category C and D retirement pension	80
Age addition	80
Widow's pension	45
Attendance allowance	65

Benefit description	Minimum age (years, unless stated otherwise)
Guardian's allowance	None
Earnings top-up[2]	18
Council tax benefit	18

[1] For income-based jobseeker's allowance 16 to 17-year-olds have no entitlement to benefit as such because the Government guarantee a place on training or in education. Certain vulnerable 16 to 17-year-olds are able to claim under the severe hardship provisions.
[2] Earnings top-up is being piloted in eight areas of the country, for three years from October 1996. It is an income-related benefit for those without dependent children (single people and couples) who work 16 hours a week or more.

Housing and Council Tax Benefits

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on representations received by the Social Security Advisory Committee about the changes announced on 26 November 1996 in housing benefit and council tax benefit; and when he expects to announce his conclusions on this consultation. [16170]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Social Security Advisory Committee will be reporting by the end of this month on the housing benefit changes which were announced on 26 November 1996. We will consider carefully the report before taking final decisions.

Free School Meals

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the number gaining if free school meals were extended to those in receipt of family credit. [16672]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Cost and number gaining from extending entitlement to free school meals to families receiving family credit 1997–98

Estimated cost	£150 million
Number of families gaining	540,000
Number of dependants gaining	1 million

1. Costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million.
2. Gainers are rounded to the nearest 5,000

Income Support

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what has been the number and value of (a) overpayments and (b) underpayments of income support in each year since its introduction; and what projections he has made of future errors; [17524]

(2) what action has been taken to correct incorrect income support payments; and what amount has been (a) recovered, and (b) compensated; [17525]

(3) if he will list his Department's estimate of the extent of incorrect income support payments by (a) region and (b) area. [17526]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 25 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what has been the number and value of (a) over-payments and (b) under-payments of Income Support (IS) in each year since its introduction; and what projections he has made of future errors; what action has been taken to correct incorrect IS payments; and what amount has been (a) recovered, and (b) compensated; and if he will list his Department's estimate of the extent of incorrect IS payments by (a) region and (b) area.

The number and value of over-payments and under-payments of IS in each year since its introduction and future projections are shown at Appendix A.

Incorrect IS payments are identified and corrected by means of routine checks and case-reviews, or in response to customer queries and appeals.

In addition to routine procedures outlined above, there have been a number of special exercises, both national and local, to identify and correct errors made in specific categories of cases. Two major exercises for which specific records have been kept are a scrutiny of all mortgage cases and as a result of this exercise £77,865,018 million was recovered and £7,640,614 refunded to customers; and a scrutiny of live cases with potential entitlement to Severe Disability Premium and as a result of this exercise arrears of approximately £90 million were paid to customers.

Since April 1991, the total of IS overpayments recovered is £345,180,580. These figures apply to overpayments resulting from a variety of causes, including fraud and customer error. Overpayments arising solely from official error are not normally recovered.

Compensation is given for many reasons including misleading advice and delayed payment of benefit. Records were not kept prior to the inception of the Benefits Agency in April 1991. Since April 1991, the Agency has issued compensation of £18,659,361.87 to IS customers over and above normal benefit entitlement.

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

The estimate of the extent of incorrect IS payments by (a) region and (b) area is not available in the format requested. Information is available by Benefits Agency Area Directorates and Territories not by regions and is shown at Appendix B.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

[1] These figures include income support errors, classed by the National Audit Office, as "non-cash" errors, which represent no overall financial loss or gain to the department, as they are offset by under or overpayments of another benefit. Figures for subsequent years exclude non-cash errors.

Figures for 1988–89 to 1995–96 are National Audit Office estimates. Figures for 1996–97 are a benefits agency projection.

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the conclusion of his review of income support direct payments announced on 19 July. [17970]

Mr. Lilley: I have completed my review of direct payments for fuel and water, which included consultation with over 60 interested groups including the regulators, utility companies and consumer groups.

I have concluded that the direct payments scheme continues to play an important role in protecting benefit recipients who might otherwise be at risk of having their fuel or water supply disconnected, and for whom no alternative payment methods are suitable, but it is clear that the scheme is used by some people who are capable of making their own arrangements with the utility company. Those who are capable of managing their own financial affairs should be encouraged to do so. I therefore intend to maintain the scheme for the foreseeable future, as a last resort measure to avoid disconnection, but to make more explicit the circumstances whereby direct payments remain appropriate.

I intend to introduce amending regulations to define more clearly the eligibility conditions for the scheme, and to agree with each utility industry a new code of practice on the application of the new rules.

Copies of the report of my review are available in the Library.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate for newly retired (a) pensioners and (b) pensioner couples in 1990–91, 1992 and 1994–95 (i) average investment income by quintile and by decile, (ii) average occupational pension income by quintile and by decile, (iii) average personal pension income by quintile and by decile, (iv) average state earnings-related pension scheme income by quintile and by decile and (v) average income from all sources by quintile and by decile. [17474]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

All recently retired pensioner units average income breakdown by quintile

Income source	Quintile 1 1990–91 £	1992 £	'1994–95 £	Quintile 2 1990–91 £	1992 £	'1994–95 £	Quintile 3 1990–91 £	1992 £	'1994–95 £

' Denotes a small sample size these estimates should be used with particular caution.

1. The figures provided are subject to statistical variability and should be used with caution.

2. All incomes quoted are rounded to the nearest 10p, at July 1994 prices. All average amounts are means except where otherwise stated. Components may not sum, due to rounding.

3. A pensioner unit is defined as a single person over state pension age or a couple where the man, defined as the head, is over SPA. A recently retired pensioner unit is defined as a pensioner unit where the head of the benefit unit is less than five years older than SPA.

4. Due to inadequate sample sizes, information cannot be given for recently retired pensioners by decile groups and recently retired pensioner couples for 1992 and 1994–95.

5. The family expenditure survey does not separately identify income from either personal pensions or state earnings-related pensions. Any personal pension details are recorded as investment income.

6. Quintiles have been constructed based on the equivalised before housing costs net income distribution. This is consistent with table 5 of "The Pensioners' Income Series 1994–95."

7. Comparisons of estimates from different years may not give reliable results. It is recommended that these estimates are used to indicate trends over time and that year on year comparisons should be avoided.

Divorcees' Pension Rights

Sir Roger Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish his proposals for the treatment of pension rights on divorce. [18137]

Mr. Lilley: The Government published a Green Paper on this topic in July 1996. We promised that, following the consultation period, a White Paper would be published in the spring. I have today published the White Paper "Pension rights on Divorce" (Cm 3564). Copies are available in the Library.

Social Fund

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to make changes to the administration of the discretionary social fund. [17969]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is introducing minor amendments to his directions and guidance on the help available from the discretionary social fund. These changes, which will take effect from 7 April, include amendments in consequence of the introduction of the Housing Act 1996 and the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996, in England and Wales, and the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. They also include a range of other minor improvements, the need for which we have identified in the course of our routine monitoring of the social fund.

Details of these changes have been placed in the Library.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Courts (Induction Loop Systems)

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many courts in England and Wales provide induction loop systems for people with hearing impairments; and what steps his Department has taken to raise awareness in the courts of the special needs of dual-sensory-impaired people. [17117]

Mr. Streeter: There are 40 courts in the Court Service with induction loop or infra-red systems for people with hearing impairments. Our records do not enable us to identify separately how any magistrates courts have induction loop systems, but we have provided grant funding to allow at least 50 courts to have induction loop or infra-red systems for people with hearing impairments.

Through various building guides and published standards, we have made staff, local authorities and magistrates courts committees aware of the features to be included in new buildings and, subject to building constraints and funding availability, in older buildings, to meet the requirements of disabled people. Training courses for all new managers in the Court Service include sessions on disability awareness and managers are expected to raise these issues among their staff. Each court has customer liaison officer who is available to help disabled court users. The Court Service is currently producing an action plan to meet the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Under section 22A(6) of the Justices of the Peace Act 1979, all magistrates court committees are required to have regard to the needs of court users who are disabled in discharging their responsibilities for the administration of the magistrates courts. My officials are currently working, in collaboration with a variety of disability organisations, on the production of a good practice guide covering disabled court users which is aimed at magistrates courts committees. The aim of the guide is to raise awareness in the magistrates courts of the special needs of all court users with disabilities. The guide will be published later in the year.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Servants (London Supplement)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the annual cost of paying a London supplement to civil servants working in London in the last year for which figures are available. [17686]

Mr. Freeman: The London weighting allowance was abolished on 1 October 1994. At that time, there were three levels of London weighting paid to non-industrial staff: inner London £1,776 per person per annum; intermediate zone £1,015; and outer London £736. On the basis of where staff were employed on 1 April 1994, the total annual cost of the London allowances was £151 million. Since 1 April 1994, Departments and agencies have had delegated authority to determine the pay and allowances of their own staff.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Drug Tests)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what circumstances video recording occurs of prisoners giving urine samples for random drug tests; [16357]

(2) how many prisoners have (a) been fined, (b) lost remission and (c) been subject to other disciplinary sanction for refusing to co-operate with a random drug test before a video camera. [16358]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 27 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the circumstances under which video-recording occurs of prisoners giving urine samples for random drug testing; and disciplinary sanctions resulting from prisoners refusing to co-operate with such a test before a video camera.

There are no circumstances under which a prisoner has given a sample of urine for the purposes of drug testing while being video-recorded. Consequently, no prisoners have been disciplined for refusal to co-operate with such conditions.

Prison Visits (Recording)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the video recording of legal visits at (a) Belmarsh, (b) other prisons and (c) legal visiting rooms; [16049]

(2) on what statutory basis the video recording of legal visits is permitted; [16050]

(3) in what circumstances audio recording of legal visiting rooms is permitted. [16051]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 26 February 1997]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tam Dalyell, dated 27 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about video and audio recording of legal visits.

I shall deal with your second and third Questions first. Prison Rule 37 provides that legal visits shall take place out of hearing but in the sight of an officer.

One way to achieve this is to use CCTV without sound, recording the CCTV image on video tape to allow an officer to review the visit at a convenient time. The camera facilities used do not allow any documentation that may be open on the visits table to be read.

The Prison Service does not permit the audio recording of legally privileged visits.

Belmarsh prison uses video-recorded CCTV without sound in the legal visits facility in its special secure unit (SSU). A system similar to that used in the SSU at Belmarsh is used in the other SSUs at Full Sutton and Whitemoor. CCTV without sound is used in the non-SSU legal visits rooms at Full Sutton, Long Lartin, Frankland and Wakefield, and can be video recorded if necessary. Information about the rest of the estate is not held centrally and accurate information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Belmarsh Prison

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours per day on average over the past 12 months prisoners in special secure units at Belmarsh prison have been confined to their cells; and if he will make a statement. [17309]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 26 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Andrew Mackinlay, dated 27 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the hours prisoners have been confined to their cells in the special secure units (SSU) at Belmarsh prison.

Prisoners are confined to their cells at all times outside of the core day. The core day at Belmarsh SSU is from 0830 to 2030 hours. In addition, during the core day prisoners are confined to their cells for the following periods of time:

On Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday for 3 hoursjy40 minutes.

On Wednesday for 6 hours and 15 minutes.

On Saturday and Sunday for 5 hours and 25 minutes.

The figures quoted are averages calculated over the last 12 months.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations have been received from the solicitor representing Brian McHugh about the confidentiality and conditions for him to interview his client at Belmarsh prison; and if he will make a statement. [17368]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 26 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Andrew Mackinlay, dated 27 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about representations received from the solicitor representing Brian McHugh.

Mr. McHugh has been categorised as an exceptional risk Category A prisoner. Such prisoners are held in special secure units and are subject to closed visits. In exceptional circumstances an open visit may be allowed with the approval of the Director of Dispersal Prisons. The Prison Service has received a number of representations from the solicitor representing Mr. McHugh in support of applications for open legal visits.

Prisons (Special Secure Units)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to put into practice the proposals contained in the report on health in the special secure units at Full Sutton, Whitemoor and Belmarsh prisons; and if he will make a statement. [17405]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 26 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 27 February, 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the implementation of the proposals contained in the report on health in the special secure units at Full Sutton, Whitemoor and Belmarsh prions.

Sir Donald Acheson's review of the possible effects on the health of prisoners of the regime in the special secure units contained nine recommendations. Eight of these recommendations endorsed existing policy or have since been implemented through amendments to the SSU Operating Standards.

We cannot accept the recommendation that prisoners in SSUs should have access to open visits with members of their immediate families. The recommendation was qualified by the assertion that it should be possible for the Prison Service to devise a system of open visits which prevented the passage of unauthorised items. The policy of closed visits was introduced in 1995 precisely because it represented—after analysis of the options and taking into account humanitarian concerns—the only guaranteed means of preventing the passage of such items.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are to be made to ensure that, if she gives birth while still in detention, Roisin McAliskey is not separated from her child; and if he will ensure that, if Ms McAliskey is extradited, she and her baby will not be separated. [17625]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 25 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Max Madden, dated 27 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your Question about the arrangements to be made if Ms Roisin McAliskey gives birth while still in detention.

Careful consideration is being given to the care of Ms McAliskey's baby should she give birth while detained in prison custody. No decisions have yet been taken. If Ms McAliskey is extradited to Germany, care arrangements will be matters for the German authorities.

Firearms (Amendment) Bill (Administration)

Sir Jerry Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what extra staff are to be taken on to administer the Firearms (Amendment) Bill following its enactment. [17452]

Miss Widdecombe: A new firearms compensation section is to be set up within the Home Office on a short-term basis and will initially comprise 50 staff. Their specific task will be to process claims from those persons who surrender their lawfully held handguns which become prohibited under the Act. Payments will also be made in respect of ancillary equipment used solely in connection with those handguns, and to owners of small calibre pistols who choose not to, or are unable to, join a licensed pistol club. In addition, there will be some new work arising from the granting of licences for the new pistol clubs. It is expected that this work can be accommodated within existing resources.

Foreign Students (Residence Restrictions)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what restrictions apply to the length of time students from (a) Australia, (b) Canada, (c) New Zealand and (d) South Africa may reside in the United Kingdom; and what permits are required. [17355]

Mr. Kirkhope: There is no upper limit on the time an overseas student may remain in the United Kingdom. A student who fully satisfies the requirements of the immigration rules will normally be given leave for the period of his course.

The criteria for leave to enter or remain as a student are set out in the "Statement of Changes in the Immigration Rules", HC 395, as amended, at paragraphs 57 to 62, a copy of which is in the Library.

Nationals of Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa do not need to obtain a visa before travelling to the United Kingdom as students. However, they may apply for an entry certificate should they wish to do so.

Criminal Case Papers

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the provisions on the retention of case papers in the code of practice prepared under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996. [18375]

Mr. Howard: I published a draft code on 4 July 1996 for consultation, modified it in the light of representations received, and laid it before Parliament on 18 December. The draft code required each chief police officer to develop his own policy on the retention of case papers, taking account of certain specified criteria. I received representations that the code should prescribe a national policy on this issue so that each police force followed the same practice. The version of the code which I laid before Parliament on 18 December contains a national policy in that it requires each police force to retain all material obtained by the police in the course of a criminal investigation which might be relevant to the investigation at least until the conclusion of the trial; and if the case resulted in a conviction following a not guilty plea, to retain the material for a further minimum period of one year following summary conviction or three years following conviction on indictment.

At present, police forces are not subject to any statutory requirement to retain material for any specified period. Each police force has its own policy and there is no common practice. The effect of the provisions in the code is to increase protection for defendants by inserting a statutory minimum retention requirement where none exists at present. These provisions leave untouched the current ability of the police to retain material for any length of time beyond that. In very serious and high-profile cases, I would expect the police to continue to retain material for a long time, as they have tended to do under the informal arrangements which currently exist.

Nevertheless, in the light of concerns expressed recently about these provisions, I have concluded that the interests of justice would be better served by an alternative set of requirements. Accordingly, I intend to amend the code of practice so as to require the police to retain material at least until the end of the trial and then, in the event of a conviction, either until the convicted person is released from custody, if the court imposes a custodial sentence, or until six months from the date of conviction, if the court imposes a non-custodial sentence. Where a convicted person is given a short custodial sentence and would be released within six months of conviction, material would still have to be retained for at least six months. If an appeal is in progress at the end of one of these periods, or an application is being considered by the Criminal Cases Review Commission, the period will be extended until the appeal is concluded or the commission makes a decision on the application.

I will lay an amended code of practice before Parliament today.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Deregulation

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he received following the recent DTI consultation exercise on proposals made by the deregulation task force in respect of employment rights in small firms; which organisations submitted responses; and how the results of the exercise will be made available. [17490]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department received representations from some 90 organisations, businesses and individuals expressing a range of views which we are currently considering. I shall be placing a list of the organisations which replied in the Library of the House.

Departmental Regional Services

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff directly employed by the DTI were providing DTI services to the regions in each year from 1990 to date. [17305]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The table shows the number of permanent staff—full-time equivalents—directly employed in the Department's regional offices between 1990 and 1993. In 1994, my Department's regional offices integrated with those of the Departments of the Environment, of Transport and of Employment, as it then was, and the table shows the number of permanent staff employed by DTI in the integrated Government offices from 1994. DTI staff in the GOs may carry out work for other Departments; similarly, staff in the GOs employed by other Departments may provide DTI services.

1 April 1990: 1,004
1 April 1991: 1,013
1 April 1992: 996.5
1 April 1993: 980.5
1 April 1994: 988
1 April 1995: 880.5
1 April 1996: 796.1
1 January 1997: 704.4

Prior to 1 April 1995, part-time staff were counted as 0.5 of a full-time equivalent. Staff working fewer than 10 hours per week were excluded from the count. From 1 April 1995, the full-time equivalent of all part-time staff was based on actual hours worked.

Institute of Food Research

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total expenditure of the Institute of Food Research in each year since 1986 in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [17658]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The figures are shown in the table.

Institute of Food Research expenditure—1986–96

Year	Current cash expenditure £000	At constant cash prices[3] £000	Capital cash £000
1986–87	11,541	17,838	1,927
1987—88	12,473	18,304	1,380
1988–89	13,321	18,322	1,307
1989–90	13,810	17,754	3,123
1990–91[1]	13,580	16,168	4,564
1991–92[2]	14,083	15,757	1,200

Genetic Testing (Insurance)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the new guidelines issued by the Association of British Insurers relating to the use of the results of genetic testing. [17366]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 24 February 1997]: I welcome the statement by the Association of British Insurers outlining its current position on genetic testing and the use of genetic information in the underwriting process. The Government have been urging the ABI to make constructive proposals to deal with public concern on this important issue and I am pleased that some progress has been made. The prospect of a wider range of genetic tests becoming available in the future, with greater sophistication in the interpretation of test results, means that the implications for insurance must be kept under constant review. My Department, with the Department of Health, has established the Human Genetic Advisory Commission to examine this sort of issue, taking account of continuing development in genetic science.

Industrial Action and Trade Unions

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library copies of the views submitted in response to the Green Paper on industrial action and trade unions (Cm 3470). [17920]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I shall arrange for a list of respondents to the Green Paper to be placed in the Library of the House shortly after the end of the consultation period on 28 February. Since respondents were not asked to indicate whether they were willing for their comments to be published, it would not be appropriate to make the responses themselves available. However, some respondents may be willing to supply copies of their comments on request.

TRANSPORT

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each franchise let since 13 January the details of payments to or from the franchisee in the same format as his answer of 13 January, Official Report, columns 119–20, indicating the support previously paid to British Rail for the franchises and the amounts of administered profit included within such support. [17191]

Mr. Watts: The information is set out in the tables.

All payments are real amounts.
Advisor costs are correct to January 1997.
This table makes no assumption about the potential for cost savings if the franchisees had remained in BR ownership.

Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17607]

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is set out in the table. The value of individual contracts has not been revealed on the grounds that this information is commercially confidential.

Freight Facilities Grants

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what factors underlie the overestimate in the budget for freight facilities grants for the years 1994–95 and 1995–96. [16526]

Mr. Watts: The 1994–95 freight grants budget was £13.347 million. This was notionally split into £3.347 million freight facilities grants and £10 million for the new track access grants. Spend on FFG at year end was £2,803 million. The shortfall was caused by two large claims not being submitted until the following year.

The 1995–96 freight grants budget was £14,415 million, notionally split into £3.415 million for FFG and £11 million for TAG. FFG spend was £4.007 million.

The provision made for TAG in these years was based on independent consultancy assessment of rail freight traffic likely to face difficulty in meeting newly introduced Railtrack track access charges. The first TAG awards were made during 1996 and payments are now being made.

Pescado (Sinking)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the marine accidents investigation branch report into the sinking of the fishing vessel Pescado; and if he will make a statement. [17938]

Mr. Bowis: The Secretary of State has not yet received the report of the marine accidents investigation branch inspector's inquiry into the sinking of the fishing vessel Pescado. Normally, such a report would be submitted within one year of the incident. The delay in this case was due to the criminal prosecution of the operator of the Pescado and subsequent appeals. Now that criminal proceedings are at an end, the MAIB will complete the process prior to publication of the report, which is required by the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 1994 and will submit the report to the Secretary of State for him to consider in due course. In line with the requirements of these regulations, the Secretary of State normally publishes reports into incidents shortly after they have been received.

Highways Agency

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he plans to amend the Highways Agency's 1996–97 key business plan targets. [18334]

Mr. Watts: I have reviewed the Highways Agency's key targets and decided that the business plan should be amended to reflect decisions taken during the year.

The following 1996–97 targets are deferred, reflecting the new timing or priority of these schemes. They should be deleted from annex D of the plan: "Roads Programme Completion, Starts and Other Milestones":

A650 Hard Ings Road Improvement: (Public Inquiry)

A40 Gypsy Corner Improvement: (Award of Contract)

A40 Western Circus Junction Improvement: (Award of Contract)

London Primary Route Signing Project: (Award of Contract)

A30/A36/A46/A303: (DBFO Tender Invitation).

Milestones which are added to annex D are:

A1 Tempsford Junction Improvement: (Publication of Orders).

A copy of the Highways Agency business plan 1996–97 is in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

South Yorkshire Supertram

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 319, what estimate he has made of the effect of the further £20 million in credit approvals on the South Yorkshire supertram, on council tax rates of Sheffield, Rotherham, Barnsley and Doncaster following his announcement; and if he will make a statement. [17511]

Mr. Curry: The £20 million supplementary credit approval offered to South Yorkshire passenger transport authority will allow it to set a lower levy in 1997–98. We estimate that each £20 million in the levy is equivalent to around £56 in council tax for band D two-adult households in each of the four South Yorkshire districts.

Estates Renewal Challenge Fund (Wythenshawe)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the effect of and implications for Wythenshawe of the announcement made by the Minister of State for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration in Manchester on 18 February in relation to round 2 of the estates renewal challenge fund; and if he will publish in the Official Report the text of the announcement. [17289]

Mr. Curry: My announcement of the successful bids for funds from round 2 of the estates renewal challenge fund is good news for the residents of Wythenshawe. Manchester have been allocated almost £21 million towards the costs of the regeneration of 7,000 properties in the Wythenshawe area. If the tenants agree, their homes will transfer to a new local housing company and will then benefit from an estimated additional £64 million of investment, beyond what would be possible if the housing stayed with the council. This area is already a successful bidder for Government support under the single regeneration budget so the estate transfer will enable a comprehensive area renewal policies to be pursued by public-private sector partnership. The text of the announcement on the estates renewal challenge fund has been published in the Official Report. I refer the hon. Member to column 420 on Monday 17 February.

Wild Birds

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the licences issued in 1996 by his Department for the destruction of wild birds. [17836]

Mr. Clappison: Details of licences issued by my Department to kill wild birds are contained in the report by the United Kingdom to the European Community on derogations under article 9 of the directive on the conservation of wild birds, 79/409/EEC. The latest report for which figures are available covers 1995. Figures are not yet available for 1996, but when the report has been prepared a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Terrorism

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance he intends to provide towards the costs of clearing up after the terrorist attacks on London docklands and Manchester city centre on 9 February 1996 and 15 June 1996. [18142]

Mr. Curry: The Local Government Finance (England) Special Grant Report No. 26 has today been laid before the House. The report provides for grant—up to a total of £2.5 million—to be made available to the London borough of Tower Hamlets, Manchester city council and Greater Manchester Police Authority towards the costs of dealing with the aftermath and loss of income suffered as a consequence of the terrorist attacks of 9 February 1996 on south quay on the Isle of Dogs and of 15 June 1996 on Manchester city centre.

Subject to the approval of the House, grant will be payable on those costs necessarily incurred by each authority in the six months following the explosions as a direct result of responding to and clearing up after the incidents. The authorities will also receive some recompense for loss of income during the same period directly or indirectly attributable to the explosions. Insurable expenditure or loss of income will not, however, be eligible for grant; nor will costs which are eligible for other grants or credit approvals.

Direct Labour (Wolverhampton)

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the response of Wolverhampton metropolitan borough council to the notice served on it on 11 September 1996 in respect of its decision to assign highway maintenance, winter maintenance and street lighting work to its direct labour organisation. [18141]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has considered the response made by the authority on 10 October. He has today served a direction on the authority because it still appears to him that the authority acted in an anti-competitive manner in assigning work to its direct labour organisation. He took this view because of the way in which the authority undertook the evaluation of bids. The effect of the direction is to require the authority to seek consent if, when it retenders the work at the end of the current assignment, it wishes to continue to carry it out in-house.

Granny Annexes

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response was received to the consultation paper on proposed changes in the treatment of granny annexes and similar self-contained units of accommodation when they form part of a larger property. [18376]

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I proposed changing the ways in which council tax is assessed for self-contained units of accommodation when they form part of a larger property. We consulted with local authorities and organisations representing the elderly and disabled. The list of responses received has been placed in the Library of the House. The responses were overwhelmingly positive. We have accepted the views of many respondents that our objectives can be achieved more simply by means of an exemption.

We now propose that from 1 April 1997 any part of a property, such as an annexe, which is occupied by a dependent relative of the family in the other part of the building, will be an exempt dwelling, where "dependent" means:

(a) aged 65 years or more,

(b) severely mentally impaired within the meaning given in paragraph 2 of schedule 1 to the Local Government Finance Act 1992, or

(c) substantially and permanently disabled (whether by illness injury, congenital deformity or otherwise).

and "relative" means: spouse, parent, grandparent, child, stepchild, grandchild, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, nephew or niece, or the parent or child of such a relative, including a relationship by marriage and of the half-blood.

These changes will apply in England and in Wales.

Landlord and Tenant Report

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take in the light of the Law Commission's report, "Landlord and Tenant: Responsibility for State and Condition of Property Law", Com. No. 238. [18377]

Mr. Clappison: I am grateful to the Law Commission for its very full and helpful analysis of this area of the law in England and Wales.

Of the commission's four main recommendations for change, we agree that the law should be amended so that, in respect of new leases, etcetera created after the commencement of the new provisions:

there should be implied into every lease, subject to the exceptions listed below, a covenant that the landlord shall keep the premises in repair, to a standard which is appropriate having regard to the age, character and prospective life of the premises and to their locality. This would not apply to a lease of a dwelling house for a term of less than seven years; to a lease of an agricultural holding; to a farm business tenancy; or to an oral lease. Nor would it apply in cases where there was an express repairing covenant in the lease, or the implied covenant was expressly excluded in the lease. Where the premises which are leased form part only of a building, and the landlord has an interest in other associated premises within the building, a similar repairing covenant would apply in respect of the associated premises.

a court should have a power to decree specific performance of a repairing obligation in any lease or tenancy the law of waste should not longer apply in most cases, and the implied covenant that a tenant will use premises let to him in a tenantlike manner should be abolished. Instead, an implied statutory covenant or duty should be created by which any tenant or licensee would undertake to take proper care of the premises, including any common parts of the building; to make good any damage wilfully done to them by him or by others with a right to be on the premises; and not to carry out works to the property which would be detrimental to the landlord's or licensor's interest.

The commission also recommended that, with certain exceptions, there should be implied into a lease of a dwelling house for a term of less than seven years a covenant by the lessor that the dwelling is fit for human habitation at the start of the lease and that the lessor will keep it fit during the lease. We are not yet able to come to a view on this recommendation, since a review of the fitness standard is currently taking place.

Once that review is complete, we will resume consideration of the commission's recommendation on fitness of dwellings and, when we have reached a decision, seek a suitable legislative opportunity for the implementation of the agreed proposals.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for extending the non-fossil fuel obligation subsidy to facilities which operate anaerobic digestion and energy recovery. [17520]

Mr. Page: I have been asked to reply.

Energy recovery facilities which employ anaerobic digestion have been eligible to bid for contracts under the non-fossil fuel obligation. NFFO policy will be reviewed before the next order, NFFO5, is announced.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Public Appointments

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will name the members of the independent appointment panels or committees established to advise on appointments to non-departmental public bodies made by her since July 1995. [10275]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The first Department of National Heritage public appointments advisory panel was held in September 1996. The following are advisory panel members:

Professor Dawn Ades
Dr. Eric Anderson
Dr. John Ashworth
Averil Burgess OBE
Professor Averil Cameron
Dame Elizabeth Esteve-Coll DBE
Matthew Evans
The right hon. Lord Faringdon
Professor Sir Brian Follet
Sir Christopher France GCB
Sir Ernest Hall OBE
Sir Denys Henderson
Dr. Anne McLaren DBE
Michael Moriarty CB
John Neill CBE
Dennis Stevenson CBE
Sir Rodney Walker
Sir David Wilson

Sports Clubs and Recreational Charities

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidance has been issued to valuation officers when assessing the rateable values of premises occupied by voluntary sports clubs and recreational charities; and if she will make a statement. [18276]

Mr. Sproat: Following consultations with the National Playing Field Society and the Central Council for Physical Recreation, the Valuation Office agency has issued additional guidance to valuation officers about the rating of premises occupied by voluntary sports clubs and recreational charities. This further guidance has been agreed with the representative bodies I have mentioned, and gives advice on a number of rating valuation aspects including ability to pay and lottery funding. In addition, it should assist with the speedier settlement of any appeals by occupiers of the type of property in question.

My hon. Friend the Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight) is the Treasury Minister responsible for the Valuation Office agenda and she, like me, welcomes this useful step which in some circumstances should be of benefit to voluntary sports clubs and recreational charities.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Overseas Aid

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many countries currently contribute 0.7 per cent. or more of gross domestic product to overseas aid; and if he will make a statement. [17739]

Dr. Liam Fox: Four Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries—Denmark, Sweden, Norway and the Netherlands—contribute 0.7 per cent. or more of gross national product to overseas development assistance. In 1995, the UK provided 0.28 per cent. of GNP for development assistance-above the average for all donors of 0.27 per cent.

The UK was second only to the Netherlands in total—public and private—resource flows to developing countries, contributing 1.38 per cent. of GNP—ahead of the UN target of 1 per cent.

International Fund for Agricultural Development

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the final outcome of the negotiations to replenish the international fund for agricultural development; and what will be the United Kingdom contributions. [18275]

Dr. Liam Fox: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development announced that agreement was reached last week on the fourth replenishment of the international fund for agricultural development. With pledges of around $360 million from the developed countries, some $100 million from the oil producers and developing countries together, the release by the developed countries of some $16 million from the third replenishment, and anticipated reflows and investment income, IFAD should be able to maintain a very satisfactory level of annual lending commitments over the next three years.

The UK's contribution to the fourth replenishment will be $22.01 million—£13.6 million—for which parliamentary approval will be sought in due course. In addition, we will release our share—rather less than $1 million—of the funds previously blocked under the third replenishment: this is not a new financial commitment, promissory notes for the amount having already been lodged.

I am pleased to say that the UK, as convenor of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development group, the largest of the donor groups, played an influential role in securing agreement on the fourth replenishment.

TREASURY

Income Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the first year revenue which would be raised by the Exchequer from a 50 per cent. rate of income tax on taxable incomes of over £100,000 per annum. [16564]

Mr. Jack: The estimated first year yield at 1997–98 income levels of introducing a new rate of 50 per cent. on taxable incomes above £100,000 is £660 million; the full year yield is £1.4 billion. It does not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of the new rate of tax.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16790]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The table gives the number of written and oral questions answered by Treasury Ministers since 1982–83. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Session	Written	Oral
1982–83	1,343	283
1983–84	2,743	591
1984–85	2,225	498
1985–86	1,680	381
1986–87	1,340	157
1987–88	3,244	464
1988–89	2,694	330
1989–90	2,145	338
1990–91	1,465	251
1991–92	859	148
1992–93	2,857	402
1993–94	1,742	217
1994–95	2,031	246
1995–96	1,621	251
1996–97[1]	1,048	120

[1] To 25 February.

The analyses sought of questions not answered substantively are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Death Rate

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the death rate for (a) the weeks ending 3 January, 10 January, 17 January, 24 January and 31 January and (b) the nearest equivalent week in each of the previous five years; [16905]

(2) if he will list for each of the past five years (a) the highest three-weekly death rate recorded by the registrar-general and (b) the average weekly death rate for each January. [16767]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 20 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 27 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question asking how many deaths occurred in (a) the week ending 3rd January, 10th January, 17th January, 24th January and 31st January and (b) the nearest equivalent week in each of the previous five years. The numbers of deaths in England and Wales are provided in Table 1 below.

Table 1: Number of deaths which occurred in England and Wales

	Weeks ending
	3rd January	10th January	17th January	24th January	31st January	January average
1992	13,848	13,846	12,985	12,301	12,668	13,130
1993	15,568	13,545	12,510	11,740	11,481	12,969
1994	13,495	13,256	12,497	12,239	11,662	12,630
1995	12,894	13,025	12,483	12,267	12,296	12,593
1996[1]	15,879	14,964	13,204	12,109	12,243	13,680
1997[1]	16,612	17,255	15,699	13,774	12,012	15,070

[1] Death occurrences for 1996 and 1997 are provisional. Figures for 1997 are the latest available. They will be incomplete owing to some January deaths waiting to be registered and added to the ONS database.

You also asked a related question on three-weekly numbers of deaths. The highest numbers of three-weekly death occurrences in England and Wales for each of the past five years are provided in Table 2 on the following page. Table 1 above shows the average weekly deaths for each January in England and Wales.

Table 2: Highest figures of three-weekly deaths in England and Wales

	Figure
1992	38,787
1993	40,926
1994	37,992
1995	44,235
1996[1]	42,831

[1] Death occurrences for 1996 are provisional. I hope this reply has been helpful.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the five most recent occasions prior to 10 January when the weekly death rate recorded in England and Wales exceeded 19,000. [16906]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 20 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr Rhodri Morgan, dated 27 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question asking if he will list the five most recent occasions prior to 10th January when the weekly deaths recorded in England and Wales exceeded 19,000. This figure is close to the provisional number of death registrations in the week ending January 10th 1997. A search of similar weekly registrations produced the figures listed in the table below.

Week ending: published	Recorded number of death registrations in England and Wales, by ONS (OPCS)
January 6th 1962[1]	19,522
January 2nd 1970[1]	25,007
January 9th 1970[1]	20,914

Week ending: published	Recorded number of death registrations in England and Wales, by ONS (OPCS)
December 22nd 1989[1]	19,180
January 1st 1994	24,375

[1] These figures are from the Registrar-General's Weekly Return which was discontinued in January 1994.

The closure of Register Offices over holiday periods will affect numbers of death registrations. The week following a closure results in offices receiving a backlog of registrations from the previous week. This may contribute to high figures found in the week following a holiday period.

I hope this reply has been helpful.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17062]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information is as follows for the Treasury, the revenue departments and the Chancellor's agencies—all values being approximate:

HM Treasury

Seventeen items of equipment and furniture valued at £1,300 were recorded as stolen or unaccounted for and 17 IT items valued at £15,600 were recorded as stolen or unaccounted. None of the items was valued over £5,000.

Inland Revenue

Three hundred and eighty-eight items of equipment (or components) with a total value of £460,000, were reported lost or stolen. This includes one item over £5,000, an Escala server valued at £19,000.

HM Customs and Excise

Two hundred and fourteen items of equipment and furniture valued at £87,000 were recorded as losses. Of these, 97 were stolen and 117 were not accountable; 125 IT items valued at £121,000 have been recorded as losses. Of these, 109 were stolen and 16 were not accountable.

Valuation Office

Eleven items of furniture and equipment with a total value of £600 were reported stolen; 72 IT items were recorded stolen, valued £78,700. No items were valued over £5,000.

Paymaster

No equipment or furniture stolen or unaccounted for

The Royal Mint

Three items were unaccounted for with a total of £820. No items have been recorded stolen.

Office for National Statistics

No items of furniture and equipment were reported stolen or unaccounted; 73 IT items were recorded stolen which valued £24,000. No items recorded were valued over £5,000.

National Savings

One item was recorded stolen with a value of £750.

Inheritance Tax (Access to Works of Art)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what actions his Department has taken over the last three years to make the public aware of their rights of access to homes containing works of art granted exemption from inheritance tax; and if he will make a statement. [17185]

Mr. Jack: Since January 1994, the Inland Revenue has issued quarterly press releases publicising the public's right of access, by appointment, to those works of art that are not on general public display and which are listed on the computerised register of conditionally exempt items. Since December 1996, the register has been available on the Internet. The Inland Revenue has also issued a new leaflet, IR 156, "Our heritage—your right to see tax exempt works of art", and a poster to make people aware of their right of access. Copies are available in the Library. The leaflet is available from tax inquiry centres and about 500 museums and public galleries throughout the UK. Copies of the leaflet and poster have also been sent to all chief librarians and to more than 40 university and college art history departments.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of individuals who have visited each home where there are works of art exempted from inheritance tax in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [17186]

Mr. Jack: No such estimate has been made. The current arrangements are designed to ensure that qualifying objects are preserved, that public access is available, and that people are aware of their right to view items not on general public display. There is no statutory power to require owners of conditionally exempt chattels to keep statistics of the number of people exercising that right.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual revenue cost to the Exchequer of exemption from inheritance tax for works of art for which public access is granted; and if he will make a statement. [17184]

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) on 29 January, Official Report, column 234.

National Savings

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement about his plans for use of the private finance initiative in respect of the National Savings agency; [17211]

(2) what plans he has to privatise the National Savings agency; [17210]

(3) for what reasons it is proposed to put National Savings agency functions out to tender under the private finance initiative. [17209]

Mrs. Angela Knight: As I said in my statement of 22 January 1997, there are no plans to privatise National Savings. Our plans are to make sure that National Savings continues to provide cost-effective funding of the Government's debt through savings products which customers want.

National Savings is exploring whether private finance initiative options could assist the agency further, to become a more modern high-performance organisation, improving value for money for the taxpayer and the service offered to customers. No decisions have been taken about the scope of private sector involvement.

Pension Funds

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much additional tax would be raised if pension funds were subjected to full normal taxation. [17272]

Mr. Jack: I regret that a reliable estimate cannot be made.

Pensions Misselling

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies have been prosecuted for pensions misselling. [15752]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 25 February 1997]: I am not aware of any company to date having been prosecuted for the misselling of pensions. Certain firms, however, have been fined or otherwise disciplined.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the net cost to public funds of abolishing inheritance tax. [17859]

Mr. Jack: Receipts from inheritance tax are forecast to be £1.6 billion in 1997–98.

Statistics (Rounding)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Economic Secretary had seen a copy of page 37 of the second edition of "Plain Figures" prior to her answer of 24 February, Official Report, column 19, concerning rounding; and if she considered enclosing a copy with her answer. [17908]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Yes, and no.

Married Couple's Tax Allowance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost to public funds of allowing the married couple's tax allowance to be claimed at (a) 20 per cent. and (b) 23 per cent. [17860]

Mr. Jack: The estimated full-year Exchequer cost at 1997–98 income levels of allowing the married couple's allowance and linked allowances, which includes the additional personal allowance and the widow's bereavement allowance, to be claimed at 20 per cent. is £1.0 billion and at 23 per cent. is £1.5 billion.

Food Poisoning

Dr. Strang: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many food poisoning notifications there were to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (a) in each year since 1982 and (b) in 1996 to the latest available date. [17652]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Gavin Strang, dated 27 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question asking for the number of notifications of food poisoning to the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys from 1982 to 1996.

The figures you have requested are published annually in the Series MB2 "Communicable disease statistics", copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library for the years up to 1994. Copies of the Series MB2 Quarterly Monitors are also available up to the June quarter of 1996.

The 1995 national data were published in the March 1996 Monitor, whilst the annual total for 1996 is still only provisional. They cover cases notified under the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988, and earlier regulations.

Annual notifications of food poisoning for England and Wales

1983: 17,735
1984: 20,702
1985: 19,242
1986: 23,948
1987: 29,331
1988: 39,713
1989: 52,557
1990: 52,145
1991: 52,543
1992: 63,347
1993: 68,587
1994: 81,833
1995: 82,041
1996: 83,664 (provisional)

I hope this reply has been helpful.

Tax Law Rewrite Steering Committee

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made by the Tax Law Rewrite Steering Committee established last December. [18076]

Mr. Jack: The steering committee had its first meeting yesterday. Copies of the minutes of this and future meetings will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses as soon as they are available.

This bipartisan committee has a key role in the rewrite project which will deliver real benefits to all taxpayers.

SOCIAL SECURITY

National Insurance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total amount paid in national insurance contributions, at 1995–96 prices, and as a percentage, by employees with (a) more than 200 per cent., (b) between 150 per cent. and 200 per cent., (c) between 100 per cent. and 150 per cent., (d) between 50 per cent. and 100 per cent. and (e) below 50 per cent. of the average earnings of men and women combined in (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1994–95 and (iv) 1995–96; and what was the distribution of total earnings in these years between these groups. [13879]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is in the table.

Class 1 employee contributions (£ billion)[1,2]	14.2	17.9	18.9
Percentages in each band
(a) More than 200 per cent. of average earnings[3]	11.3	12.5	12.8
(b) Between 150 per cent. and 200 per cent. of average earnings[3]	16.5	17.4	17.7
(c) Between 100 per cent. and 150 per cent. of average earnings[3]	34.8	34.1	34.2
(d) Between 50 per cent. and 100 per cent. of average earnings[3]	32.3	31.1	30.5
(e) Below 50 per cent. of average earnings[3]	5.1	4.9	4.8
Distribution of earnings for each band[4]
(a) More than 200 per cent. of average earnings[3]	18.6	19.6	20.3
(b) Between 150 per cent. and 200 per cent. of average earnings[3]	16.3	16.9	16.8
(c) Between 100 per cent. and 150 per cent. of average earnings[3]	30.6	29.6	28.9
(d) Between 50 per cent. and 100 per cent. of average earnings[3]	28.3	27.5	27.5
(e) Below 50 per cent. of average earnings[3]	6.2	6.4	6.5

Notes:

[1] Source: Government Actuary's Department.

[2] Excludes contributions paid by HM forces.

[3] Average earnings of both full-time and part-time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period is unaffected by absence: £224.92 for 1989–90, £283.49 for 1994–95 and £294.33 for 1995–96.

[4] Source: Office for National Statistics.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the revenue consequences of abolishing the upper limit on employee national insurance contributions in Wales. [17870]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

If the limit were removed for Great Britain, it is estimated that the employees affected would pay an extra £3.3 billion[1] in contributions in a full year.

Note:

[1] Assumes that the current 10 per cent. contributions rate would apply to earnings above the upper earnings limit.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohue: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has beeen the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if he will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended, indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16573]

Mr. Lilley: Ministers attend Scottish Grand Committee meetings as part of their normal parliamentary duties and officials do so as part of their normal departmental duties. Expenditure falling to my Department has been limited to travelling costs. I attended the Scottish Grand Committee meeting on 20 May 1996 in Dunfermline and has officials in attendance as necessary.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what process he plans to oversee the clinical standards of service provided by contractors providing medical services for the Benefits Agency. [17620]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 19 February, Official Report, column 591.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which private sector companies took part in the Benefits Agency medical services partnering project; on what basis they were chosen; and if he will place a copy of their reports in the Library. [17618]

Mr. Burt: The private sector companies which took part in the partnering project were BMI, Capita and Serco. Seventeen companies responded to an advertisement in the national press and were sent a questionnaire which was designed to identify specific strengths and formed the basis of a formal sift. Particular emphasis was placed upon practical experience, commitment to quality and customer service.

The companies reports are commercial in confidence and will not be placed in the Library. To do so would prejudice the effective conduct of commercial activities.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information has been (a) requested and (b) obtained by his Department from each of the private companies contracting to provide medical services to the Benefits Agency concerning (i) safeguarding the records of benefit claimants and (ii) the broad business objectives of the contractors. [17616]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 February, Official Report, columns 203–4.

The broad business objectives of the successful contractor(s) in relation to the delivery of a medical service to the Department must conform to the objectives of the Benefits Agency. The shortlisted companies have provided copies of policy statements relating to specific areas of the business to be contracted out.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to start an evaluation of the performance of contractors providing medical services to the Benefits Agency; and by what methods this evaluation will be carried out. [17619]

Mr. Burt: The formal contract management procedure to evaluate performance will be in place at the time of the handover of the business to the successful contractor(s). The procedure is currently in the process of development.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what net savings he expects to accrue from the contractorisation of the Benefits Agency medical service. [17615]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. Burden) on 7 November 1996, Official Report, column 681.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to begin the process of system audits and computer audits in each site used by contractors providing medical services to the Benefits Agency; and at what intervals he plans to repeat these audits. [17617]

Mr. Burt: Audits of the IT systems will commence when the medical service is handed over to the successful contractor(s). The procedure is currently in the process of development.

Pensioners

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) pensioners and (b) pensioners aged over 80 years had access to a (i) freezer, (ii) fridge, (iii) telephone, (iv) car, (v) washing machine, (vi) television, (vii) video and (viii) central heating in (1) 1979 and (2) the latest year for which figures are available. [17483]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the tables:

Percentages

	All pensioners		Pensioners aged over 80
Type of durable goods	1979	1993–94	1979	1993–94
Freezer or fridge freezer	32	81	20	68
Fridge or fridge freezer	88	99	79	98
Telephone	57	94	50	92
Car/Van	34	53	18	31
Washing machine	64	83	46	66
Video	n/a	51	n/a	26
Central heating	46	81	43	76

Access to a Television

(percentages)

	All pensioners		Pensioners aged over 80
Type of durable goods	1979	1991–92	1979	1991–92
Television	96	99	92	98

1. Information in the tables is derived from the households below average income datasets, which is based on information from the family expenditure survey. The latest available estimates, for 1993–94, are for two financial years data combined. Figures for 1991–92 are for two calendar years combined.
2. From 1993 onwards, information on access to televisions has not been collected in the family expenditure survey, as reported access to televisions had reached almost 100 per cent. The latest figures for access to televisions are therefore for 1991–92.
3. For HBAI analyses of the possession of consumer durables, it is assumed that members of the same household share common facilities. The percentages given in the reply represent the proportion of individuals in pensioner benefit units with access to each of the specified consumer durables within their household.
4. In HBAI, a single pensioner benefit unit is defined as a single adult of state pension age or above (65 for men, 60 for women). A pensioner couple benefit unit is one in which the man of the benefit unit is aged 65 or over. For the purpose of the over 80 years analysis, the same definition applies, except the age threshold is over 80.
5. Information on access to video recorders was not reported in the 1979 family expenditure survey.
6. All estimates are subject to sampling error.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many complaints have been made by claimants about their medical examinations in connection with incapacity benefit in the Yorkshire and Humberside region since April 1995. [16047]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Gunnell, dated 26 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many complaints have been made by claimants about their medical examinations in connection with Incapacity Benefit in the Yorkshire and Humberside region since April 1995.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are kept for each Medical Services Centre (MSC). Yorkshire and Humberside is dealt with by Leeds MSC. The Leeds MSC covers the Yorkshire Area Directorate and South Humberside District, part of Mercia Area Directorate. Statistics on complaints have only been kept by MSCs since September 1995 and are not broken down by Benefits Agency districts.

From September 1995 to December 1996 the Leeds MSC received 285 complaints, during which time it dealt with 111,164 examinations. These figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many times has (a) a warning been issued, (b) disciplinary action been taken and (c) dismissal occurred (i) as a result of claimants' complaints and (ii) otherwise since the incapacity benefit was introduced. [16048]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Gunnell, dated 26 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many times has (a) a warning been issued, (b) disciplinary action been taken and (c) dismissal occurred (i) as a result of claimants' complaints and (ii) otherwise since the Incapacity Benefit (IB) was introduced.

I have assumed your question refers to doctors involved in providing medical advice in connection with IB. The information is in the attached table.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Benefits agency medical services doctors subject to disciplinary action April 1995 to date

	As a result of customer complaints	Other
Warnings issued	1	3
Other disciplinary action	0	1
Dismissal	1	1

Figures are provisional and subject to change. This excludes contracted self-employed, fee paid doctors for whom no formal disciplinary procedures exist.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what criteria are used by the Benefits Agency in determining whether a claimant has deliberately disposed of income or capital in order to qualify for income-based jobseeker's allowance. [17943]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is contained in the jobseeker's allowance and income support adjudication officer's guide, part 33 paragraphs 33570–33589 and part 34 paragraphs 34805–34846. A copy of the guide is available in the Library.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what national insurance contribution conditions carers have to meet in order to qualify for contribution-based jobseeker's allowance. [17942]

Mr. Evans: Under jobseeker's allowance, the national insurance contribution conditions for carers are the same as for other jobseekers. As with the previous unemployment benefit scheme, entitlement to the contribution-based element of jobseeker's allowance is based on the individual's national insurance contributions in the last two full tax years before the year of the claim to jobseeker's allowance.

There are two contribution conditions. The first condition which a person must satisfy is to have paid class 1 contributions of 25 times the lower earnings limit—currently £61—in one of the two relevant tax years. The second condition is that class 1 contributions must have been paid or credited of at least 50 times the lower earnings limit—currently £61—in both the two relevant tax years on which the claim is based. The relevant tax years are the last two complete tax years before the benefit year—starting in January—in which the claim is made.

However, the linking provisions have been amended under jobseeker's allowance to provide extra help for carers. For the first time, periods in receipt of invalid care allowance are included in the jobseeker's allowance linking provisions. This ensures that a person's benefit position at the end of a period of invalid care allowance will be the same as when it started. Therefore, if a person's contribution record immediately prior to a period in receipt of invalid care allowance is sufficient to qualify the individual for contribution-based jobseeker's allowance, that record will apply to any claim for jobseeker's allowance which is made when invalid care allowance ceases.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Albania

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what official gifts his Department received from the Albanian President; [16407]

(2) what official gifts he has received from the Albanian President. [16404]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Gifts received by Ministers in their official capacity are dealt with in accordance with the procedures set out in "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". The details are not made public.

European Summit (Cardiff)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements he has made with the Cardiff county council for the funding of refurbishment and conversion work at the city hall for the European summit conference in June 1998. [17916]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Hong Kong

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many children in British independent schools are being paid for by the Hong Kong Government; and what is the average payment per child; [17941]

(2) what assessment he has made of the suitability of the Quantock school, Somerset, to receive money from the Hong Kong Government; and if parents who are employees of the Hong Kong Government with children at that school have been provided with the recent Office for Standards in Education report; [17940]

(3) what checks are made by the Hong Kong Government on the suitability of independent schools in Britain before payment is made. [17930]

Mr. Hanley: Policy on the payment of education fees for the children of employees of the Hong Kong Government is a matter for the Hong Kong Government.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if in his recent official visit to Hong Kong he had meetings concerning party finances; and if he will make a statement. [17825]

Mr. Rifkind: I attended a meeting of Conservatives Abroad in Hong Kong on Sunday 16 February. This was not a fund-raising event.

Political events may be included in Ministers' official programmes overseas, so long as no additional costs are incurred. There were no additional costs involved in this case and no Foreign Office official accompanied me to the reception.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a decision will be taken on the application made to the United Kingdom post in

Islamabad by Mrs. Rukhsana Kausar (Ref: HO A525156; IMM/C4652) to join her husband in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [17902]

Dr. Liam Fox: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will have a substantive reply sent to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

European Council

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for March and (b) major EU events for the next six months. [17959]

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Personal Injury Actions

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Attorney-General how many representations he has received since 1993 urging the amendment of the Limitation Act 1980 so far as it relates to time limits for actions in respect of personal injuries; what proportion of these refer to allegations of sexual abuse of the complainant or litigant when the latter was a child; and if he will make a statement. [16990]

Mr. Streeter: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1993, my Department has received about 10 inquiries, including questions asked by hon. Members, about possible reform of the law of limitation as it applies to personal injury cases. These have related to the limitation period applicable when there is an allegation that an adult's illness is the result of intentional harm he suffered many years before. In 1995, the Law Commission undertook a comprehensive review of the law of limitation period s with a view to its simplification and rationalisation, and the commission expects to publish a consultation paper this summer.

Stubbing and Others v. the United Kingdom

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Attorney-General what (a) representations he has received on and (b) assessment he has made of the (i) dissenting and (ii) partly dissenting opinions of judges in the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Stubbing and others v. the United Kingdom. [16991]

Mr. Streeter: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has received no representations on any of the opinions expressed by the court in Stubbings and others v. United Kingdom. My Department has studied all the opinions closely, as has the Law Commission, which expects to publish a consultation paper on the law of limitation this summer.

PRIME MINISTER

Letters to Shareholders

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what was the source of the information on shareholder identities which he used to send his letter of 28 January to shareholders in privatised companies; [17954]

(2) under what statutory provisions he obtained the information on shareholder identities which he used to send letters to shareholders of privatised companies; and if he will make a statement. [17955]

The Prime Minister: The Government were not involved in obtaining the information which came from published sources.

Engagements

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 27 February. [16553]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 27 February. [16638]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 27 February. [16639]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Prime Minister how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16794]

The Prime Minister: A list of the total number of oral and written parliamentary questions answered by Government Departments in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, has been placed in the Library of the House.

Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available. My Office estimates that over the past year approximately 1 per cent. of the total number of parliamentary questions were not answered because of disproportionate costs or because the information requested was not held centrally.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animal Feed

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates action was taken to ban the feeding of ruminant remains to ruminant animals (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in other European Union countries and (c) in other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries. [17661]

Mrs. Browning: The feeding of ruminant protein to ruminants was prohibited in Great Britain in 1988 and in Northern Ireland in 1989. Community decision 94/381 of 27 June 1994 required all member states to ban the feeding of mammalian protein to ruminants. In member states with a system which makes it possible to distinguish between protein from ruminant and non-ruminant species—such as Denmark—the ban is limited to the feeding of ruminant proteins to ruminants. We do not have detailed information on legislation in place in all of the member states but are aware that Ireland introduced a ban on feeding mammalian protein to ruminants on 13 August 1990, that is, before Community decision 94/381. We do not have information on the controls introduced by all OECD members. However, we do know that Switzerland prohibited the feeding of ruminant protein to ruminants in December 1990. Canada is proposing to introduce a ban on feeding mammalian proteins to mammals, and the USA is proposing a ban on feeding ruminant proteins to ruminants.

Salmon

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the Irish authorities about the action the Irish Government are taking to secure the escape of early-running salmon. [17516]

Mr. Baldry: There have been no recent discussions with the Irish authorities on this issue.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16186]

Mr. Boswell: From information held centrally, the answers to the questions are as follows:

	1994	1995	1996
(a)	Manpower[1]	Manpower[1]	Manpower[1]
	Reed Employment	Kelly Services	Kelly Services
	Anne Pettengell	Adecco (formerly	Adecco (formerly

		Personnel	Recruitment
(b)	362	689	995
(c)	£530,801	£845,564	£2,414,067[2]
(d)	4 weeks	6 weeks	6 weeks[3]

Notes:

[1] A number of recruitment agencies have been used over the last three years. Those listed are the ones with significant expenditure. Some local agencies are used by MAFF and agency offices to recruit a small number of staff at different locations, making it impossible to extract the required information without disproportionate cost.

[2] It is not possible to show the median cost paid to each agency per person recruited as to do so would have involved disproportionate cost.

[3] The overall average length of contract shows an average of averages. Requirements across MAFF and its agencies vary. It is therefore impossible to identify any particular period of contract as being representative of the needs of MAFF and its agencies as a whole.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17074]

Mr. Boswell: The table details the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from MAFF and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately.

North-east Drift Net Fishery

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of the Environment Agency about the opening date of the north-east drift net fishery. [17399]

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 26 November 1996, Official Report, column 137. I have not had any more recent discussion with the chairman of the Environment Agency about the opening date of this fishery.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department first received a report proposing a delay in the opening of the north-east salmon drift net fishery; and if he will make a statement. [17517]

Mr. Baldry: There have been a number of proposals to delay the opening date of his fishery. The report on salmon net fisheries presented to Parliament by the then Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and Secretary of State for Scotland in October 1991 invited the National Rivers Authority to consider delaying the opening date until 1 May so as to reduce the level of exploitation of spring-running salmon. The NRA decided not to implement this proposal on the ground that any action on spring salmon needed to be part of a wider programme embracing rod and net fisheries in England and Scotland. In June 1995, the then Minister asked the NRA to reconsider its decision, in the light of the Salmon Advisory Committee's report, "Run Timing of Salmon", which recommended that consideration be given to protection of early-running fish, including additional control of exploitation in both commercial and sport fisheries. The Environment Agency, the successor to the NRA, is still considering this request.

Earlier this month, the task force set up by the Secretary of State for Scotland to produce a management strategy for Scottish salmon fisheries recommended that the opening date for the north-east coast drift net fishery be postponed until 1 June. The Government have issued the task force's report for consultation, and will consider this recommendation together with the task force's other recommendations.

Veterinary Service

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many vets were employed by the State Veterinary Service in each year from 1979 to the present. [17629]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The number of veterinary surgeons employed by the State Veterinary Service at 1 January each year since 1980 is detailed in the table. Since 1980, the structure of the State Veterinary Service has changed several times. The Central Veterinary Laboratory, which previously formed part of the State Veterinary Service, became the Veterinary Laboratories Agency in April 1990. The CVL figures are incorporated in this return for the years 1 January 1980 to 1 January 1990. From 1 June 1990 the figures do not include the CVL. The Veterinary Investigation Service became part of the VLA on 1 October 1995 and is not included in these figures from that date.

Year	Number of vets
1981	563.5
1982	557.0
1983	549.0
1984	539.5
1985	527.5
1986	506.5
1987	464.5
1988	444.5
1989	422.0
1990	430.5
1991	408.0
1992	414.5
1993	420.0
1994	408.3
1995	394.5
1996	301.2
1997	289.5

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinary investigation centres are currently operating; what plans there are to develop these centres; how many there were in each year from 1979–80; and if he will make a statement. [17630]

Mr. Hogg: I have asked the chief executive of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency, Dr. T. W. A. Little, to reply on my behalf.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Dr. Gavin Strang, dated 27 February 1997:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on Veterinary Investigation (VI) Centres.

Since October 1995 the VI Centres have been part of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA). There are fourteen Centres and they play a vital role in fulfilling VLA's surveillance responsibilities for MAFF.

You asked how many Centres there were in each year from 1979 to the present, this is set out below:

Year	Number of VI centres
1979 to 1985	24
1986 to 1990	19
1991	16
1992	15

Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many persons are employed in his Department's research and development programme; and how many there were in each year from 1979–80. [17631]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Some figures have been published in the statistical supplement to the "Forward Look"—"Science, Engineering and Technology Statistics 1996, issued as a separate document in May 1996"—reflecting the position since 1984–85. The entry for MAFF was as follows:

Total personnel engaged on R&D within MAFF (full-time equivalents)[1]

Year	Number
1984–85	2,264
1985–86	2,062
1986–87	1,924
1987–88	1,919
1988–89[2]	2,201
1989–90	1,801
1990–91[3]	2,514
1991–92	2,420
1992–93	2,512
1993–94	2,529
1994–95	2,497

[1] This table refers to personnel engaged in R&D, according to the Frascati definition. Figures for personnel quoted in the departmental reports may include those engaged in other forms of science and technology.
[2] Staff at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, included form 1998–99.
[3] Staff at non-departmental public bodies included from 1990–91.

These figures cover, in the main, staff directly involved in research at the Ministry's agencies, plus Horticulture Research International and Kew. However, the Department does not keep statistical information on the large numbers of headquarters staff involved in the development of research to meet policy needs and its commissioning, monitoring and evaluation. Nor has it figures for the numbers of personnel working for external contractors who carry out MAFF-funded research. This latter group includes public sector research establishments—such as the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council and Natural Environment Research Council research institutes—universities and other private contractors.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what his Department's total research and development expenditure was in each year from 1979 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [17632]

Mr. Hogg: My Department's total research and development expenditure for each year from 1981–82 in cash and constant prices is set out in the following table.

£ million

Year	Cash	Constant prices[1]
1981–82	106.8	211.2
1982–83	113.9	210.2
1983–84	118.6	209.2
1984–85	119.4	200.5

1994–95	137.2	140.7
1995–96	139.7	139.7
1996–97[2]	137.6	134.2

[1] Using the GDP deflator (1995–96 = 100).
[2] Provisional.
Figures for 1979–80 and 1980–81 are not available.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many commissions his Department placed with the Agriculture and Food Research Council and the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council in each year from 1979 to the present; how many such commissions he expects to place this year; and what was the value of those commissions in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [17656]

Mr. Hogg: My Department issued a single commission each year up to 1994–95 for its R and D requirements from the institutes of the Agriculture and Food Research Council and its successor, the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council. In 1995–96, the commission was replaced with umbrella contracts with each of the BBSRC institutes. Details of the total amounts spent in cash and constant prices are set out. In addition to funding through the commissions and umbrella contracts, MAFF has funded research with the BBSRC institutes through separate contracts, the majority of which have been let by competition since 1994–95.

Quarantine

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his plans for a green paper on quarantine. [17818]

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to publish details of his review of the current quarantine regulations. [17832]

Mrs. Browning: The Government's review of the current quarantine regulations is continuing, and further analysis is needed before it can be finalised.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 660, on quarantine premises (1) if he will list the four premises which have indicated that they do not wish to comply with the voluntary code of practice at this stage; [17842]

(2) if he will list the premises inspected by the State Veterinary Service, indicating which have complied with the standards required for the voluntary code of practice. [17843]

Mrs. Browning: As soon as the programme of inspections has been completed a list of premises complying with the code will be included in the literature sent by Agriculture Departments to prospective clients of quarantine premises. I will place a copy of the literature in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 660, if he will list the ports and airports which have facilities for holding animals prior to them being taken into quarantine. [17844]

Mrs. Browning: Animals may be landed only at the following ports and airports prior to their being taken into quarantine:

Ports

Dover Eastern Docks

Harwich, Parkeston Quay

Hull

Portsmouth

Southampton.

Airports

Birmingham

Edinburgh

Gatwick

Glasgow

Heathrow

Leeds

Manchester

Prestwick

Belfast.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy as regards the export of live farm animals for slaughter or further fattening in non-EU member states whose welfare standards do not match Community standards; and if he will make a statement. [17827]

Mrs. Browning: We have a long-standing policy of permitting the export of animals for further fattening, or slaughter only to those countries with standards at least equivalent to those in force within the European Union on the protection of animals during transport and at slaughter.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the outbreaks of sheep scab in each month from 1993 to date. [17813]

Mrs. Browning: Official recording of the number of outbreaks of sheep scab was discontinued after deregulation of compulsory controls in 1992.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what progress he has made towards implementing compulsory treatment for sheep scab; and if he will make a statement; [17814]

(2) if he will make sheep scab a notifiable disease. [17815]

Mrs. Browning: The public consultation on draft legislation to introduce new measures to deal with sheep scab ended on 7 February 1997 and the comments received are now being considered. The proposed new measures would enable local authorities to deal with sheep scab on common or open grazing and will introduce criminal offences for failing to treat animals affected with sheep scab and for moving affected animals.

The proposals do not include a re-introduction of compulsory national treatment.

Sheep scab remains within the meaning of "disease" in section 88 of the Animal Health Act 1981 and is therefore still technically notifiable to a police constable. However, our proposals do not include making sheep scab notifiable to the Ministry or local authorities.

Parasiticides

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent research he has commissioned into parasiticides. [17816]

Mrs. Browning: The focus of research commissioned into parasiticides in respect of animal health is on sustainable disease control and research to develop alternatives to pharmaceutical control. The main sponsor for research of this kind in relation to helminths is the Scottish Office Agriculture Environment and Fisheries Department which is currently funding the following significant programme of research on nematode parasites in livestock—mainly sheep.

£110,000: Biological properties of nematode resistance

£730,000: Host response to challenge

£210,000: Control strategies.

Full details of its research is published in its "Programme of commissioned research and development 1996–97" obtainable from SOAEFD's scientific advisor's unit at Pentland house, Edinburgh.

In addition, the Central Veterinary Laboratory has just finished a three-year project to determine the effects of counter selection on reversion to anthelmintic susceptibility. A further small project is currently being funded to validate a commercial product to enable farmers to detect anthelmintic resistance. Beginning in 1997–98, a three-year project at CVL aims to develop a means of predicting whether anthelmintic resistance is likely to appear on a farm.

A major project at Compton is investigating immunity to coccidia which should eventually facilitate the development of immunological means of control if significant resistance does develop.

To mitigate development of resistance by sheep scab mites, MAFF is also supporting research aimed at controlling sheep scab other than by pharmaceutical means. Other MAFF research relating to developing alternatives to parasiticides includes work involving livestock flies.

Surveillance on anthelmintic resistance is ongoing via MAFF's Veterinary Investigation Service.

Pigs

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many piglets of less than 12 weeks of age were exported for production or breeding during 1996; [17839]

(2) if the consignment of piglets exported on 24 January on the MV Cap Afrique was accompanied by an export health certificate as worded in model 111 of the annexe to Council directive 64/432/EEC; [17838]

(3) how many pigs were exported for slaughter during 1996. [17840]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 24 February 1997, Official Report, columns 76–77.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Taoiseach (Meeting)

8. Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next plans to meet the Taoiseach to discuss the political situation in Northern Ireland. [16367]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have no plans to seek a meeting.

I have frequent meetings with Mr. Spring, which I value.

Airport Tax (Effect on Tourism)

9. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the impact on tourism in Northern Ireland of the airport tax. [16368]

Mr. Ancram: It is right to consider the impact of fare levels on tourism. Since the duty was first introduced in 1994, Northern Ireland has experienced record tourism figures.

Beef Markets

11. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress his Department has made in developing new markets for beef which was previously exported. [16370]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Since the ban on the export of beef was imposed, the Government have assisted the industry's marketing effort by setting up a red meat strategy group supporting promotions at UK and international exhibitions, making presentations on the traceability and quality of Northern Ireland beef to retailers and encouraging the development of marketing partnerships between producers, processors and retailers. The Northern Ireland Livestock and Meat Commission received £250,000 of EU money for marketing.

Long-term Unemployment

12. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the trends in long-term unemployment in Northern Ireland. [16371]

Mr. Ancram: At 9 January 1997, there were 34,441 long-term unemployed in Northern Ireland, a reduction of 8,297, or 17.8 per cent., compared with a year earlier.

Millennium Celebrations

14. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to celebrate the millennium in Northern Ireland. [16373]

Mr. Ancram: The Government's aim is to ensure that people throughout the community can be involved and participate in both local and UK-wide events. No specific plans have yet been finalised.

Security Situation

15. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the security situation in Northern Ireland. [16374]

Sir John Wheeler: The murder of Lance Bombardier Restorick and the continuing attacks on the police and Army are evidence of the continuing serious terrorist threat in Northern Ireland, principally from the Provisional IRA. Terrorism from whatever quarter will continue to meet with the undiminished determination of the security forces and the Government to root it out.

Sinn Fein

16. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received concerning admitting Sinn Fein to the peace negotiations. [16375]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: A wide range of views have been expressed, extending from never admitting Sinn Fein to admitting them at once.

Electoral Registers

17. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the integrity of the process of compiling electoral registers in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [16376]

Mr. Ancram: Reassessment of the methods used to effect accuracy is a constant feature of compiling the Northern Ireland electoral register. Uniquely in the UK, Northern Ireland's registration process is not dependent upon a postal return, as all registration forms are collected personally by canvassers. In addition, the Northern Ireland registration form, in contrast to the rest of the UK, seeks previous addresses to enable entries on the register to be cross checked. Also, over the past three years, the chief electoral officer has developed a computerised absent vote register to identify possible abuses of the system.

Cross-border Co-operation

18. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the adequacy of cross-border co-operation on security issues. [16377]

Sir John Wheeler: Security co-operation is regularly assessed against the increasing terrorist threat. The continuous close working relationship between the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Garda plays a vital and effective role in opposing terrorism in all its forms.

24. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next expects to meet a representative of the Irish security forces to discuss the fight against terrorism. [16383]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government regularly discuss security matters with the Government of the Republic of Ireland. It would be inappropriate to reveal the nature, scope and membership of such discussion, but I can assure my hon. Friend that the security forces on both sides of the border have maintained excellent co-operation and will continue to do so.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

19. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the oral answer of 30 January, Official Report, columns 498–99, when he expects to complete his consideration of the case of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. [16378]

Sir John Wheeler: The terms of Mr. Justice Girvan's recent judgment require the cases to be looked at afresh and for new information to be obtained and taken into account. I cannot say at this stage precisely when the process will be completed. However, I can assure the hon. Member that the cases of the two guardsmen will be considered as expeditiously as possible consistent with the terms of the judgment.

Electricity Interconnector

20. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on providing an electricity interconnector between Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom mainland. [16379]

Mr. Ancram: Progress on the interconnector proposal depends on the promoters receiving planning approval. Northern Ireland Electricity plc intends to submit a second planning application in respect of the Northern Ireland element, possibly in late February or early March 1997.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has announced that he is minded to grant planning permission for the Scottish element of the project, subject to sections of the proposed overhead line being placed underground. Comments submitted by interested parties are being considered and a final decision will be made in due course.

29. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the impact of the interconnector with Scotland on the electricity needs of the Province during the next decade. [16388]

Mr. Ancram: None. This is a matter for Northern Ireland Electricity plc, a private company, which has the obligation under its licence to arrange for Northern Ireland's electricity requirements to be met economically. The company is supervised in the discharge of this responsibility by the independent Director General of Electricity Supply. I am informed that, under the terms of the agreement entered into between Northern Ireland Electricity plc and Scottish Power plc, approximately 20 per cent. of the demand on the Northern Ireland electricity system could be met by the Interconnector, when fully operational.

Peace Process

21. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the latest situation in respect of the peace process. [16380]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Members for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton), and for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan).

Paramilitary Violence

22. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his policies to reduce levels of paramilitary violence in the Province. [16381]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government's first priority in Northern Ireland is to eradicate terrorism from whichever section of the community it comes. To this end, the Government will continue to ensure that the Royal Ulster Constabulary, supported by the armed forces, has both the resources and the legal powers it needs to combat terrorism effectively. Already this year, the security forces have achieved a number of significant successes, with 22 people being charged with terrorist-related offences and significant terrorist activity disrupted.

Terrorist Suspects (Recording of Interviews)

23. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce the audio recording of interviews with terrorist suspects; and if he will make a statement. [16382]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government believe, taking into account the views of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, that a move to audio recording at this time would not necessarily be in the overall interests of justice. The special circumstances in Northern Ireland mean that, for the time being, audio recording would be unacceptable on security grounds. Indeed, it its entirely possible that people's lives would be put at risk if the contents of recorded interview were made public in a court.

However, the Government do see benefits, both for interviewees and for the police, in facilitating silent video recording of interviews. A public consultation exercise on the draft code of practice to which the new system will operate has been completed, and it is hoped that the scheme will be up and running later this year.

Local Authority Powers

25. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met representatives of local government in Northern Ireland to discuss extending powers to local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [16384]

Mr. Ancram: I and my ministerial colleagues have frequent discussions with district councillors on a range of subjects. These have included the powers of local authorities. The Government continue to keep the arrangements for local government under review. At present, we see no case for extending powers to local authorities. To act now would be to pre-empt the outcome of the multi-party negotiations, strand one of which will consider the issue of local administration in Northern Ireland.

Parades Commission

26. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what responses he has received to his consultation on the adjudicatory functions of a parades commission as recommended in the North report. [16385]

Sir John Wheeler: We have received a number of written submissions and meetings are being set up as part of the consultation exercise announced in my right hon. and learned Friend's statement of 30 January.

Sectarian Intimidation

27. Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations he has received regarding sectarian intimidation. [16386]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend and other Ministers have received representations from, and had a number of meetings with, local church leaders, Members of Parliament and councillors on the subject of sectarian intimidation across Northern Ireland.

Rating and Valuation

28. Sir James Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will review arrangements for valuation and rating in Northern Ireland. [16387]

Sir John Wheeler: A non-domestic revaluation has recently been carried out in Northern Ireland and a new valuation list will come into effect on 1 April 1997. A review of rating and valuation matters is planned for the new financial year.

Action for Community Employment

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the reduction in the number of ACE posts in 1995–96 and 1996–97 to date. [16369]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Belfast, South (Rev. Martin Smyth) earlier today.

Legislation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pages of legislation have been (a) passed and (b) repealed in each of the last three years. [16372]

Sir John Wheeler: As regards Acts of Parliament extending exclusively to Northern Ireland, there were no such Acts in 1994, in 1995 there were eight pages enacted and none repealed and in 1996 there were 66 pages enacted and 100 repealed. As regards orders in council in 1994 300 pages were enacted and 53 repealed; in 1995 1,145 pages were enacted and 463 repealed; and in 1996 1,199 pages were enacted and 951 repealed.

North Report

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he has made in implementing the recommendations of the North report. [16361]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government accepted a number of the report's recommendations immediately, including the need for an independent commission. The report's recommendation that the commission should have an adjudicatory function is currently the subject of public consultation. A draft order was published for public consultation on Tuesday to make amendments to the Public Order (Northern Ireland) Order 1987. We hope to announce the names of members of the commission shortly. Work is proceeding on a code of conduct.

Electoral Count (Objections)

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many objections were lodged with the electoral court in each calendar year from 1980 to 1996; and how many of the objectives were upheld. [16468]

Mr. Ancram: The statistics required by the hon. Gentleman are not kept in the precise form he has requested. The table provided gives the most detailed information available and covers the whole period for which records have been kept. Claims and objections are determined at electoral hearings, not courts, and the statistics are compiled on the basis of the registration cycle and not a calendar year. All the information reproduced is obtainable from the annual reports of the chief electoral officer, which are available in the Library of the House.

The objections referred to in the table are those lodged to names included in the draft register of electors, which is published in November each year.

Under continuous registration, there is also the facility for objections to be made to any claim lodged for inclusion in the published register of electors. Such objections have occurred only in 1981 when there were 22, and in 1982 when there were 60.

Prospect Downs Development

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) when road works, storm drainage and sewage disposal arrangements at the Prospect downs development, Carrickfergus, will be completed to the adoption standard of the Department of the Environment. [17048]

(2) what action has been taken by the Department of the environment to persuade the site developer at Prospect downs, Carrickfergus, to bring roads, storm drainage and sewerage systems up to adoption standard; [17050]

(3) if the bond held by the Department of the Environment in respect of outstanding work at Prospect downs, Carrickfergus, is sufficient to meet the cost of completion of roads, drainage and sewage disposal arrangements to the adoption standard of the Department. [17049]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. Roy Beggs, dated 26 February 1997:

The Secretary of State had asked me to respond to your 3 recent PQs about the Prospect Downs development at Carrickfergus.

The Prospect Downs development consists of 20 phases. Storm drainage and sewerage disposal arrangements have been completed to adoption standards in phases 1–9 and have been adopted. The roadworks associated with phase 1 have also been adopted but problems exist in relation to the other phases. Roads Service has been in contact with the two developers involved on a number of occasions with a view to having the necessary works carried out but without success. Enforcement action is therefore under consideration in order to bring the matter to a conclusion.

With the exception of one of the phases bonds exist in relation to the outstanding work. it is not possible to say at this stage whether or not the amounts bounded would be sufficient to complete the works buy nevertheless the Department can recover any shortfall from the developers.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Council for Catholic Maintained Schools

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the approved budget of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools for 1996–97 and 1997–98; and what reductions are being required in its administrative budget. [17668]

Mr. Ancram: The total recurrent and capital budget for CMS in 1996–97 was £1.627 million. The equivalent budget for 1997–98 has still to be finalised, and I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Teachers (redundancies)

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of teachers in primary and secondary schools in Northern Ireland likely to be declared redundant in 1997–98 in (a) controlled schools and (b) maintained schools. [17664]

Mr. Ancram: The information sought is not available. Under the local management of schools arrangements, the number of teachers to be employed is a matter for schools' boards of governors.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Further Education Funding

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the likelihood that capital grants to further education colleges will have to be repaid to the European regional development fund, where the grant was conditional on an increase in student numbers which was to be funded through the demand-led element of further education funding. [17271]

Mr. Paice: Payments under the European regional development fund depend on project performance and delivery outputs. For projects involving the provision of training infrastructure, outputs may include vocational qualification gained or trainees trained. These outputs do not necessarily require a net increase in student numbers in all cases.

School Security (Sheffield)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding has been allocated to Sheffield over the planning period for grants for school security measures; and if she will make a statement. [17738]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government will support extra expenditure of £66 million on school security me_sures in England over the next three years. This is in addition to spending on security from local education authorities' and schools' normal budgets. The extra funding will be allocated to authorities through the Department's grants for education support and training programme and to grant-maintained schools by the Funding Agency for Schools.

Under the 1997–98 GEST programme, the security grant for Sheffield LEA will support expenditure of £184,900. Grant allocations for future years will be decided in due course.

Vacancies (Follow-up)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if a benefit sanction may be applied for failure to follow up the vacancy where a claimant identifies a vacancy himself and requests an in-work benefit calculation from an Employment Service adviser. [17865]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 27 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about whether a benefit sanction may be applied for failure to follow up the vacancy where a claimant identifies a vacancy himself and requests an in-work benefit calculation from an employment service adviser. This falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Employment Service (ES).

Where the jobseeker identifies a vacancy themselves and discusses it with an ES adviser, it is considered to be notified to the jobseeker. Provided the jobseeker's suitability for the job has been established, if they do not apply for the job, or do not attend for the interview, or refuse the job, the case may be referred to the Sector Adjudication Officer (SAO). If the SAO decides the job, the case may be referred to the Sector Adjudication Officer (SAO). If the SAO decides the jobseeker has acted without good cause, a sanction of up to 26 weeks could be imposed.

For these, as with all vacancies notified to the jobseeker, an in-work benefit calculation can be done by an ES adviser.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobseekers (Minimum Wage)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances an Employment Service adviser may use an in-work benefit calculation to encourage a jobseeker to lower his minimum wage as indicated in question 16 of the ES2 form. [17864]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 27 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about the circumstances when an Employment Service Adviser may use an in-work benefit calculation to encourage a jobseeker to lower their minimum wage.

All Employment Service (ES) offices provide a structured and coherent advisory and information service which is aimed at helping jobseekers back into work as soon as possible.

As part of this service, our advisers provide information about in-work benefits, either at the request of the jobseeker or, where appropriate, as part of New Jobseeker Interviews and Restart Interviews. In relevant circumstances, Advisers also provide jobseekers with personal in-work benefit calculations to show how they can be better off in work, either for a particular job or for a range of wages.

The "Helping You Back To Work" (ES2) form is generally used when the jobseeker initially makes a claim for Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). In discussing question 16, the adviser determines whether the jobseeker's salary expectation is realistic in the light of opportunities in the labour market. If the expected salary appears unrealistic, then the adviser will make the jobseeker aware of in-work benefits they may be able to claim if they accept a job with a lower wage.

I hope this clarifies the position.

Modern Apprentices

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each training and enterprise council (a) the number of modern apprentices and (b) the number in each occupational sector. [17919]

Cash Limits

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she plans changes to cash limits and running cost limits on votes within her responsibility for 1996–97. [14254]

Mr. Robin Squire [pursuant to his reply, 31 January 1997, c. 397–98]: The cash limit for class I, vote 3: Employment Service will now be decreased by £19,553,000 rather than £20,303,000. Therefore, the new cash limit will be £1,269,42,000 not £1,268,674,000. This change has arisen because the funding of annual compensation payments for early departures between the Employment Service and the Cabinet Office will now be made by direct payment rather than a departmental transfer between votes.

The running costs provision for class IX, vote 3 will therefore be decreased by £2,243,000 rather than £2,993,000 to £907,908,000 and not £907,158,000. The gross running costs limit for the Department for Education and Employment is increased by £4,402,000 to £1,281,816,000.

DEFENCE

Married Quarters (Rent)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current average rent per week in service married quarters; and what was the average in each of the last five years. [17935]

Mr. Soames: The average weekly charges for service family quarters are given in the table, and are based on furnished accommodation in England, Scotland and Wales and of the most commonly occupied type of accommodation.

Service family quarters charge for last five years

	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £	1996–97 £	1997–98 £
Officers	41.30	43.12	47.04	53.48	56.07
Other ranks	26.46	27.74	29.68	34.02	35.93

Additionally, all service personnel pay a contribution in lieu of council tax. Some of the quarters are occupied by civilians and these charges are based on market rents which are assessed by local defence lands service offices.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the percentage increases per annum in rents for service family quarters in each of the past five years; what are the planned increases in each year of the planning period; and if he will make a statement. [17936]

Mr. Soames: The average percentage increases recommended by the Armed Forces Pay Review Body and accepted by the Government for service family quarters are as follows:

1993–94: 1.5 per cent.

1994–95: 5 per cent.

1995–96: 5–8 per cent.

1997–98: 2.7–9.1 per cent.

Charges are recommended annually by the AFPRB, which has always followed the principle that charges levied on service personnel should compare fairly with the costs civilians have to incur for comparable housing. The higher percentage increases this year are for the largest, best-quality officer housing.

Admissible Schools List

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the current version of the admissible schools list showing the number of pupils supported by his Department at each school. [17934]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 26 November 1996, Official Report, column 196.

Proof and Experimental Work

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on proof and experimental work carried out overseas, broken down by the countries in which this work takes place, in each of the last five years; and what estimate he has made of the proportion of this work which could be carried out at range facilities in the United Kingdom. [17673]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The detailed information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. A preliminary survey, however, indicates that in the past five years more than £8 million has been spent on proof and experimental work in a range of overseas countries. Such work is conducted overseas when it provides better value for money, or when no suitable range is available in the UK, or when extreme climate conditions are required.

Eskmeal and Shoeburyness Ranges

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to receive the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency study on the future of the Eskmeals and Shoeburyness ranges; and if he will make arrangements for the report to be made publicly available. [17674]

Mr. Arbuthnot: An interim report was completed by DERA at the end of January. It did not make firm recommendations for the closure of either Eskmeals or Shoeburyness but suggested further detailed work into how the costs of the Defence Test and Evaluation Organisation land ranges might be reduced. Given the report's interim nature, I do not believe it appropriate for publication at present, but as soon as DERA has completed consultations with its MOD customers on the implications of the proposals, DERA intends to publish a consultative document setting out the options and proposing a way ahead. This will be circulated to DERA staff, trade unions and those with an interest. I expect to approve the release of this document within the next few weeks.

Guards (Hours)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent changes his Department has made to the hours and shifts worked by service personnel acting as guards on (a) HMS Raleigh, (b) HMS Drake and (c) Stonehouse barracks. [17939]

Mr. Soames : There have been no recent changes to the hours and shifts for service personnel on guard duty at Stonehouse barracks or HMS Drake. At HMS Raleigh, the usual five-week shift pattern was replaced on 2 January 1997 by a four-week pattern to overcome a temporary manpower shortage. This will not increase the length of the normal 12-hour shifts—including stand-by time—and personnel will receive approximately two weeks' leave in every four weeks.

BSE

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 February (Official Report column 715, if he will list the BSE-related material which (a) is and (b) has been stored at RAF Quedgely. [17835]

Mr. Soames: There is currently no BSE-related material stored at RAF Quedgely. BSE pelleted material was stored between May and August 1996 until removed by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17073]

Mr. Arbuthnot: A central record is not kept of individual items unaccounted for. All such cases are thoroughly investigated with a view to establishing the facts and preventing a recurrence. Where a loss has occurred and recovery proves impracticable, the items in question are written off, and the relevant appropriation account noted accordingly. Items over £100,000 value are reported and noted individually.

Twenty items of equipment have been reported as stolen in the past 12 months, with an estimated value of £75,300. Two thermal imagers and related items valued together at £69,589 were the only items valued at more than £5,000.

In addition, 29 items of information technology equipment have been reported as stolen in the past 12 months, with an estimated value of £31,043. None of these had an individual value of £5,000 or more.

No thefts of furniture have been reported.

This information does not include any losses from defence agencies, I have asked the chief executives to write direct to the hon. Member with relevant information.

Letter from J. A. Trewby to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have been (a) stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for during the past 12 months insofar as it applies to the Naval Bases and Supply Agency (NBSA) as this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

The NBSA launched in December 1996 and is formed from a number of different management areas within the MOD. The exact information you have requested is not readily available due to system changes, but the following information is available for this financial year:

(a) Three items have been stolen with a total value of £7,937.48 (VAT inclusive). None of these were information technology items. No single item involved was valued in excess of £5,000.

(b) Material losses authorised this financial year amount to 907 items with a total value of £2,709,597.09 (VAT inclusive). This figure includes losses caused by damage to equipment. There were no losses of information technology equipment. Eleven of these cases involved items with an individual item value in excess of £5,000; these are listed below.

Item description	Value £ (VAT inclusive)
Fixed probe assembly	9,839.45
Gyro and card set kit	14,414.90
Rudder servo (quantity 2)	20,201.77
Fan centrifugal (quantity 2)	11,376.35

Letter from R. H. Kyle to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

Items of equipment and furniture that have either been stolen or otherwise unaccounted for in the Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen, lost or unaccounted for during the past 12 months because this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency. A list of all such items with an individual value exceeding £5,000 is given at Annex A. Actual losses are rare; when compared with the amount of equipment issued (more than 1 million items), the figure of 29 represents only 0.003% of the total number. There have been no losses of information technology equipment.

Letter from W. E. E. Boreham to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about stolen and unaccounted equipment and furniture, as this falls into my area of responsibility as Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence police Agency.

During the last twelve months I have identified the theft of one laptop computer, ten expandable batons, and one pair of handcuffs complete with pouch. The total value of the stolen equipment was some £2,290,00.

Letter from P. R. Wildman to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen or otherwise unaccounted for by his Department and its agencies as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Military Survey Defence Agency.

One item of IT equipment has been stolen in the past twelve months with an estimated value of £500. No IT equipment was lost.

A small number of miscellaneous items were lost during the past twelve months. All cases were investigated and where recovery was impracticable the items were written off. No item was valued at £5,000 or more.

No thefts of furniture have been reported.

Letter from A. J. Stables to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen or otherwise unaccounted for during the past 12 months, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency.

There have been 30 items of equipment and furniture stolen during the period, for which the total estimated value was £20,048. This includes a vehicle and its contents valued at £14,851.

Four items of information technology material valued at a total of £993 were unaccounted for, as were 378 other items of equipment and furniture valued at a total of £13,610. In addition, a number of low cost cutlery items with a total estimated value of £1,032 were also unaccounted for.

Letter from W. H. J. Kelly to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked the Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA) to reply to your Parliamentary Question, about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture stolen or otherwise unaccounted for during the past 12 months within the NRTA. I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive in his absence.

18 items of equipment have been reported as stolen in the past 12 months with an estimated total value of £2,896.84. Two of these items were furniture and one item was IT equipment. 101 items of equipment with an estimated value of £67,169.83 are unaccounted for, however, none of these had an individual value of £5,000 or more.

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from David G. Wadsworth to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence seeking information about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for during the past 12 months, insofar as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Service Children's Schools Agency.

During the past 12 months there have been 3 separate reported incidents of theft of equipment from schools within British Forces Germany. The stolen equipment comprised of 8 individual items of classroom based Information Technology equipment at a total estimated value of £5,400 and 3 individual items of classroom based audio visual aids at a total estimated value of £500. These incidents were investigated by the Royal Military Police; however none of these items have since been recovered.

There has been no unaccounted losses to report against your point (b).

Letter from M. I. Laurie to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning lost or stolen equipment as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as the Chief Executive of the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre.

During the previous 12 months, three items of equipment have been stolen, with a total value of £3670. Two of these items were laptop computers valued at £1736 each.

Letter from G. Jones to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the cost and numbers of items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen or otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and agencies during the past 12 months, as these matters fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency. Specifically, you asked for a listing, by name, of any such items valued at £5000 or more, with information technology material shown separately.

During the last 12 months, 7 items, with a total value of £2848.10, have been unaccounted for at the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment. None of the items were information technology material.

Letter from R. V. Babington to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying in part to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about equipment and furniture that has been stolen or unaccounted for, in relation to my area of responsibility as the Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

In the last twelve months there have been four items of information technology material stolen, at a value of £800. Two items of information technology material have also been lost or damaged during an attempted theft, at a value of £900.

Letter from John R. Prince to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about stolen and unaccounted items of equipment and furniture, as this matters falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Technical Support Agency (ATSA).

From a capital asset base of approximately 10,000 lines, we have still to account for 2 items as follows:

Item	Value
1 video camera	1,000
1 notebook computer	1,000

These are currently the subject of Ministry of Defence Police investigations. The asset base excludes furniture, which we do not generally account for as it tends to be of low value.

Letter from P. D. Foxton to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence on office equipment and furniture that has been stolen or otherwise unaccounted for during the last twelve months, for those areas that fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency (ABSDA).

To the best of my knowledge, following enquiries throughout the whole of ABSDA, office equipment to the value of £305 remains unaccounted for, made up in the main of minor items such as calculators and mains adapters. There is no proof of theft and there have therefore, been no criminal prosecutions. There have been no instances of information technology material going missing.

As a whole, office equipment in ABSDA, including information technology material, is well documented, highly visible and as a result, appropriately safeguarded.

I hope this fully answers your query.

Letter from J. R. Drew to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture stolen from, or unaccounted for by, his department and its agencies over the past 12 months. As this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO), I am replying in respect of this agency.

Thirteen items of IT equipment valued at £14,595 were written off in FY96/97. These were stolen in one incident at one of our Contract Repair Offices. This included a PC Server which originally cost £9,178. A full investigation by the police failed to shed any light on the burglary or the perpetrators and gave no prospect of recovery.

There is no consolidated figure yet available for all stores losses in FY 96/97. The total amount written off in FY 95/96 for all reasons was £24,545 covering 211 individual items.

Letter from C. A. Gordon to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about losses and thefts of equipment and furniture form this Agency over the last 12 months, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Deputy Chief Executive of the Army Individual Training Organisation.

Records are maintained of all equipment and furniture stolen, irreparably damaged or unaccounted for, but they do no invariably distinguish between these losses where the sums involved are small. Within these limits, the information you have requested is shown below. You may, however, like to note that a large number of the items included in the Damaged or Unaccounted For column are small items of cutlery etc of little intrinsic value.

Numbers of items:		Total	Individual items valued at
Stolen	Damaged or unaccounted for	value	over £5000
79	1,960	149,448	(1) Victaulic pipe (£41,049) (2) 110v power tools (£10,143) (3) Night vision Goggles (£13,438 (4) Digital master unit (£9,151)

Included in the above are three items of IT equipment with a total value of £5243, which have all been stolen.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from I. G. McIntyre to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence/Her Majesty's Government about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen or are otherwise unaccounted for during the last 12 months, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Dental Agency.

Equipment and furniture lost or unaccounted for with the Defence Dental Agency is listed below:

(a) Miscellaneous Medical/Dental Equipment items x 32 = £2561.87

(b) Information Technology Material = £ NIL

I hope this is of help.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply, on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA), to your question asking for information about property stolen or otherwise unaccounted for during the last twelve months.

DERA procedures identify two categories of equipment, items valued at more than £10,000 and items valued at less than £10,000. The responsibility for maintaining registers, safeguarding equipment and investigating any losses relating to items valued at less than £10,000 is devolved to a working level. There are more than 600 such registers kept within DERA. Items valued at more than £10,000 are recorded centrally, are routinely checked and any loss or damage investigation is notified centrally.

No items valued at £10,000 or more have been reported centrally as lost, stolen or damaged during the past twelve months. Because of the devolved nature of the records held on equipment valued at less than £10,000 it has not been possible to collect this information in the time available.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Letter from Ron Smith to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the loss of equipment and furniture by Defence Agencies as this matter, in respect of the Defence Secondary Care Agency (DSCA), falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the DSCA.

In the DSCA there were, in the last twelve months, 355 items unaccounted for to a total value of £11,644; of these, it is believed none were stolen. In addition, there were three items of IT equipment unaccounted for (total value £2,200) and six IT items which we believe were individually valued at £5K or over.

Letter from W. E. Speadbury to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

In the absence on duty of the Chief Executive, I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen and are otherwise unaccounted for during the past 12 months.

I am pleased to report that during this period no equipment or furniture has been stolen or is otherwise unaccounted for.

Letter from F. A. Bush to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, about stolen and unaccounted for equipment and furniture, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Acting Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency.

During the last 12 months, we have identified the loss of 97 International Standards Organisation (ISO) containers, which are missing following operations over the past 4 years in the former Republic of Yugoslavia. Their value is approximately £174K and within this total there are 7 refrigerated containers, each valued at £5000 or more.

Letter from B. E. Nimick to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have either been stolen or otherwise unaccounted for as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Medical Supplies Agency.

No such equipment or furniture has been reported stolen or unaccounted for over the past 12 months.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have been stolen or unaccounted for during the last 12 months, as this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office.

The type and value of equipment and furniture stolen from the Meteorological Office in the last year is as follows:

Dell Pentium PC and network card valued at £2,000

HP Laserjet 5 printer valued at £3,000

Dell PC valued at £1,500

Laptop stolen from employees' care valued at £2,000.

No other items are unaccounted for.

I hope this gives you the information you need.

Letter from Mr. S. R. Hill to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 27 February 1997:

1. I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for during the past 12 months, as this matter falls within my area of repsonsibility as Chief Executive of the Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation (NARO).

2. Four items only have been stolen, amounting to a total value of £294.23.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times in each of the past five years the royal yacht has been used for private journeys; where and by whom these journeys were made; and what payment for each voyage was received. [16911]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 February 1997]: During the past five years, Her Majesty's yacht Britannia has been used for private journeys on the following occasions:

Dates	Embarked	From/to
6–18 August 1992	The Queen The Duke of Edinburgh The Duke of York The Princess Royal The Prince Edward	Portsmouth/Aberdeen
5—16 August 1993	The Queen The Duke of Edinburgh The Duke of York The Princess Royal The Prince Edward	Portsmouth/Aberdeen
1994	nil
3–14 August 1995	The Queen The Duke of Edinburgh The Prince Edward	Portsmouth/Aberdeen
7–17 August 1996	The Queen The Duke of Edinburgh The Princess Royal Captain Timothy Laurence	Portsmouth/Aberdeen

The voyage in August 1995 included an official visit by Her Majesty the Queen to Oban. The voyage in August 1996 included an official visit by Her Majesty the Queen to Stranraer. Provision for HMY Britannia is currently made from defence votes, and payments are not made by individual users. Following the Government's decision to commission a replacement for Britannia, the Queen has indicated that she and other members of the royal family wish to make repayment on a basis to be agreed for any personal use made of the new royal yacht.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rules govern whether a voyage made by the royal yacht is official or private. [16890]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 February 1997]: Official voyages by HMY Britannia include public duties, both royal and commercial, and her regular activities such as training. Private voyages are any that do not include public duties.

HEALTH

Waiting Times

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each quarter since March 1988 the mean and median waiting times for (a) in-patient admission to hospital, (b) day case treatment and (c) all admissions from waiting lists to hospital in England. [15446]

Mr. Horam: Estimated mean and median waiting times for patients waiting for treatment on an in-patient or day case basis and for all patients waiting at the end of each quarter since March 1988 are given in the table.

Lariam

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 February, Official Report, column 284, what research trials of Lariam have been carried out by (a) drug companies and (b) other bodies since 1990; and if the Medicines Control Agency has reviewed the results of those trials since that date. [17207]

Mr. Malone: As stated in my reply of 13 February, information on research trials held by the Licensing Authority is confidential. The Medicines Control Agency evaluates the results of studies and other relevant data.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the contracts awarded by his

Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992, and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17613]

Mr. Horam: Information regarding the numbers and nature of contracts awarded by this Department could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The total sums paid to those suppliers listed are as follows:

	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £	1996–97 £

Figures for 1991–92 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Authority Social Services

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria he uses to assess the performance of local authority social services departments; if he will publish a list of social services departments ranked by their performance according to these criteria; and if he will make a statement. [17671]

Mr. Burns: We recently published "Better Value For Money in Social Services", a national overview of trends and costs in social services in England over the last decade or so. Copies are available in the Library. This report, together with other published data, should assist local authorities to assess their own efficiency to ensure their services give value for money. We do not define centrally criteria which would form a basis for the performance of individual social services departments to be measured and ranked. Performance indicators for all services provided by local authorities are published annually by the Audit Commission.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy in respect of public inquiries into the actions of social services departments in alleged cases of child neglect; and if he will make a statement. [17663]

Mr. Burns: Section 81 of the Children Act 1989 provides that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State may cause an inquiry to be held into any matter connected with the social services committee of a local authority, in so far as those functions relate to children. Section 84 of the Children Act provides that if my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is satisfied that a local authority has failed, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any of the duties imposed under the Children Act, he may make an order declaring the authority to be in default with respect to that duty. The order may contain directions for the purpose of ensuring that the duty is complied with. It is unlikely that it would be appropriate to use section 84 to investigate an individual's case.

Section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 requires local authorities to act under the general guidance of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in the exercise of their social services functions. The guidance called "Working Together under the Children Act 1989" was issued under section 7. Part 8 of that guidance requires that, whenever an individual case involves an incident leading to the death of a child where child abuse is confirmed or suspected, or a child protection issue likely to be of major public concern arises, there should be an individual review by each agency and a composite review by the area child protection committee.

Dental Services (Wandsworth)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified dentists provide national health service dental treatment in the London borough of Wandsworth. [17590]

Mr. Malone: One hundred and sixty-three dentists with practices in the London borough of Wandsworth were on the health authority list at 31 December 1996. This covers principal dentists, their assistants and vocational trainees.

District Health Authorities (Purchasing)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the purchasing plans of district health authorities for 1997–98. [17680]

Mr. Malone: Regional offices of the national health service executive assess the purchasing plans of health authorities for consistency with national policies and priorities for the NHS, in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring his Department has undertaken of the purchasing policies of district health authorities. [17681]

Mr. Malone: Regional offices of the national health service executive manage health authorities' performance to ensure progress against national policies and priorities for the NHS, in the light of local circumstances.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to lift the ban on relatives of CJD victims being blood donors. [17543]

Mr. Horam: There are no plans to alter the national blood service guidelines which exclude relatives of people who have suffered from Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease from giving blood. This exclusion is in line with Council of Europe guidelines. I should emphasise, however, that this is a precautionary measure only. There is no epidemiological evidence of transmission of CJD through blood or blood products.

Influenza Immunisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 24 February, Official Report, columns 73–74, (1) what percentage of those suffering from (a) chronic respiratory disease, (b) chronic heart disease, (c) kidney failure, (d) diabetes and (e) diseases and treatment suppressing the immune system were immunised against influenza in the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [17925]

(2) what percentage of those in long-term residential care were vaccinated against influenza in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [17927]

(3) what percentage of (a) nursing homes and (b) residential homes had their residents immunised against influenza in each of the last years for which figures are available. [17922]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not held centrally. The recommendations for influenza immunisation broadly outline the underlying diseases which put people at risk of serious illness should they develop influenza. However, it is ultimately for the clinical judgment of the doctor concerned whether to offer vaccine to an individual patient. The doctor will take into account the likelihood of that patient developing a complication of influenza such as pneumonia, or of their underlying disease being aggravated, as in asthma. They will vary between patients. General practitioners are recommended to identify their patients who are likely to need influenza immunisation and order the vaccine as necessary; they are encouraged to increase the uptake of immunisation in their areas each year. Immunisation requirements for people in long-term residential care and nursing homes are determined locally.

General Practitioners

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of (a) general practitioners as a whole, (b) general practitioner fundholders, (c) general practitioner non-fundholders, (d) equity partners, (e) non-equity partners, (f) salaried assistants and (g) general practitioner registrars in vocational training were (i) male and (ii) female in each of the last five years. [17929]

Mr. Malone: The information requested has been placed in the Library. Information is not available on equity and non-equity partners.

Hospital Travel Costs Scheme

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) the number of claims received anc (b) the average fare reimbursed per claim under the hospital travel costs scheme in the most recent year for which figures are available. [17913]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Elderly Care Costs

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the costs to local authorities of (a) care assessment and (b) care management for services for elderly people for each year since 1989–90 for which information is available. [17824]

Mr. Burns: For 1994–95, the latest year for which information is available, the figures of total local authority expenditure on care assessment/care management for elderly people may be found in table 6 of the statistical bulletin "Personal Social Services current and capital expenditure in England: 1994–95", copies of which are available in the Library. Separate data on care assessment and care management, and expenditure data for these services for elderly people in earlier years are not available.

Food Poisoning

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many laboratory reports of salmonella in foodstuffs were provided to the public health laboratory service in England and Wales in each year since the introduction of the new reporting system; what is the number to date in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [17653]

Mr. Horam: The figures are given in the following table.

Salmonella
England and Wales annual totals—human food isolates

1. Salmonella figures encompass the identification of salmonellas from samples taken by environmental health officers as part of their routine inspection and sampling procedures and salmonellas found in foodstuffs sampled in structured food surveys and also salmonellas identified in foodstuffs investigated following an outbreak of clinical illness.

2. The new reporting system was introduced in January 1992 when data from the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre and the Central Public Health Laboratory were combined to produce the PHLS Salmonella Common Data Set and also when the new outbreak reporting system for gastro-intestinal disease commenced. Neither of these could have changed practices in relation to laboratory reports on Salmonella in foodstuffs.

3. The figures cover isolates referred to the Laboratory of Enteric Pathogens by both PHLS and non-PHLS laboratories for confirmation and typing.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many laboratory reports of (a) E. coli and (b) listeria in foodstuffs were provided to the public health laboratory service in England and Wales in each year since 1979. [17654]

Mr. Horam: The figures are given in the following table:

[2] Figures on Listeria monocytogenes are up to 24 February, figures on Verocytotoxin-producing E. coli 0157 are up to 21 February.
1. Surveys of cheeses and pate were undertaken in the late 1980s and early 1990s to assess the problems of contamination and have been repeated in more recent years to assess the improvements in the microbiological quality of such foodstuffs.
2. The first human isolation of E. coli 0157 in England and Wales was made in 1982 and no food isolation was made by the PHLS until 1992.

Hospitals (Military Personnel)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent medically qualified military personnel are used in NHS hospitals. [16230]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Defence Secondary Care Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Ron Smith to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 27 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the extent to which medically qualified military personnel are used in the NHS as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Secondary Care Agency (DSCA).

Amongst the hospitals which comprise the DSCA, three Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs) at Peterborough, Frimley Park near Camberley and Derriford, Plymouth are situated in NHS Trust hospitals. The MDHUs and their military staff are not separate from the civilian hospitals but fully integrated in the day-to-day business of patient care. A total of 504 medically qualified staff work in the MDHUs. In addition, a further 90 military medical personnel from the DSCA and other parts of the Defence Medical Services are currently seconded to NHS hospitals for specialist training.

WALES

Fiscal Deficit and Government Expenditure

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the fiscal deficit in Wales for the most recent year available; [17866]

(2) what was the gross Government expenditure in Wales broken down into (a) identifiable, (b) unidentifiable and (c) other expenditure in the last year for which figures are available. [17872]

Mr. Hague: The latest available information for Wales is shown in the tables:

Tax

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much tax was raised in Wales broken down by (a) income tax, (b) VAT, (c) corporation tax and (d) other tax in the last year for which figures are available. [17873]

Mr. Hague: The latest available information for Wales is shown in the table:

The estimate for corporation tax, which is not shown separately in the table, is £924 million.

Motorways

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many kilometres of motorway are currently (a) open, (b) under construction, (c) planned in Wales, (i) as new motorway or (ii) as existing motorway being widened. [17275]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Some 126 km of M4 motorway is open; no new motorway is under construction; The M4 Magor-Coldra widening has been completed, although final surfacing is to be carried out in April; 24.2 km of new motorway is planned; 12.7 km of existing motorway is to be widened.

Council House Sales

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money has been raised from the sale of council houses in Wales since 1979; what percentage of this money is still held in reserve by local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [17132]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: At 31 March 1996, the total amount raised by local authorities from the sale of council houses since the inception of the right to buy scheme in 1981 was £993 million. It is not possible from local authority returns to separate the amounts held in reserve from the sale of council houses from other capital receipts held in the housing revenue account. Capital receipts held in the housing revenue account at 31 March 1996, both set aside against credit liabilities and usable–as defined in section 60 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989—totalled £246 million.

Meningitis

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the recent outbreak of meningitis C in Nefyn, Gwynedd. [17592]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I are aware of the two cases of meningococcal septicaemia in Nefyn Gwynedd, whether appropriate control measures have been adopted by North Wales health authority to prevent the further spread of infection.

Prescriptions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 24 February, Official Report, columns 91–92, how many investigations are currently proceeding in each health authority into allegations of transfer by multiple pharmacies from one pharmacy for processing in another health authority to maximise payments of professional allowances. [17921]

Mr. Hague: Inquiries made of health authorities in Wales indicate that one such investigation is under way.

Influenza Immunisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what percentage of (a) nursing homes and (b) residential homes had their residents immunised against influenza in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [17923]

(2) what percentage of those suffering from (a) chronic respiratory disease, (b) chronic heart disease, (c) kidney failure, (d) diabetes and (e) diseases and treatment suppressing the immune system were immunised against influenza in the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [17924]

(3) what percentage of those in long-term residential care were vaccinated against influenza in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [17926]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not held centrally.

General Practitioners

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sole practitioner GPs there were in the Welsh NHS in each of the last five years; and what proportion they constituted of the aggregate GP work force in Wales. [17914]

Mr. Hague: The information is shown in the table:

	Single handed practitioners	Percentage of unrestricted principles who are single handed
October 1992	126	7.5
October 1993	129	7.6
October 1994	130	7.6
October 1995	130	7.6
March 1996	129	7.5

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the relative outcomes of treatments carried out by GPs in group practice who (i) have and (ii) do not have personal lists. [17917]

Mr. Hague: While there are a number of research projects in primary care, there are none which address this topic.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of (a) general practitioners as a whole, (b) general practitioner fundholders, (c) general practitioner non-fundholders, (d) equity partners, (e) non-equity partners, (f) salaried assistants and (g) general practitioner registrars in vocational training were (i) male and (ii) female in each of the last five years. [17928]

Mr. Hague: This information is shown in the table. Data for general practitioner fundholders and non-fundholders are not centrally available by gender.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of general practitioners in group practices maintained personal lists in each of the last five years; and what proportion this was of the aggregate general practitioner work force. [17918]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not held centrally.

European Summit (Cardiff)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State of Wales what arrangements he has made with the Cardiff county council for assistance with refurbishment works at (a) Cardiff city hall, (b) Cardiff Central station and (c) other areas of essential infrastructure in preparation for the European summit conference in June 1998; and if he will make a statement. [17915]

Mr. Hague: I have allocated under the Welsh capital challenge scheme £1.5 million to Cardiff county council for the refurbishment of the city hall as well as a further £2 million for improvements to Cardiff central square. My officials are in discussions with the county council about these and other projects which will improve the city centre for the European Council in June 1998.

SCOTLAND

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulas for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed. [14807]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Collection of data:

Postcodes are used for collating data in the following cases:

- compilation of the Scottish Register of Employment, a register of manufacturing units in Scotland with 11 or more employees;
- analysis of further education college students by geographical origin—eg Scottish, rest of UK;
- as a building block by general register office in the collection of statistics on vital events and in the census of population.

In general, statistical surveys conducted by the Scottish Office will incorporate post code units as a geographic indicator. These will be used primarily to aggregate the data into higher order statistics—eg local authorities.

Distribution of grants:

For the purpose of rural grant schemes, the definition of rural Scotland relies to some extent on post code sectors. The definition is used with the proviso that people can still apply for grants if their locality is distinctly rural even if, by the arbitrary application of post codes, their area is classed as urban. Rural grants schemes are currently under review.

Although support to local authorities is not distributed on the basis of postcode areas, some limited data, originally collected by other departments and agencies by postcode area and then aggregated to local authority units by the Scottish Office, are used in the calculation of certain grant-aided expenditure assessments. Such processes are continually reviewed by the Department and the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.

Motorways

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many kilometres of motorway are currently (a) open, (b) under construction and (c) planned in Scotland (i) as new motorway and (ii) as existing motorway being widened. [17267]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In Scotland, 4[illegible] kilometres of motorway are open, 2 kilometres are under construction, 79 kilometres of new motorway are planned and 2 kilometres of existing motorway are planned to be widened.

Road Markings and Signposting

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve road markings and signposting; and if he will make a statement. [17362]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The placing and maintenance of road signs and markings is the responsibility of the traffic authority—in Scotland, the local traffic authority for local roads, and the Scottish Office Development Department on behalf of the Secretary of State for Scotland for trunk roads and motorways. The signs and markings used are required to conform with regulations, principally the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions—TSRGD—1994, made jointly by the Secretaries of State for Transport, for Scotland and for Wales, or to be specially authorised by the Secretary of State. The Department of Transport is currently preparing a statutory instrument to amend the TSRGD to include new sign designs in response to changing traffic management needs and techniques. Work is also in hand to update the joint guidance published by the three Departments on the correct design and use of signs.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the financial memorandums which govern the payments made to owners and occupiers of SSSI's who have notified Scottish Natural Heritage of intent to damage an SSSI, to ensure greater value for money. [17489]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government plan to issue a consultation paper on a Great Britain basis later this year on possible changes to the financial guidelines for management agreements in SSSIs.

Electronic Tagging

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the expenditure on electronic tagging in Scotland to date. [17692]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There has been no expenditure on electronic tagging in Scotland. Expenditure on pilot projects will not commence until such time as the relevant provisions of the Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill have been enacted.

Holocaust Denial

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the policy of the Lord Advocate in respect of the prosecution of holocaust denial material. [17540]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that he has no policy specifically directed to the prosecution of holocaust denial material. In relation to any police reports containing allegations of holocaust denial, the Crown will follow the same approach as it does with other allegations of criminal conduct. The decision whether to take proceedings, and the nature of any proceedings, will be determined by an assessment of the available evidence and the public interest, having regard to the whole circumstances of the offence. Proceedings could be taken only where there is sufficient evidence that (1) the person who published or distributed the "holocaust denial material" intended thereby to stir up racial hatred or, having regard to all the circumstances, racial hatred was likely to be stirred up thereby, and (2) the material was threatening, abusive or insulting.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many prosecutions relating to holocaust denial material there have been in Scotland in each year since 1979; [17541]

(2) how many prosecutions there have been for incitement to racial hatred in Scotland since 1979. [17542]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that the information requested is not available.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Written Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1), pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, columns 535–36, if he will list the reasons for the records on the costs of answering parliamentary questions not being retained; and if he will make a statement; [17593]

(2), pursuant to his oral answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 1054, if he will list the 10 questions which cost the most to answer since 1989; which hon. Members asked them; and what was the cost. [17594]

Mr. Newton: There is no arrangement for systematically estimating the cost of answering every individual parliamentary question.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

South Africa

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding the importing of South African goods; and what plans he has to assist South African industries to expand their world trade. [17712]

Dr. Liam Fox: Negotiations are in progress between the European Commission and the South African Government on South Africa's qualified accession to the Lomé convention and on a possible free trade agreement. The British Government are pressing for swift progress on this issue and have made it clear that they support the most liberal agreement possible. Representations in support of a generous line towards South Africa have been received from numerous members of the British public and from interested organisations.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings he has had in the last year to discuss housing and employment problems in South Africa. [17713]

Dr. Fox: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has not, in the last year, held meetings to address these specific issues. My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has, however, had numerous meetings both in Britain and in South Africa, to discuss South Africa's development needs. Housing is not one of the five agreed priorities for the British aid programme, but our high commission in Pretoria has funded projects assisting with housing. The British development division in South Africa is also helping with small enterprise development and job creation.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Voluntary Bodies

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the total funding given by central Government Departments to voluntary bodies in the financial year 1994–95; and if she will make a statement. [18467]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Central Government funding of voluntary organisations in 1994–95, including grants from non-departmental public bodies, amounted to £3,453 million. Of this, £2,496 million was payments to housing associations. The remaining £957 million went direct to voluntary organisations to support the provision of services and a wide range of activities and projects, an increase in Government funding of 5 per cent. in cash terms and 3 per cent. in real terms over the level of provision in 1993–94.

The amount spent by each Department in 1994–95 with comparative figures for 1993–94 was as follows:

The 1994–95 figures include some data which have not been collected in past years. In order to provide a year-on-year comparison, similar data have also been obtained for 1993–94 and the figures for 1993–94 contained in the reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) given by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for the Home Department on 19 July 1995,—Official Report, columns 1445–47 have been updated in the table.

In the case of indirect grants—payments by Government Departments to intermediary bodies, for distribution by them—end recipients are understood to be voluntary organisations in most but not necessarily all cases; and some of the expenditure may be used by the intermediary body in administering grant applications and payments.

I am also placing in the Libraries of both Houses reports further analysing Government grants to voluntary organisations in 1994–95 and 1993–94.

Television Licences (Pensioners)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of the cost of providing free television licences for old age pensioners in Wales. [17877]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 27 February 1997]: I understand that the cost of providing free television licences for all old age pensioners in Wales would be likely to be in the order of £30 million a year.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people (a) were assessed under, (b) failed and (c) passed the habitual residence test in each month since August 1994 in each of the Newham benefit offices broken down by (i) United Kingdom, (ii) European Economic Area and (iii) other; [17831]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of the habitual residence test in the London borough of Newham since August 1994 for (i) Canning Town, (ii) Plaistow and (iii) Stratford benefit offices. [17833]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 27 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many people (a) were assessed (b) failed and (c) passed the Habitual Residence Test (HRT) in each month since August 1994 in each of the Newham Benefit offices broken down by (i) United Kingdom, (ii) EEA and (iii) other and; if he will provide a breakdown of the HRT in the London Borough of Newham since August 1994 for (i) Canning Town, (ii) Plaistow and (iii) Stratford benefit offices.

Benefits Agency (BA) statistics are collated at District level and not routinely by individual office. However the BA District of Newham, which includes the offices at Canning Town, Plaistow and Stratford, do maintain HRT statistics for individual offices to assist in the deployment of staff resources.

The information is shown in the attached tables. The same level of information may not be available for all benefits and it will not be possible to obtain comparable data for every District.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Housing and Council Tax Benefits

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to allow local authorities to contract out housing benefit and council tax benefit. [18484]

Mr. Roger Evans: I announced on 12 November 1996, Official Report, column 196, my intention to open consultation with the local authority associations on a proposal to bring forward an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 which would allow contractors to carry out housing and council tax benefit determinations. Existing legislation prevents contractors from making benefit determinations and reduces the efficiency of contracts which local authorities are able to negotiate. Following consultation with the local authority associations, I am laying before Parliament today the Contracting Out (Functions of Local Authorities in relation to Income-related Benefits) Order 1997. The order will allow contractors to carry out the bulk of housing and council tax benefits administration, including benefit determinations. However, some functions relating to claims for central Government subsidy, overpayments, prosecutions, discretionary payments and appeals will be reserved for local authorities.

War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what requests he has received to make an oral statement to the House on recent developments in relation to sensorineural hearing loss and war pensions; and if he will make a statement. [17895]

Mr. Lilley: On 5 December 1996, my right hon. and noble Friend Lord MacKay of Ardbredknish announced to the Central Advisory Committee that he was seeking its views on a package of minor reforms to the war pension system. On the same occasion, he advised the Central Advisory Committee about changes to the handling of cases involving sensorineural hearing loss. Both prompted a substantial number of representations, only two of which suggested that an oral statement would be appropriate.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Selective Cull Scheme

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if producers who have cattle slaughtered under the selective cull scheme will be able to claim suckler cow and beef special premium and hill livestock compensatory allowances for those cattle slaughtered in the retention period for those payments; and if he will make a statement. [17397]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 24 February 1997]: We have been in contact with the European Commission on this point and hope to be able to make an announcement in the near future.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total public expenditure under the CAP paid in the last year to farmers in (a) Devon and (b) Cornwall. [17391]

Mr. Baldry: Total public expenditure under the CAP paid to farmers in 1995—the last year for which figures are available—was as follows:

(a) Devon: £55,005,315

(b) Cornwall: £30,283,103

It should be noted that a small proportion of these totals relates to non-CAP schemes funded by the EU and in some cases amounts include an element of national as well as EU funding. Devon and Cornwall farmers also benefit from expenditure on market support measures, even though this is not paid directly to them.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Insolvency Service

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the prior options studies of the Insolvency Service, companies registry and trading standards branches of the Department of Economic Development have been completed; and if he will make a statement on the outcomes. [18507]

Mr. Ancram: These studies, which were undertaken by independent consultants, have been completed and Ministers have concluded that, given the size of the organisations involved, agentisation, either on an individual basis, or collectively, would be inappropriate. Ministers have agreed, however, that next steps principles should be applied to the management of the statutory and regulatory functions which all three branches are required to perform.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Juvenile Cases (Legal Aid)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what were (a) the total costs of legal aid in juvenile cases in the youth court and (b) the average cost per case in the latest year for which figures are available. [17284]

Mr. Streeter: The total gross cost of legal aid in respect of juvenile cases heard in the youth court during 1995–96 was £16.8 million. The average unit cost of these proceedings was £439.

DEFENCE

Radiobiological Research Laboratory Alverstoke

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) reports and (b) other publications currently available from the radiobiological research laboratory at Alverstoke. [17901]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 28 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question asking for a list of reports and publications currently available from the Radiobiological Research Laboratory at Alverstoke. In the absence of more specific information I have assumed that your question refers to the former Defence Radiological Protection Service, now known as DERA Radiation Protection Services (DRPS) at Alverstoke. As Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) this matter is my responsibility.

A list of reports and publications which have been issued by DRPS subsequent to the list published in Hansard, 8 December 1993 Col 285, is as follows: This list excludes classified reports and work which is still underway and not yet cleared for publication.

I hope this is helpful.

Defence Costs Studies

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each of his Department's defence cost studies; what were the estimated savings accruing from the implementation of proposals contained in each study; and what is his current estimate of how much each proposal will save. [18114]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to my answer given to the hon. Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans) on 26 November 1996, Official Report, columns 196–97.

Nuclear Tests (Compensation)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of claims that former service personnel who participated in the nuclear tests programme in Australia and the south Pacific have developed (a) leukaemia, excluding chronic lymphatic and (b) multiple myeloma as a result of those tests; and if he will make a statement. [17953]

Mr. Soames: My Department's policy is based on the conclusions of the studies by the National Radiological Protection Board. The second report concluded that the excess of leukaemia in test participants compared with controls in the period two to 25 years after the tests is likely to be a chance finding, although the possibility that test participation may have caused a small risk of developing leukaemia in the early years after the tests cannot be completely ruled out. It also concluded that data available from the additional follow-up since 1988 did not support the suggestion from the previous report that participants may have experienced a small hazard of multiple myeloma, which also appeared to be a chance finding.

The general conclusion of the NRPB studies was that participation in the nuclear weapon testing programme had not had a detectable effect on the participants' expectation of life nor on their risk of developing cancer or other diseases.

These findings provide no grounds for claims for compensation and no such claims have been made against my Department.

Law of Armed Conflict

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the revision of the manual of military law of armed conflict currently planned by Her Majesty's Government are part of a concerted NATO revision. [18101]

Mr. Soames: No. However, the authors have been in informal consultations with other nations which are working on similar projects including some NATO countries.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the planned new joint service manual on the law of armed conflict to replace part III of the manual of military law will be published; what consultations will be held on its revision; and if he is prepared to accept representations on it. [18091]

Mr. Soames: A text for a draft joint service manual was prepared some years ago but held in abeyance pending decisions on the ratification by the UK of the additional protocols to the Geneva conventions of 1949. That text is currently being updated to take into account recent developments in the field although no final date can be given as yet for its completion. The draft is being prepared by service officers, assisted by an eminent academic consultant, and the final text will be subject to comment both within the Ministry of Defence and other interested Departments prior to publication. There are no plans for public consultation or comment. Once published, it will be available to the public and subject to regular update and amendment.

Family Quarters (Rents)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial assistance his Department plans to provide for service personnel to assist with increases in rents for family quarters; and if he will make a statement. [17948]

Mr. Soames: We do not propose to introduce any additional financial assistance to compensate for the rises in service accommodation charges.

The Armed Forces Pay Review Body recommends levels of pay and charges broadly comparable to those in the civilian sector. The level of accommodation charge is based on the costs of comparable housing, less an abatement to take account of the relative disadvantages of living in service accommodation. Taking account of the increases in pay due to come into effect on 1 April and 1 December 1997, no personnel will experience a net decrease in pay as a result of the increases in accommodation charges.

Scots Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representation he has received from General Sir David Scott-Barrett of the Scots Guards regarding Scots Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. [18208]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. Friend has received one representation direct from General Scott-Barrett. He and I have received a number of others from hon. Members about the case of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright.

Aircraft Crashes (Investigations)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's aircraft crashes which are still under investigation. [18112]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is as follows:

10 January 1996: 2 RAF Tornado F3s

23 January 1996: RAF Jaguar GR1B

13 February 1996: RAF Hawk T1

19 February 1996: RAF Harrier GR7

23 February 1996: RAF Tornado GR1

26 February 1996: RAF Tornado GR1

26 February 1996: RN Harrier T4N

26 May 1996: RAF Hawk T1

18 September 1996: RAF Jaguar T2A

28 September 1996: MOD(PE) Tornado F3

9 January 1997: RAF Harrier GR7

15 February 1997: RAF Puma HC1

Empty Homes (Disposal)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, Official Report, column 367, what were the total receipts for the sale of the empty homes by the end of summer 1996. [18113]

Mr. Soames: Of the 5,348 disposals, 2,373 formed part of the service families married quarter sale to Annington Homes and the value of surplus homes cannot be separately identified. A total of 2,687 were sold through the normal processes but receipts information is not held centrally and therefore it has not been possible to collate cost data in the time available: I will write to the hon. Member. Two hundred and fifteen houses were demolished as surplus or as part of the demolition and rebuild programme and thus did not attract receipts. Seventy-three houses were leased pending later sale.

The above figures cover the 18-month period to 30 September 1996 and include the Annington Homes sales for which contracts were exchanged on 24 September 1996.

Al Bilad Building

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his staff work from the Al Bilad building, Riyadh, Saudi Arabia; if his Department is the owner of the building; and which organisation is responsible for its security arrangements. [17238]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 24 February 1997]: The building mentioned is not owned by my Department. I am withholding information on the security arrangements under exemption 4(f) of the code of practice on access to government information 1997.

TREASURY

Income Tax (Recovery of Interest)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he proposes to take to stop computer-generated claims for interest on tax payments received under self-assessment after 31 January where the cost of recovering the interest exceeds the interest; and if he will make a statement. [17182]

Mr. Jack: Self-assessment statements of account were not, and will not, be issued solely to advise taxpayers of small amounts of interest due.

Repair and Maintenance (VAT)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the gross sum collected per annum by HM Customs and Excise in respect of the VAT levied on the repair and maintenance of private dwellings. [17082]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 24 February 1997]: Statistics on the VAT collected on repairs and maintenance of private dwellings are not directly available. The gross VAT liability in 1995 in respect of repairs, maintenance and alterations carried out by contractors on private sector housing is estimated at £1.2 billion.

Inland Revenue (Corruption)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date the former head of the Inland Revenue special investigations unit (a) was arrested for corrupt practices and (b) requested information relating to the tax returns made by a right hon. Member. [17367]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 24 February 1997]: Mr. Michael Allcock, the former head of the Inland Revenue's London special office 2 was arrested on suspicion of corruption on 27 July 1993.

With reference to the second part of the hon. Member's question, the rules on taxpayer confidentiality prevent the disclosure of any information relating to the tax affairs of any particular taxpayer or taxpayers.

Vehicle and Fuel Taxation

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent environmental considerations informed the scale of increase in vehicle fuel taxation in his last budget. [17361]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Government's policy on fuel duties is an important part of their overall environmental policy. The policy of successive UK Governments has been to charge duty on road fuels at rates which will not only raise sufficient revenue but also take account of the need to conserve finite stocks of fossil fuels a protect the general environment.

A commitment to raise road fuel duties by an average of at least 5 per cent. each year in real terms was announced in the 1993 Budget. The aim of these tax rises is to encourage fuel efficiency and to help to control harmful pollution. This will help to reach the Rio convention commitment by returning emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases—methane, nitrous oxide—to their 1990 levels by the year 2000. As a result, pollution from vehicles is already coming down.

In order to encourage the use of high-mileage vehicles in our towns and cities and of more environmentally friendly fuels, two measures were announced: the duty rate of ultra-low sulphur diesel will be reduced by 1p per litre relative to ordinary diesel, when the necessary international agreement is attained. Ultra-low sulphur diesel is cleaner than ordinary diesel, but is slightly more expensive to produce. This measure will encourage the use of ultra-low sulphur diesel. We also announced 25 per cent. reduction in the duty on road fuel gases. This means the duty rate for gas used as road fuel is now 21.13 pence per kilogram—approximately 1.5 litres—compared with 41.68p per litre for leaded petrol and 36.86p per litre for unleaded petrol and diesel road fuel.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the yield in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; and what is the estimated yield in 1996–97 from (i) petrol duty, (ii) derv duty, (iii) vehicle excise duty, (iv) VAT on petrol and derv rates and (v) VAT on vehicle sales. [17515]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information requested is shown in the table:

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97 (forecast)
petrol duty	9.6	10.1	—
derv duty	4.4	5.3	—
Total fuel duties	14.0	15.4	[1]17.4
VED	3.8	4.0	4.3
VAT on fuel duties	2.5	2.7	3.0
VAT on vehicle sales	3.4	3.6	[2]n/a

[1] Petrol and derv forecast receipts are not published separately.
[2] Separate forecasts of VAT on vehicle sales are not available.

Local Tax Offices

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of local tax offices are meeting their performance targets for dealing with (a) personal callers, (b) telephone calls, (c) repayment claims and (d) correspondence. [17890]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue does not publish its performance against annual targets until results covering the full period are available and appropriate validation and checking of figures has been carried out.

Based on latest provisional figures, most local tax offices are currently on course to meet or exceed their annual targets for personal callers and telephone calls, but are unlikely to achieve their correspondence targets. The claims target applies only to specialist repayment offices, which are on course to meet or exceed this target.

Weatherguard, Halbeath, Fife

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in respect of the action by Customs and Excise against Weatherguard, Halbeath, Fife, in 1992–93 (a) the date and location of the seizure of jackets, (b) the number of jackets seized, (c) their country of manufacture and the manufacturer, (d) the haulier involved, (e) the date of the alleged criminal act, (f) the fine charged against the company, (g) the date when the fine was paid and (h) the intended destination of the jackets. [17262]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The Commissioners of Customs and Excise owe a duty of confidence to the trader in this case and cannot release the information requested.

Income Tax

Mr. Richards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue consequences of raising the basic rate of income tax in Wales to 25p in the pound. [17869]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The latest available information is for 1994–95. The full-year yield of increasing the basic rate of tax by 1p under the 1994–95 tax regime and at 1994–95 income levels is £70 million.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate of the revenue raised by a 50 per cent. tax rate on incomes of £40,000 plus per annum in Wales. [17867]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The latest available information is for 1994–95. The full-year yield under the 1994–95 tax regime and at 1994–95 income levels of introducing a new rate of 50 per cent. on taxable incomes above £40,000 is £30 million. The yield does not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of the new rate of tax.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue consequences of raising income tax thresholds in Wales so that 30,000 people would be removed from income tax liability. [17871]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The latest available information is for 1994–95. The full-year cost under the 1994–95 tax regime and at 1994–95 income levels of increasing non-aged and aged personal allowances by £330 is £70 million—this would have taken 30,000 taxpayers out of income tax.

Mr. Lamont: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the changes in the basic top rates of income tax over the last 30 years. [18144]

Mr. Jack: Tables 1.5 and 1.10 of the 1996–97 "Tax Benefit Reference Manual" gives income tax rates for years 1967–68 to 1996–97, a copy of which can be found in the Library.

Proposed rates for 1997–98 are as follows:

Taxable income £ per annul	Rate of income tax percentage
Up to 4,100	20
4,101–26,100	23
Over 26,101	40

European Funds (Republic of Ireland)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the net transfer of European funds to the Republic of Ireland in each of the last five years. [17875]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The European Court of Auditors annual reports indicate that the net benefits to the Republic of Ireland from the EC budget, for the years 1991 to 1995, the last five years for which information is available, are as listed in the table:

Year	Million ecu	£ million[1]
1991	2357.3	1650.3
1992	2140.1	1571.3
1993	2371.9	1846.6
1994	1752.0	1355.6
1995	1886.9	1545.2

[1] Converted from ecu to £ using the average annual exchange rate listed in the Annual White Paper, "Statement on the Community Budget".

Public Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18126]

Mr. Jack: Table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–8", the Red Book, is derived from returns made by Departments as part of the pre-Budget expenditure round. Although the Treasury publishes these figures, ultimate responsibility for each departmental figure remains with individual Departments. Detailed questions on table 5.5 should therefore be directed towards the relevant Department.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the past three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16182]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have asked directors of the Department's executive agencies to reply to the hon. Member separately.

For the headquarters of the Department, excluding agencies and the Government offices, it is not possible to provide information in the form requested. Temporary staff are recruited from employment agencies to cover, usually, short-term secretarial and administrative support duties. Data on the average length of temporary staff recruited from agencies, the numbers employed and the median cost paid to agencies per person employed are not available.

However, the agencies most commonly used in the past three years are Alfred Marks, Brook Street, Manpower, Josephine Summers and Kelly. The total cost to the Department for agency staff in the past three financial years is as follows;

1994–95 £0.4 million

1995–96: £1.3 million

1996–97 (April–January) £2.1 million

Expenditure in 1996–97 is not directly comparable with previous years, which do not take account of the machinery of government changes announced in July 1995.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 28 February 1997:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the use made by The Insolvency Service of private employment agencies.

I should first explain that The Service undertakes its own recruitment of permanent and many of its casual staff, and does not use the services of employment agencies for that purpose. It does however take on temporary staff from agencies, usually to cover a short-term need for example to assist in the completion of a specific project or to cover for the temporary absence of permanent staff. In addition, The Service has taken on accountancy and legal staff on short term contracts through agencies to support its investigative role.

The total cost to The Service of agency staff in each of the last two years has been—

1995–96: £2,650,400

The information held by The Service on its agency staff is not maintained in a form which would enable it to provide the further details you have asked for except at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Iain MacGregor to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 28 February 1997:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to answer the question on behalf of the Chief Executive of NWML who is on business away from the office. The answer is set out below.

Year	Agency (a)	Numbers (b)	Total cost (c)	Length of contract (d)[1]
Employment agencies
1993–94	Reed Employment	1	[2]—	14 months
1994–95	Reed Employment	1	[2]—	4 months
1995–96	Reed Employment	1	[2]—	4 months
1996–97	Walch Employment Ltd.	1	[2]—	3 months
Recruitment agencies
1995–96	Capita Recruitment Services	1	1,983	Permanent
1996–97	Draft Personnel Ltd.	1	2,645	Permanent

[1] We are unable to provide an average length of contract because two recruits remain members of staff.
[2] Because of the nature of payments to Employment Agencies we are unable to extract the information at reasonable cost.

Letter from J. C. Octon To Mr. Mike Hall, dated 28 February 1997:

In the absence of the Chief Executive I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about the use of private employment agencies.

The Patent Office operates in a competitive international market and has operated a policy of employing agency staff to minimise the risk to its permanent staff of redundancy consequent on fluctuations in demand. The agencies it has used to supply temporary staff are: Reed Employment, Securicor Recruitment Services Ltd., Western Staff Services, Acorn Recruitment, Manpower Employment Agency, Kelter International Ltd., Brook Street, Meridian Business Support, Kelly Services and Select Appointments PD Bureau—London. The monthly average number of agency staff employed in the last three years has been 1994: 30, 1995: 50 and 1996: 42 and the total annual cost £323,958, £539,689 and £495,240 respectively. The average hourly rate paid to the agencies for the staff supplied was around £4.20 in 1994, £4.50 in 1995 and £4.80 in 1996. The average length of employment for agency staff has been in the range 3.5 to 4 months. The Patent Office also employs a small number of specialist IT practitioners employed normally through specialist companies. The figures given above exclude such staff.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 28 February 1997:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade for information about the use of private employment agencies within his Department and Agencies. I am responding as Chief Executive of Companies House Executive Agency.

The following table gives names of agencies used over the last three years, the numbers of people from each agency, length of contract and the cost per hour.

Year	Agency name	Length of contract	Number employed	Cost per hour £
1994	Jobwise	5 weeks	1	6.85
1994–95	Target	13 weeks	1	6.50
1995	Office Angels	3 weeks	2	7.35
1996	Office Angels	2–3 weeks	2	8.25
1996	Pertemps	[1]2–17 weeks	5	[2]6.30

[2] Average 7.

The total cost to the Agency for the years 1995–96 was £20,580; the average cost per person recruited is £6.90 per hour; contract periods average 5–6 weeks per person.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 28 February 1997:

To ask the President of the Board of Trade, if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies.

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to the above PQ.

Over the past three years the RA has used the following private employment agencies:

1994–95

Accountancy Personnel

Adeeko/ADIA Ltd (Alfred Marks)

Arena Staff Agency

Manpower plc

Reed Staffing Services Ltd

1995–96

Adeeko/ADIA Ltd (Alfred Marks)

Badenoch and Clark

EGB

Manpower plc

Nextep Ltd

Office Angels

Professional Recruitment Solutions

Reed Staffing Services Ltd

1996–97

Adeeko/ADIA Ltd (Alfred Marks)

Badenoch and Clark

London Staff Bureau

Manpower plc

Nextep Ltd

Office Angels

RJC (UK) Ltd.

The total cost to the Radiocommunications Agency of using the employment agencies in the last three years was:

1994–95: £64,322.05

1996–97 (April–January): £277,809.17.

I am sorry that it is not possible to identify for each of the years the number of employment agency staff, the average length of contract for persons recruited from agencies and the median cost paid to agencies per person employed.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor, and the value of the contract in each case. [17608]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The following information is held centrally on contracts awarded to the companies in question:

Company	Number of contracts awarded since 1992
BMI	0
Capita	6
Sema	4

All the above contracts relate to external consultancy and their total value is £512,613; commercial sensitivity prevents the disclosure of individual contract values.

Information on other contracts could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The above information does not include contracts let by the Department's executive agencies, and I have asked the chief executives to reply separately to this question.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about contracts awarded to EDS, Andersens, BMI, Capita and Sema by The Insolvency Service since 1992.

The Insolvency Service awarded a contract by competitive tender to Capita Managed Services Limited in November 1995 for the collection of costs awarded by the courts against directors who are disqualified under section 6 of Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986. Capita's fees are based on a percentage of what they collect: it is thus not possible to say what fees will be earned by them in the three year period the contract runs.

No contracts have been awarded by The Insolvency Service to EDS, Andersens, BMI and Sema since 1992.

Letter from J. C. Octon to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

In the absence of the Chief Executive on official business abroad I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about contracts placed with various named contractors. The Patent Office has awarded no contracts to any of the companies listed in the period since 1992.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about contracts awarded to five companies.

The Agency employed Capita Recruitment last year to recruit a member of staff. We paid them at their normal commercial rate.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

Mr John Taylor, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs, has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Question about Agency contracts with certain firms.

Since 1992 the Agency has contracted with:

EDS Defence Ltd.,—investigation into increasing the usage and improving the quality of service available on shared channel private mobile radio services in the UK—£69,525;

EDS Defence Ltd.,—study into PMR channel usage—£62,000; and Sema Group Systems Ltd.,—development and documentation of project management standards—£15,150.

The Agency has also bought some IT equipment from GCAT (Govnerment IT/IS Catalogue) which Electronic Data Systems Ltd., (and ICL) operate on behalf of CCTA.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade about contracts awarded since 1992 to EDS, Andersens, BMI, Capita and Sema. I am replying in respect of Companies House Executive Agency.

Companies House has awarded one contract which meets these criteria. On 1 July 1996 Capita Managed Services Ltd., was awarded a contract to operate a telephone enquiry service and a service involving the acceptance and fulfilment of orders for company searches for delivering by post or fax. The contract is for a 3 year period, and an approximate annual value of £800,000.

Privatisation

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what terms the chief executive of Unipart was retained by his Department in connection with an initiative intended to improve the image of privatisation. [17396]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 February 1997]: John Neill, the chief executive of the Unipart group of companies, was one of four chief executives and company chairmen who accepted my invitation to speak at a DTI conference— "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free"—on 5 December 1996, the main purpose of which was to help British companies to secure privatisation business in other countries. Mr. Neill delivered a speech setting out his personal view on how the privatisation of Unipart had enabled the company to improve its performance. Like all speakers, he gave his services free of charge.

Inward Investment

Mr. Carttiss: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to improve the arrangements for attracting inward investment into the eastern region; and if he will make a statement. [18558]

Mr. Greg Knight: The attraction of inward investment is a major UK success story and the Government intend to maintain this excellent record. In England, there are already eight regional development organisations working in partnership with my Department's own Invest in Britain Bureau to attract inward investment.

I consider it important for an RDO to be established in the east of England because the region has some unique strengths that could help it to win business in a very competitive environment. I have been impressed, too, by the strength of the public and private sector partnership that has got the East of England Investment Agency under way so quickly.

I am therefore announcing today a £505,000 grant, which will help the East of England Investment Agency to be launched formally in 1997–98 and hit the ground running. It is proof of our continuing commitment to the encouragement of inward investment.

The many global companies already operating in the east of England are a clear endorsement of the advantages of doing business here and I have no doubt that the East of England Investment Agency will play a key role in maximising those benefits for the regional economy.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

St. Helenians

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current upper age limit for St. Helenians coming to work in the United Kingdom under the training and work experience scheme. [17477]

Mrs. Gillan: No upper age limit is applied to St. Helenians wishing to undertake training or work experience in the United Kingdom.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the contracts awarded by her Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992, and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17599]

Mr. Robin Squire: The list of contracts awarded by the Department for Education and Employment and the Employment Service is as follows:

EDS	Costs £
The Government catalogue of IT supplies	207,000

[1] Per annum.

Nursery Schools

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of (a) four-year-olds and (b) rising fives attended (i) local education authority nursery schools and (ii) pre-primary classes in each metropolitan district in the most recent period for which figures are available. [17900]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department does not publish information on percentages or participation rates of four-year-olds or rising fives by local education authority area. Participation rates of children under five in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in primary schools by local education authority area in England in January 1996 will be published in a statistical bulletin on 28 February and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received in the last six months relating to the introduction of nursery school vouchers, from (i) local education authorities, (ii) teaching bodies, (iii) nursery schools, (iv) parents, (v) parents representative bodies and (vi) others; and if she will make a statement. [17710]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received representations from a variety of sources about the nursery education voucher scheme.

Schools (Staff Checks)

Mr. Jaimeson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment her Department has made as to whether (a) the Bradfield House school, Cullompton, and (b) the Quantock school, Taunton, have made the legally required checks on the suitability of staff to work with children. [17933]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Ofsted and social services departments, in the course of their inspections, examine schools' observance of the legal requirements in this area. The Department received a social services department report in December 1996 which drew attention to shortcomings in Bradfield House school's staff recruitment and vetting procedures. An agreement has been prepared between the school, Devon SSD and the police for implementing measures to improve these procedures. Advice about Quantock school, Tauton, confirms that the correct procedures are followed.

New Nursery Classes

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals to open new nursery classes in primary/infant schools she has received but has not yet approved and in each case when she received the proposal and how many places are involved. [17896]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows proposals for new nursery classes received in the Department but not yet decided, when the proposals were published and the number of full-time equivalent places involved.

Teachers' Pensions

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cost to public funds of the teachers' early retirement scheme for each of the last five years. [14062]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The estimated total cost to public funds, for the last five years for which data are available, is given in the following table, split between the extra cost of premature retirement to the teachers' superannuation scheme, and the expenditure incurred by public sector teachers' employers on enhancements to teachers' pensions. These are the extra costs within each financial year of pensions payable to all teachers who then or previously retired prematurely.

Year	Cost to TSS (£ million)[1]	Expenditure on enhancement (£ million)[2]	Total
1990–91	130	60	190
1991–92	150	80	230
1992–93	180	90	270
1993–94	210	110	320
1994–95	230	110	340

TRANSPORT

MV Braer

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current estimate of the costs incurred by his Department and agencies for which his Department is responsible in the clearing up operation which followed the grounding of the MV Braer on Shetland in January 1993. [17698]

Mr. Bowis: The marine pollution control unit, part of my Department's Coastguard agency, incurred costs of some £2.6 million in the clean-up operation following the grounding of the MV Braer. The Government have consistently said that their claim in respect of these costs and those incurred by the Scottish Office should be at the back of the queue for compensation.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress made in (a) building the Birmingham northern relief road and (b) developing the A628 Woodhead route. [17748]

Mr. Watts: The Birmingham northern relief road has been the subject of a lengthy public inquiry and the inspector's report is awaited.

The A57/A628 Mottram–Tinwistle bypass remains in the roads programme and a preferred route exists for it. The next stage will be the appointment of consultants to prepare the scheme for the publication of draft orders and of the environmental statement.

London Underground

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the loans which have been made to London Underground since 1967 indicating the dates on which the loans were repaid and those debts that remain outstanding. [18118]

Mr. Bowis: London Underground Ltd. did not exist as a separate business until 1984. The Department is not aware of any loans having been made to LUL.

Rolling Stock Leasing Companies

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons a clawback clause was not included in the contractual agreements used for the sale of the rolling stock leasing companies. [18158]

Mr. Watts: A proceeds clawback mechanism was rejected because it would almost certainly have led potential purchasers—most particularly venture capitalists who offered the best bids for two of the three companies— either to withdraw altogether or at least to reduce their bids significantly.

Additionally, such a clawback mechanism would have been complex, difficult to police and would have run counter to the policy of establishing a clean break.

Railfreight Distribution

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the sale of Railfreight Distribution. [18157]

Mr. Watts: The British Railways Board has selected English Welsh and Scottish Railway as the preferred purchaser of Railfreight Distribution. The board is aiming to exchange contracts very shortly.

National Bus Company

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sums have accrued to Her Majesty's Government as a result of the clawback clause written into the sale of the National Bus Company. [18243]

Mr. Watts: To date, a total of £8,055 million has been received in respect of mortgage charges placed on former National Bus Company properties under the clawback arrangement.

Train Operating Companies (Redundancy Payments)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the public service obligation payments made by the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising to the train operating companies includes payments to cover the costs of staff redundancies. [18156]

Mr. Watts: The franchising director makes payments under the franchise agreement to private operators, which purchase the rail services in the franchise agreement. It is for the operators to manage the services and the costs, including any redundancy costs.

The franchising director also makes payments under section 52 of the Railways Act 1993 to British Railways Board-owned operators for the provision of services prior to franchising. The calculation of grants to the BRB is based on the operator's projected costs after deducting forecast revenue and includes any redundancy costs.

PRIME MINISTER

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 1042, what factors led him to conclude that it was doubtful that the Libyan Government would deliver the suspects for trial in The Hague under a Scottish judge under Scottish rules of evidence. [18209]

The Prime Minister: The Libyan Government may have said they accept the holding of the Lockerbie trial in a third country, and a trial in The Hague is one such proposal. But they have not said that they will ensure the appearance of the accused at any such trial. Despite agreeing in 1993 that a trial in Scotland would be fair, they have argued that they cannot compel the accused to stand trial there, or in the United States, in the absence of a bilateral extradition agreement with either country. The same Libyan argument would apply to The Hague, there being no extradition agreement between Libya and the Netherlands.

I conclude, after five years of Libyan prevarication over delivering the suspects for trial in Scotland, that it is extremely doubtful that they would surrender them for trial in a third country.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the contracts awarded by (a) the diplomatic wing of his Department and (b) ODA to (i) EDS, (ii) Andersens, (iii) BMI, (iv) Capita and (v) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17602]

Embassies and High Commissions

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria govern the circumstances in which United Kingdom embassies and high commissions are staffed by personnel not from his Department or the Department of Trade and Industry; and if he will list those posts which are permanently staffed by such officials. [17707]

Mr. Hanley: FCO and DTI staff are chosen to fill overseas vacancies on the basis of their suitability, using open, competitive boarding procedures. When specialist knowledge or expertise is needed, officers from other Government Departments are, on occasions, also invited to bid.

Service attaché and support posts are permanently staffed by Ministry of Defence personnel. A proportion of entry clearance manager and officer posts are permanently staffed by members of HM immigration service. On the basis of available information, there are currently 371 MOD staff serving in 74 missions and 87 immigration service staff in 33 missions

In addition, there is a small number of specialist posts—for example, drug and airline liaison officers—some of which are wholly or partially funded by other Government Departments or external bodies, and filled permanently by their staff. No definitive list is currently available. One is being compiled and will be sent to the hon. Member at a later date.

Metin Goktepe

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if a British official attended the hearing on 6 February of the judicial investigation into the death of the Turkish journalist Metin Goktepe; and if he will make a statement. [17856]

Mr. David Davis: No British official was able to attend the Goktepe trial on 6 February. But we continue to follow this case closely, and we hope to be able to send an observer to attend the next session of the trial on 11 April.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Turkish Government about the alleged use of torture by police officers on witnesses of Metin Goktepe's death on 8 January. [17852]

Mr. David Davis: Our embassy in Ankara has raised a number of aspects about the Goktepe trial with the Turkish authorities. These include reports that police officers used torture on witnesses. We will continue to follow this case closely.

Seals (Russia)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 25 November 1996, Official Report, column 76, on the use of seals by the Russian authorities, if the information on research activities has now been provided. [17909]

Mr. Hanley: Despite repeated approaches from our embassy in Moscow, the Russian authorities have still not provided information on research activities on seals. Our embassy was most recently advised by the Russians on 31 January that the information was not yet available. We continue to press for this.

EU Information Offices

Mr. Lamont: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many EU information offices there are; what are their running costs; and what proposals Her Majesty's Government have to reduce the number of offices. [18078]

Mr. David Davis: We believe that the public should have ready access to factual information about the EU so that the debate on these important issues is as informed as possible.

Information about EU policy is available from Government Departments, public libraries and other information providers, including Commission representations in member states and third countries.

European Council

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 24 February. [17960]

Mr. David Davis: Twenty-three of the 25 A points in document 6052/97, the text of which will be placed in the House as soon as it is available, were approved. They included the decision to sign an interim association agreement and joint statement on political dialogue with the PLO. Denmark entered waiting reserves on two points; an EU/Mexico agreement on control of precursors and maximum residue limits of veterinary medicinal products in foodstuffs of animal origin.

The Council noted the resolutions adopted by the European Parliament listed on documents 5091/97 and 5094/97. Copies of these documents will also be placed in the House as soon as they are available.

The Commission and presidency gave an oral presentation to the Council on the preparations of the second meeting of Foreign Ministers within the framework of the Euro-Mediterranean partnership, which will be held in Malta on 15 and 16 April. The Council underlined the importance of the Malta meeting as an opportunity to take stock of progress and to set priorities for the future. The Council welcomed the signature of the EC-PLO interim association agreement, which was signed by Yasser Arafat for the Palestinian Liberation Organisation, the Commission and the presidency. The Council underlined its determination to conclude the negotiations with Egypt, Jordan and Lebanon as soon as possible.

The Council was unable to agree a common position for the political declaration on the structured dialogue with Cyprus. The structure dialogue meeting was therefore postponed, but the association council was held as planned.

After lengthy discussion of the draft agreements on humane standards for leghold traps, the Council concluded that the Commission should renew its contacts with the Russian, Canadian and US authorities with a view to adapting the draft agreements to reflect a number of Council recommendations. The Commission undertook to report on the results of its further contacts, hopefully before the end of March and in any case before the Environment Council in June 1997.

The Council noted, without debate, the Commission's report on the state of play on the US Helms-Burton Act. The Council expressed regret that the latest bilateral contacts with the USA had not produced an outcome sufficient for the EU to suspend its action in the World Trade Organisation, but underlined its willingness to seek an overall bilateral settlement and in that case to halt or suspend the panel procedure. The Commission gave a report on the successful outcome of the WTO telecoms negotiations in Geneva on 15 February.

The Commission reported that all outstanding obstacles to South Africa's qualified accession to Lomé had been resolved in its 17 to 18 February talks with South Africa. The Council conclusions reiterated the importance of strengthening the relationship between the European Union and the Republic of South Africa through the establishment of a long-term framework of co-operation that will assist South Africa during and beyond its current transitional phase. The Council noted the resumption of negotiations in January 1997 and will consider taking advantage of the facilitating clause of article 364 of the revised Lomé IV convention, which would allow early accession without further ratification. The Council recalled its commitment that the qualified accession of South Africa to the Lomé convention will not negatively affect the interests of the current ACP membership.

The Council discussed the overseas countries and territories mid-term review but was unable to reach agreement. The Council concluded that it would return to this at a future meeting.

The Council called for an immediate ceasefire for humanitarian purposes in the Great Lakes region and reaffirmed the European Union's support for regional efforts to find a political solution and for the democratisation process in Zaire, noting the appointment of the Portuguese nominee, Mr. Vasconcelos, as head of the electoral unit in Kinshasa. It also asked for the Political Committee to examine the scope for a regional arms embargo. The Council welcomed the five point plan contained in UN Security Council resolution 1097 and the appointment of Mr. Mohammed Sahnoun as UN–Organisation of African Unity special representative to the Great Lakes region. It supported the efforts of African leaders, in particular President Mandela and welcomed their decision to hold a regional summit on 12 March in Nairobi.

The Council discussed the economic situation in the Balkans, in particular the difficulties of the countries in transition in south eastern Europe and noted the measures already taken by the European Commission to alleviate the consequences of the current crisis in Bulgaria. The Council agreed to follow the situation closely.

The Council had an exchange of views on Albania and the possibilities for the Union to contribute to a solution to the present crisis. The Council agreed that a joint senior officials' mission with the European Commission would deliver a message reporting its concerns to the Albanian Government and the Opposition leadership.

The Council discussed the situation in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia in light of the fact-finding mission carried out by the presidency and the Commission in Belgrade on 20 February 1997. While acknowledging that the results of the elections of 17 November 1996 have been implemented, the council reiterated the need to implement the remaining parts of the Gonzalez report; the opening of a dialogue with the opposition on free access to the media and reform of the electorial law. The Council expressed concern about the situation in Kosovo and called upon the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to co-operate in the early implementation of a visit to the region by the special representative of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe chairman-in-office, Mr. Van der Stoel, and the chairman of the working group on ethnic and national communities and minorities, Ambassador Lutz. The Council agreed to return to these issues at its next session.

The Council underlined the importance of implementing the decision on Brcko and expressed its full support for the high representative in this context. Recalling the importance of the regional approach, the Council welcomed the European Commission's report on the practical application of conditionality and called for relevant Council bodies to continue to examine this principle in preparation for further discussion at the next General Affairs Council.

The Council noted the report of the fact-finding mission to Belarus and agreed with its recommendations. It asked the head of the mission, Mr Kosto, to pass the report's contents to Mr Lukashenko, President of Belarus.

The Council discussed human rights in China and reaffirmed its willingness to continue a dialogue with China on this issue. The Council hoped progress would be achieved. Meanwhile, it invited the presidency to continue and intensify, in close co-operation with others, consultations and preparations already underway for the possible tabling of a resolution on human rights in China in the UN Commission for Human Rights in Geneva. A decision will be taken in the light of the development of the situation.

Under any other business, the Commission's paper on preferential trade agreements was raised. The Council noted this for discussion at the March General Affairs Council.

The 10th ministerial meeting of the intergovernmental conference was held on the afternoon of Monday 24 February, preceded as usual by an exchange of views with the President of the European Parliament. Discussion focused on the presidency's text on justice and home affairs. I made it clear that the real requirement was to provide for more efficient practical co-operation against, for example, criminals, drugs, illegal immigration and terrorism: there was no added value in institutional change that simply extended the role of Community institutions and procedures in the third pillar. I emphasised the practical progress that had been made in the third pillar during the last five years, and the need to build on this.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Medical Examinations (Video-recording)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances video-recording occurs of prisoners undergoing examination in medical facilities within Her Majesty's prisons. [16356]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the circumstances in which video recording of prisoners undergoing medical examination may occur in prison in England and Wales.

It is not our normal practice to permit the video recording of prisoners undergoing medical examination. Exceptionally video recordings have been made during psychotherapeutic sessions to assist the therapeutic process. These recordings were made by the psychiatrist with the knowledge and consent of the individual prisoners concerned.

Whitemoor Prison (Escape)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which account relating to the escape of six prisoners from Whitemoor prison on the evening of 9 September 1994 has been logged as the official account; [17126]

(2) how many different accounts have been given by prison officers relating to the escape of six prisoners from Whitemoor prison; and if he will make a statement; [17127]

(3) at what time the escape at Whitemoor prison on 9 September 1994 commenced; and at what time the video taped recordings of the escape began; [17128]

(4) in whose custody is the video tape from camera 27 recording part of the escape of six prisoners from Whitemoor prison on 9 September 1994; and if he will make a statement; [17129]

(5) if the assistant governor of Whitemoor prison entered the control room at 20:15 hours on 9 September 1994; [17130]

(6) why the second officer in the control room of Whitemoor prison on the evening of 9 September 1994 during the escape of six prisoners was not called to give evidence to (a) the police and (b) the Woodcock inquiry team. [17131]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 25 February 1997]: The circumstances surrounding the escape from Her Majesty's prison Whitemoor on 9 September 1994 were the subject of a full inquiry by Sir John Woodcock. He was asked to report his conclusions and make recommendations on any action that should be taken to avoid any recurrence. The report of Sir John Woodcock's inquiry was published on 19 December 1994 and a copy is available in the Library. The actual escape and the shooting of a prison officer were the subject of a separate criminal investigation by the Cambridgeshire constabulary.

I understand that neither Sir John Woodcock nor the Cambridgeshire constabulary was able to establish the precise time at which the escape began. However, it appears that staff in the emergency control room became aware of the escape at about 8:09pm and that video recording of the camera footage was manually activated shortly afterwards. The duty governor entered the emergency control room at approximately 8:15pm. I understand that none of the three video recorders in operation in the emergency control room that evening recorded images from camera 27.

The conduct of the Woodcock inquiry and of the police investigation are matters for Sir John Woodcock and the Cambridgeshire constabulary respectively. However, I understand that all five members of staff in the emergency control room at the time of the escape were interviewed by the Cambridgeshire constabulary.

Belmarsh Prison (Books and Periodicals)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons prisoners held in the special secure unit at HM prison Belmarsh have been informed that from 1 March they will not be allowed to receive books, magazines and newspapers. [17912]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Keven McNarmara, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prisoners held in the special secure unit at Belmarsh prison.

Prisoners in the special secure unit (SSU) at Belmarsh will not be prevented from receiving books, newspapers and magazines from 1 March. The change in procedure from 1 March, which applies to all prisoners at Belmarsh and not just those in the SSU, involves a restriction on the volume of combustible material held by prisoners in cells, and a restriction on the source through which prisoners may acquire newspapers and magazines.

These changes have been introduced to (a) reduce the risk of fire from accumulated material in cells; (b) improved security and the checking of incoming mail; and (c) speed up the distribution of publications to prisoners.

Prisoners were informed of these changes on 5 February and supplied with details of an authorised newsagent with whom they can place orders. The procedures also allow for the supply of magazines or newspapers from overseas for foreign nationals.

Metropolitan Police Manpower

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's analysis supporting his oral answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 1036, that more than 800 extra constables have been made available to Metropolitan police divisions for operational duties since 1992; and what functions have been taken into account in compiling the figures. [17894]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The figure which I used in my oral answer was derived from the data set out below.

Actual number of uniformed constables posted to division:

1 April 1992: 13,441

31 January 1997: 14,257

Increase: 816.

The 1992 figure excludes officers on court duty who appeared on divisional strength, but are now assigned to headquarters.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Roisin McAliskey's (a) father and (b) mother will be able to be present at her confinement. [17911]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the attendance of Ms Roisin McAliskey's father and mother at her confinement.

Women prisoners are permitted to be accompanied by a birthing partner during their confinement. This policy applies equally to Roisin McAliskey as to other prisoners.

Ms McAliskey has asked for two close relatives to be present. This has been agreed subject to the policy of the hospital in which she will give birth.

Policing (London)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of policing levels in London; which areas he has assessed as being (a) over-policed and (b) under-policed; and if he will make a statement. [16221]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The deployment of officers across London, in order to meet the agreed objectives set in the annual policing plan and to use police resources most effectively to combat crime in the capital, is a matter for the Commissioner and his senior officers. My right hon. and learned Friend and I regularly meet the Commissioner to discuss, among other matters, the performance of the Metropolitan police. I look forward to seeing the Commissioner's annual report on the Metropolitan police's performance during 1996–97.

My assessment is that policing levels in London continue to improve. Since 1979, the Government have approved increases in Metropolitan police spending worth nearly 90 per cent. in real terms. The settlement for 1997–98 provides an extra £55 million over the 1996–97 allocation. This represents a 3.4 per cent. increase. The Commissioner, in welcoming the settlement, said that it would enable him to increase officer strength during 1997 to at leat 27,400. He then aims to hold that level to the end of the financial year. Latest nationally published statistics from the Audit Commission show spending on policing in the Metropolitan police district of £211 per head of population, compared with the national average of £100. The figure in Surrey is around £105 per head of population. Audit Commission statistics also show that the number of police officers available for ordinary duty per 1,000 per population is 3.5 in the Metropolitan police district, well above the national average of 2.1.

There are now around 4,500 more police officers in the Metropolitan police than there were in 1979. This is an increase of 20 per cent. More uniformed constables are now deployed to divisions than at the time of the last election. Moreover, a higher proportion of their time is spent on street duties: 35 per cent. compared to 32 per cent. in 1992 and 26 per cent. in 1984. The Commissioner's restructuring exercise has slimmed down headquarters staffing levels, releasing hundreds of officers for front-line duties.

The Metropolitan police's operational performance continues to improve. The number of recorded notifiable offences has fallen by over 10 per cent. since 1992–93. Successful campaigns to target burglars, Operation Bumblebee, and street robbery, Operation Eagle Eye, have been complemented by Operation Crackdown, targeting the illegal supply and demand for drugs. These three offences, which impact so seriously on the quality of life for Londoners, feature as three of the six objectives in the agreed policing plan for 1996–97. The inclusion of drugs as an agreed objective for 1996–97 is a direct response to the Government White Paper, "Tackling Drugs Together". Figures from the Metropolitan police show that homicides are now at their lowest level since 1981. There were 132 murders in the capital in 1996—down 25 per cent. since 1991. Domestic burglary has fallen by 20 per cent. since 1991 and the overall clear-up rate has risen from one in six in 1991 to nearly one in four in the 12 months to November 1996. Moreover, the results from Operation Eagle eye indicate a slowing down in the growth of street robbery and an increase in the detection rate from 10 per cent. to 19 per cent. The latest Audit Commission report also shows that Londoners enjoy the best emergency response from their police of any major city in the country.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) police constables in the Metropolitan police were (i) budgeted for and (ii) in post in March of each year since 1992; and what are the (1) numbers budgeted for and (2) estimated numbers in post for March 1997. [16217]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The information requested is given in the table. The Commissioner, in welcoming the settlement for 1997–98, said that it would enable him to increase officer strength during 1997 to 27,400. He will then aim to maintain that level for the rest of the financial year.

Year	Police establishment at 31 March[1]		Actual strength at 31 March
	Total	Constables	Total	Constables
1992	28,471	21,495	28,484	21,142
1993	28,308	21,388	28,290	21,031
1994	28,274	21,463	28,135	21,208
1995	28,099	21,316	27,945	21,433
1996	[1]—	[1]—	27,834	21,588

1997 September[2]	[1]—	[1]—	27,400	21,190

[1] The police establishment provided up to 31 March 1995 was that set annually by the Home Secretary. Since 1 April 1995, the settlement for all police forces has been based on the new national funding formula covering total resources. Police establishments are no longer set centrally.
[2] Estimated.

Young Offenders

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons aged under 18 years were charged with a criminal offence in 1996 in (a) England and (b) Wales. [17697]

Mr. Maclean: Data on the number of people charged are not collected centrally.

However, 1995 the latest available prosecution data for indictable offences by age and area are published in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 1995 Supplementary Volume 3"—tables S3.3(B) and S3.3(C).

Copies are available in the Library.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16798]

Mr. Howard: The number of questions answered by the Home Office in each Session since 1982–83 is:

Session	Written	Oral (including supplementaries)	Total
1982–83	1,471	260	1,731
1983–84	3,512	431	3,943
1984–85	3,092	367	3,459
1985–86	3,466	325	3,791
1986–87	2,005	223	2,228
1987–88	3,846	414	4,260
1988–89	3,549	274	3,823
1989–90	3,252	212	3,464
1990–91	2,245	238	2,483
1991–92	1,351	134	1,485
1992–93	4,345	361	4,706
1993–94	3,348	267	3,615
1994–95	3,187	278	3,465
1995–96	2,831	217	3,048

Figures for 1979–80 and 1981–82 are not available.

The remainder of the information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EU Citizens (Employment Applications)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his target period for dealing with European Union citizens' applications to register as exercising their economic rights by working in the United Kingdom; and to what extent the target is being met. [18089]

Mr. Kirkhope: Targets are set for the issue of residence permits to European Economic Area nationals under the provisions of the various European Community rights of residence directives. Performance against the targets is published in the annual report of the immigration and nationality directorate. Performance in 1995–96 was as follows:

Completion target[1]	Performance
60 per cent. in 1 month	35 per cent.
80 per cent. in 2 months	63 per cent.
100 per cent. in 6 months	94 per cent.

[1] From date of receipt of application.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17068]

Mr. Howard: The cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that have been reported as stolen or are otherwise unaccounted for in 1996–97 are:

Equipment/furniture	Value £
25 items below £5,000	13,046
Information technology equipment
27 items below £5,000	31,488
Items stolen costing £5,000 or more
5 vehicles stolen (in separate incidents)	47,203
1 portable personnel computer	5,400
Total value of losses	97,137

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency set up by his Department since the start of April 1992. [16975]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office has set up two executive agencies since April 1992: the Prison Service and the Fire Service College.

Much of the work involved in establishing these agencies was absorbed within the normal duties of officials and the costs were not separately recorded. A dedicated unit was, however, established in the Prison Service to prepare for agency status. Its estimated salary cost was £220,000.

Police Officers (Secondment to Department)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many serving police officers are currently on secondment to his Department. [17623]

Mr. Maclean: The most recent figures relate to October 1996, when there were 682 police officers seconded to the Home Office, comprising two chief constables, nine assistant chief constables, two commanders, 71 superintendents, 52 chief inspectors, 90 inspectors, 237 sergeants and 219 police constables, of whom 50 per cent. are in the national directorate of police training and a further 30 per cent. in the National Criminal Intelligence Service.

Prisons (Rule 43)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prison inmates were on rule 43 at their own request on 17 February. [17588]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many (a) male and (b) female prison inmates were on Rule 43 at their own request on 17 February.

The latest available information is for 31 January 1997. On that day there were 758 males and 18 females held on Prison Rule 43 or Young Offender Institution Rule 46 for their own interest or protection.

Prisons (Drug Testing)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list each organisation short-listed for the contract to perform mandatory drug testing, indicating the interval each proposes between a mandatory drug test being carried out and the prison authorities being informed of the result, and the proposed cost per test; [17492]

(2) when is the next round of tendering for drug testing in prisons scheduled to take place. [17494]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters have been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the organisations short-listed for the contract to perform mandatory drug testing, their proposed costs and turnaround times, and when the next round of tendering for the drug testing contract will take place.

The organisations which were short-listed in 1995 for the mandatory drug testing contract were:

The Laboratory of the Government Chemist

The Forensic Science Service

The tendering specification required that screening results should be communicated to individual prisons within two days of receipt of samples by the contractor. Both those short-listed confirmed their ability to meet such a timetable. Prices submitted by bidders must be treated as commercially restricted.

The contract was awarded to the Laboratory of the Government Chemist in December 1995. This has a review date of 1 April 1997, with provision for extension for up to a further two years. No decision has yet been taken about when the next tendering exercise will be held.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average interval between a mandatory drug test being carried out and the prison authorities being informed of the test result; [17491]

(2) if he will list each organisation which carried out drug testing for the Prison Service before the contract to perform mandatory drug testing was awarded; what was (a) the average length of time between a drug test being carried out and the prison authorities being informed of the result for each organisation and (b) the cost per test. [17493]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about which organisations carried out drug testing for the Prison Service prior to the award of the present contract, the interval between a mandatory drug test being carried out and the prison authorities being informed of the result, and the cost per test.

Prior to the award of a contract to the Laboratory of the Government Chemist in December 1995, all laboratory urine analysis for the mandatory drug testing programme was carried out by two companies: Medscreen and Scientifics.

The average length of time between a prisoner's sample being taken at the establishment and the screening test taking place at the laboratory is estimated as four days for Scientifics, four days for Medscreen and seven days for LGC. It is important to note that establishments may store samples in a refrigerator for up to seven days awaiting a sufficient number to justify calling out a courier. The Prison Service requirement is that the interval between receipt of the sample at the laboratory and notifying the outcome of the screening test to the prison should be no more than two working days; in the majority of cases that is met.

It would be inappropriate to disclose the costs of testing; to do so would be likely to prejudice a future tendering competition.

Prisoners (Birth)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners gave birth in each year since 1992 (a) by the prison in which each woman was held immediately prior to giving birth and (b) in total. [17498]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of women prisoners who have given birth each year since 1992.

Information collected about births was not recorded by individual prison establishment before 1994–95.

The tables attached summarise the numbers of babies born to women prisoners (a) in each year since 1994 by individual prisons and (b) in each year since 1991–92 in total.

Table 1: Number of babies born to women prisoners by prison

1995–96	64

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners gave birth in each year since 1992 while in prison; and in which establishments these births occurred. [17499]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of women prisoners who have given birth while in prison in each year since 1992.

It is very rare for a woman prisoner to give birth in prison. The normal practice is to move the prisoner to a National Health Service hospital when she is in labour.

The most recent case of a woman giving birth in prison was at Risley prison on 23 February 1997 and prior to that at Styal prison in 1993.

New Prisons (Construction)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new prisons are at present under construction; where they are sited; and when they are due to be commissioned. [17586]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about new prisons.

There are three new prisons under construction using the Private Finance Initiative, as follows:

Name of prison	Location	Type	Number of places	Planned opening date
HMP Altcourse	Liverpool	Category B local	600	January 1998
HMP Lowdham Grange	Nottingham	Category B training	500	February 1998
HMP Parc	Bridgend	Category B local	800	November 1997

Prisoners (Restraints)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prisoners were put under restraint in each year since 1992 (i) by prison (ii) by prison type, and (iii) in total. [17497]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners put under restraint in each year since 1992.

This information is not collected centrally. It could only be made available at disproportionate cost.

Prisons (Babies)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many babies have been held in each prison in each year since 1992; and what was the average amount of time they were held in each prison. [17495]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of babies which have been held in each prison in each year since 1992; and the average amount of time they were held in prison. The information you have requested is given in the attached table.

Police Custody Deaths

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the results of the Police Complaints Authority analysis into deaths in police custody which occurred during 1994; and if he will make a statement on his plans for a further two-year study. [17522]

Mr. Maclean: The data collected by the Police Complaints Authority into deaths in police custody during 1994 are incomplete but have been provided to the Home Office police research group which has recently commenced an in-depth study of deaths in police custody. This work will analyse available records of all such deaths from 1990 to the most recent. It is anticipated that the results from this research will be published late in 1997.

Prison Visitors (Searches)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons seeking to visit a prison inmate during 1996 were (a) on being searched, found in possession of illegal drugs and (b) subsequently charged with an offence; and if he will make a statement. [17585]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of persons seeking to visit a prison inmate during 1996 who were (a) on being searched, found in possession of illegal drugs and (b) subsequently charged with an offence.

A total of 1312 visitors to prisoners during 1996 were reported to the police because they were suspected of being in possession of illegal drugs. Figures on the number of prisoners who were subsequently charged with a criminal offence are not recorded by the Prison Service centrally.

London Prisons (Drug Finds)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug finds were made in each of the London prisons during 1996. [17587]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 28 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of drug finds made in each of the London prisons during 1996.

The number of drug finds reported to Prison Service Headquarters for the London prisons during 1996 were:

HEALTH

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the oral statement of the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns), of 10 February, Official Report, column 119, on Department of Health and Medical Research Council funding of multiple sclerosis over the last six years, if he will reconcile that statement with the answer to the hon. Member for Pendle of 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 151, setting out Department of Health and MRC funding on MS. [15897]

Mr. Burns [holding answer 14 February 1997]: I regret that, due to a clerical error, the figure quoted in the oral statement on 10 February 1997 at column 119 should have been just over £1 million and not the figure of £2 million used.

The hon. Member may be interested to know that the Medical Research Council also spent £6,280,000 in 1995–96 on research under the broader headings of autoimmune disorders and diseases of the central nervous system and is providing £4.9 million in core and capital building funding, and £1,840,000 for on-going research, for the MRC interdisciplinary centre in brain repair, Cambridge which carries out work on neurodegenerative diseases in a multidisciplinary environment.

Cold-related Illnesses

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what have been the excess winter treatment rates for cold-relates illnesses by general practitioners in each of the past 10 years. [17471]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people received hospital treatment as (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients for cold-related illnesses for December 1996 and January 1997; and what were the figures for the same period in each of the last 10 years. [17383]

Mr. Horam: For the purpose of this question, "cold related conditions" have been defined as pneumonia, influenza, bronchitis and hypothermia. The information available for in-patients is shown in the table and covers the period 1989–90 to 1994–95. Data for out-patients are not available centrally.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people received treatment by NHS doctors for cold-related illnesses for the period December 1996 and January 1997; and what were the figures for the same months in each of the last 10 years. [17393]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the information in the replies given to him today on cold-related illnesses.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the excess winter hospital treatment rates for cold-related illnesses for (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients in each of the last 10 years. [17380]

Mr. Horam: Data in the form of excess winter treatment rates are not available centrally.

Nursing and Midwifery Students

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study (i) qualified and (ii) registered with the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting in each of the last five years. [17677]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for England for the information that is available on the numbers entering training and qualifying, and to the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for the information that is available on the numbers of qualified nurses who registered with the council.

Second-level Registered Nurses

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current number of second-level registered nurses; and how many are undertaking training to convert to first-level registration. [17678]

Mr. Horam: There were 34,470 whole-time equivalent second level nursing midwifery and health visiting staff employed by the national health service hospital and community health services in England as at 30 September 1995—the latest available figures.

The number of second level registered nurses undertaking training to convert to first level registration is not centrally available. I refer the hon. Member to the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting who record information relating to student nurse numbers.

NHS Non-clinical Managers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of non-clinical managers in the NHS earning over £30,000 per year were women in each year since 1991. [17679]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally. In September 1995, 50.9 per cent. of administrative managers employed by the hospital and community health services in England were female.

Mental Health

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on mental health in (a) the acute and (b) the community sector in each health authority area in each of the last three years. [17682]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not available centrally.

Emergency Patients

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency patients were transported more than 50 miles to receive hospital treatment in each of the last 18 months; and how many subsequently died. [17684]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Sir Harold Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of new variant CJD have occurred in each year since 1990, broken down by age groups and local authority areas. [17801]

Mr. Horam: The total number of definite and probable cases of new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease which have occurred since 1990 is 16, of which three died in 1995, 10 died in 1996 and three are still alive. The age range at death is from 19 to 50. The release of detailed data on the age and geographical location of the cases would, given the small numbers involved, put at risk the confidentiality of patients and their families. Cases of nvCJD have been found throughout the United Kingdom, and the distribution of cases of nvCJD by geographical location does not suggest a significant excess in any particular area.

Forest Healthcare Trust

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rate of return on assets has been produced by the Forest Healthcare trust in each year since its establishment. [18083]

Mr. Horam: The rates of return of Forest Healthcare national health service trust are as follows:

Year	Percentage
1992–93	10.7
1993–94	4.5
1994–95	5.8
1995–96	2.9

Ecstasy

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has received from the Advisory Council on the Misuse of drugs about the dangers of taking the drug known as Ecstasy; and if he will make a statement. [18598]

Mr. Burns: The Government have received advice from the council on this matter.

The council takes the view that the unpredictability of the effects of taking Ecstasy—MDMA—including the possibility of death, means that there is cause for serious concern about the risks involved.

The council advises that, in contrast to the desired effects of the drug, there have also been regular reports of serious short-term effects. First-ever epileptic fits, panic attacks, paranoid states and confusional episodes are well known and often seen in some accident and emergency departments. These short-term disorders are potentially serious, although they are usually amenable to treatment.

The council reports that long-term effects which have been observed include permanent visual changes, depression and panic attacks. Some individuals will be at risk of developing psychotic illness.

Post mortems on some individuals who have died in circumstances associated with the drug have suggested direct damage to the liver and heart. The deaths which have occurred have been unpredictable and sporadic and seen usually to have been brought on either by hypothermia—overheating—and the complications which follow or, very rarely, through excessive water consumption which has led to acute water intoxication.

The council advises that other similar drugs such as MDA or MDEA may well carry similar or greater risks. Misuse of Ecstasy in combination with other drugs or alcohol will have a tendency to increase the risks. The risks of dehydration and overheating are likely to be exaggerated by high ambient temperatures and crowding.

The council advises that Ecstasy tablet seized in this country have not contained other harmful substances. The harmful effects are as a result of MDMA itself.

The Department, through the Health Education Authority, is using the advice of the council to inform its drug prevention campaign, as part of the Government's drugs strategy, "Tackling Drugs Together". The advice will also be used to inform the forthcoming advice to local authorities on improving the health and safety of young people at clubs and similar venues.

Disabled Parents

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has issued, and what funding his Department provides to meet the needs of disabled parents. [18124]

Mr. Burns: Social services departments are empowered to provide services for disabled parents as disabled people through a range of welfare legislation, including under section 17(1)(a) of the Children Act 1989. "The Children Act 1989, Guidance and Regulations" volume II, paragraph 2.5 refers to that. Apart from this, the Department of Health has not produced specific guidance on the welfare legislation's application to disabled parents, but believes that the provisions are available to social services departments to use as appropriate, taking account of local and individual circumstances and priorities.

The total resources provided for social services in England will increase by a further 4 per cent. next year to £7.7 billion, 73 per cent. more in real terms than in 1990–91. It is for local authorities to manage and to decide on the allocation of these substantial resources in accordance with local circumstances and their own priorities.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to commission research into the numbers of disabled parents. [18120]

Mr. Burns: The Department of Health, through its research and development programme, is funding the research initiative, "Supporting Parents: How to Mobilise Supports to Promote Better Parenting", with a local budget of £2.5 million. One of the funded projects, which will begin work in May 1988, is "Parenting and Disability: The Role of Formal and Informal Supports". This will look fully at the types and amounts of both formal and informal support that is needed to support disabled people in their role as parents.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics he collates on the number of disabled parents (a) nationally and (b) in each local authority. [18125]

Mr. Burns: Routine statistics are not collected from local authorities on this topic. However, information on the presence of long-standing illness or disability within households is included in the "Health Survey for England".

Glaucoma

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions for the treatment of glaucoma were issued in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what was the net ingredient cost for each year. [16601]

Mr. Malone: The table provides information on the number of prescriptions dispensed, and their net ingredient cost. The rate of growth is in line with the rates for other medicines for conditions associated in particular with elderly people.

Number of prescription items dispensed and net ingredient cost of drugs used in the treatment of glaucoma: England 1991 to 1995

England

1992	3.1	23.2
1993	3.3	24.5
1994	3.4	25.4

1. The data cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered.

2. The drugs used in the treatment of glaucoma are those preparations in the British National Formulary (BNF) [issue 28, September 1994] therapeutic group 11.6—treatment of glaucoma. Some of these drugs may have been prescribed for other conditions.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients (a) by region and (b) nationally received hospital in-patient or day care treatment for glaucoma in each of the last five years. [16602]

Mr. Horam: The latest available information for finished consultant episodes is set out in the table. Information on numbers of patients is not available centrally.

Operations (Cancellations)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library figures (a) by district health authority, (b) by regional health authority and (c) in total, of the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to hospital and the number of those patients who were not readmitted within a month for the third quarter of 1996–97. [16603]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library shortly.

Nurses (Training)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students who commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study gave up their training in (i) the first year, (ii) the second year and (iii) the third year, in each of the last five years. [16604]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 20 February at column 703.

Long-term Care (Legislation)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about his proposed draft Bill for long-term care; what conclusions he has now reached concerning the financial aspects of his proposals; and when he intends to publish the draft Bill. [16982]

Mr. Burns: A policy statement to follow up the consultation paper, "A New Partnership for Care in Old Age", and a draft Bill will be published shortly.

Buckinghamshire Health Authority

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the funding of Buckinghamshire health authority over the last three years. [18229]

Mr. Horam: The final cash limits for Buckinghamshire district health authority for the last three years are as follows.

1993–94	190,475
1994–95	196,860
1995–96	202,365

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the reasons for his decision that Buckinghamshire health authority's deficit should be recouped by 31 March 1998 rather than the date originally planned. [18228]

Mr. Malone: All health authorities must remain within their allocated annual cash limit. However, a health authority might report in its accruals accounts a deficit position. In this situation it must agree a recovery plan with the national health service executive regional office to regain financial equilibrium. The plan could be reassessed to take account of changed circumstances.

Health Authority Finance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in rank order health authorities in England showing in each case the amount in both cash and percentage terms by which that authority's planned funding for 1997–98 exceeds or falls below its capitation target; and if he will make a statement. [18227]

Mr. Horam: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Prescriptions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many investigations are proceeding into allegations of transfer of prescriptions by multiple pharmacies from the pharmacy branch which received them for processing at another branch (a) in the same health authority and (b) in another health authority to maximise the professional practice allowance. [18121]

Mr. Malone: Comprehensive information about such cases is not held centrally. Cases may be investigated by both health authorities and the Prescription Pricing Authority fraud investigation unit. Enquiries made of the PPA fraud investigation unit indicate that no current investigations are known to be underway.

WALES

Pupil Exclusions (Clwyd)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the (a) permanent and (b) temporary pupils exclusions in the former local education authority of Clwyd for the years 1993 to 1996; and if he will make a statement. [16951]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Returns from the former Clwyd county council show that, in the academic year 1994–95, there were 81 permanent exclusions from maintained schools in the authority. In 1995–96, a total of 101 permanent exclusions were reported by Wrexham, Flintshire, Denbighshire and Conwy unitary authorities. Information in respect of earlier years and fixed term exclusions is not available centrally.

High Technology Companies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many high technology companies have been attracted to Wales since 1992 giving their locations; and if he will make a statement. [17502]

Mr. Hague: Since January 1992, over 800 inward investment projects have been attracted to Wales promising over 40,000 new jobs, over 26,000 safeguarded jobs and capital investment of over £6.8 billion. The projects cover a wide range of activities which might be defined as high technology and include projects by the following companies:

Company	Destination
General Electric	Nantgarw
Angrisense	Treforest
Surface Technology Systems	Imperial Park
Polyclonal Antibodies	Llandysul
Nimbus Records	Cwmbran
Xidex	Brynmawr
Bayer Diagnostic	Bridgend
Align-Rite	Bridgend
British Aerospace	Broughton
British Airways	Rhoose
Ford	Bridgend
Perkin Elmer	Llantrisant
Newport Wafer-Fab	Newport
LG	Imperial Park
ASAT	Crumlin
Northern Telecom	Newport
Raytheon	Broughton
Hoya	Wrexham
Pilkington Micronics	Deeside

Unemployment (Clywd)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many long-term unemployed men and women there are in (a) Wales and (b) in the area covered by the former county of Clywd. [17504]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Long-term unemployment, January 1997[1]

	Male	Female
Clwyd	3,024	650
Wales	26,568	4,931

Source:
Office for National Statistics.
[1] Claimant unemployed for 52 weeks or over. These figures are not seasonally adjusted.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many unemployed people there currently are in Wales aged 24 years and under. [17505]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In January 1997, there were 27,894 people in Wales on the claimant unemployment count aged 24 and under. This figure is not seasonally adjusted.

River Dee Estuary

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the impact upon the (a) Deeside communities and (b) the River Dee estuary environment of proposed construction of a power station. [17506]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Any developer of a power station with a generating capacity in excess of 50 mw is required to supply an environmental impact assessment in support of its application. The assessment needs to include an analysis of the effects upon the local communities and environment.

Aerospace and Air Passenger Transport Industries

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate of the number of jobs connected with the aerospace and air passenger transport industries in Wales. [17503]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: According to the latest annual employment survey there were 48,000 employees in the aerospace and air transport industries[1] in Wales in September 1995.

[1] 1992 standard industrial classification, classes 35.30, 62.10–62.20, 63.11 and 63.23.

Prescriptions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 24 February, Official Report, columns 91–92, if he will seek out the procedure for a health authority investigation of allegations of transfer of prescriptions from one branch of a multiple pharmacy in another health authority area for processing in another branch in the area of the first health authority for the purpose of making a fraudulent claim for the professional practice allowances for community pharmacies; what provisions govern the obtaining of evidence from individual patients named on the prescription forms; and what assessment he has made of the ways in which the investigation procedure could be simplified. [18128]

Mr. Hague: The detailed procedure would be a matter for the health authority or authorities concerned, in accordance with their own fraud policies. They are required at an appropriate stage in their investigation to notify their statutory auditors and the police. I have been advised that the same duty of confidence applies to prescription forms as to other kinds of medical record.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairmen of the Bro Taf and Gwent health authorities about adjustment to their respective budgets for 1996–97 for prescription items arising from investigations into the transfer of prescriptions from a Gwent branch of a multiple pharmacy for processing at a cardiff branch of the same pharmacy; [18122]

(2) what representations he has received from the chairman of the Bro Taf health authority and the Prescription Pricing Service about the cost of carrying out investigations into the alleged fraudulent transfer of prescriptions handed in at a Gwent branch of a multiple pharmacy to a Cardiff branch of the same pharmacy. [18115]

Mr. Hague: None.

Nursery Education

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many nursery places are available in total for pre-school children in the Cardiff area. [18230]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information is not available in the form requested. In January, there were an estimated 6,119 pupils aged under five in maintained and independent schools in the area now covered by Cardiff local education authority. In addition, at 31 March 1996, there were 4,601 places at local authority day nurseries, registered day nurseries and registered playgroups.

NHS (Private Finance Initiative)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each scheme proposed under the private finance initiative in the Welsh NHS according to the stage it has reached. [18111]

Mr. Hague: There are 27 proposals for capital schemes, above individual NHS trusts' delegated capital spending limits, for which trusts are developing business cases. Of those, the following table shows schemes for which outline business case approval has been given and the relevant trust is testing for private sector interest within the private finance initiative.

Trust scheme	PFI position
Glan y Mor/local general hospital Baglan	Advert places in OJEC
Powys Healthcare/Bronllys—Mid Wales Merger and Newtown hospital	Invitation to negotiate issued
East Glamorgan/Staff Residences for the new district general hospital at Ynys y Plwm	Invitation to negotiate issued
Gwynedd Community/Porthmadog community hospital	Invitation to negotiate issued
Velindre/radiotherapy equipment replacement	Invitation to negotiate issued
Glan Hafren/Chepstow neighbourhood hospital	Preferred private sector partner selected
Gwent Community/Nevill Hall mental health development	Preferred private sector partner selected
Nevill Hall/day surgery unit	Preferred private sector partner selected
University hospital for Wales/multi-storey car park and slip road	Contracts signed and under construction

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many nursery vouchers have been distributed to parents in the Cardiff area, to date. [18155]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: More than 85 per cent. of parents in Wales have already completed and returned their application forms for vouchers and the nursery voucher centre is starting to issue vouchers to them today. Figures relating to specific areas are not yet available.

SCOTLAND

Paedophiles

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with relevant individuals and bodies on the subject of the notification to statutory and other bodies of the whereabouts of paedophiles. [18215]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The crime and punishment White Paper, Cm 3302, published in June 1996 described our proposed arrangements for sex offenders to register with the police. That White Paper was widely circulated and attracted comments from a considerable number of bodies and it was debated by the Scottish Grand Committee at its sitting in Perth on 17 June 1996, when the hon. Member opened for the Opposition.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for compulsory treatment for paedophile offenders (a) within and (b) outwith prison. [18211]

Mr. Forsyth: Where an offender is not given a custodial sentence, the courts may require him, as part of a programme of probation supervision, to participate in treatment programmes. Work with offenders given a custodial sentence is carried out in a number of prisons, including Peterhead, Shotts and Barlinnie. The aims of sex offender treatment programmes are to get prisoners to accept personal responsibility for their actions, to address the consequences of their behaviour for their victims, and to develop strategies to exercise self-control and avoid situations likely to lead to reoffending. Such programmes can be effective only if prisoners are willing to engage constructively. Prison staff strongly encourage and challenge prisoners to participate. Progression through the prison system is also dependent on addressing offending behaviour.

Offenders released from prison on licence or where a supervised release order is in force may be required, as a condition of their licence or order, to participate in treatment programmes. Failure to comply with any such condition could result in an offender's return to custody. Measures further to strengthen supervised release orders, so that they will normally be mandatory in the most serious cases of sexual abuse and will last for up to 10 years, are contained in the Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill and were debated by the Committee in which the hon. Member took part.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for (a) giving more assistance to the victims of paedophiles and (b) providing them with more information about the whereabouts of their abusers. [18214]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The crime and punishment White Paper, Cm 3302, published in June 1996, outlined a range of measures to support the victims of crime, including the victims of sexual abuse. Some of those measures are already in place and others are being developed. A victims steering group has been established to advise on the development of policy and good practice towards all crime victims. The group's operations were discussed in the Committee considering the Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill, in which the hon. Member took part. In addition, as was announced last month, a scheme will come into effect on 1 April 1997 which will enable the victims of serious violent and sexual crimes, if they so wish, to be told of the release of their assailants from prison.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to establish a national paedophile register in Scotland. [18226]

Mr. Forsyth: The Government's plans have been clear for some time and will, subject to parliamentary approval, soon be implemented. The crime and punishment White Paper, Cm 3302, published in June 1996, noted that the Scottish Criminal Record Office already acts as a register of convicted sex offenders. That includes paedophiles. The White Paper committed the Government to require convicted sex offenders to notify the police of any change of address, so that the register can be kept fully up to date. The Sex Offenders Bill, now before the House, fulfils that commitment, as the hon. Member must be aware from his own involvement on the Committee of the Bill.

Child Abuse

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that statistical information on child abuse in Scotland is compiled and published. [18217]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The latest information about child abuse cases reported under local authority child protection procedures is available in statistical bulletin No. SWK/CP/1996/2, published by the Scottish Office in October 1996. The bulletin was placed in the Libraries of both Houses and a copy was sent to the hon. Member.

Mr. William Duff

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he proposes to take to recover NHS payments made to William Duff between 1991 and 1995. [12458]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 January 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has already directed Greater Glasgow health board to recover the sum of £75,000 from Mr. Duff following the report of the NHS tribunal and other such directions will be following. Consideration is being given to whether any payments which were made to Mr. Duff can be recovered within the terms of the regulations.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will draw on the sums relating to outstanding fee claims withheld from Mr. William Duff to compensate his former patients. [12724]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no statutory power to draw upon sums relating to outstanding fee claims for the purpose of payment of compensation.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total earnings in fees from the NHS by Mr. William Duff in each year from the time he began practising in the Greater Glasgow health board area. [12725]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The information requested is listed in the table:

Gross NHS general dental services item of service fees paid to Mr. William Duff 1988 to 1995

Gross earnings	£
Year ending December 1988	162,000
Year ending December 1989	258,000
Year ending December 1990	319,000
Year ending December 1991	373,000
Year ending December 1992	313,000
Year ending December 1993	268,000
Year ending December 1994	266,000
Year ending December 1995	1,000
Total	1,900

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date Greater Glasgow health board commenced its investigation of the fees claimed by Mr. William Duff. [12726]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Greater Glasgow health board commenced its investigation into fees claimed by Mr. Duff on 14 April 1993 when it received the first of 27 referrals from the Scottish Dental Practice Board.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many of the patients of Mr. William Duff who were interviewed by dental referral officers have received remedial treatment; [12727]

(2) how many patients of Mr. William Duff had been told in advance what treatment was being prescribed. [12730]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: This information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of patients who have had unnecessary treatment carried out by Mr. William Duff; how many of these have had their complaint upheld and received compensation in full; how many have been refused compensation on the grounds of their being time barred; and if he will review these cases. [12728]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The total number of patients who have received unnecessary treatment is not available. The national health service tribunal found that in 24 cases which were the subject of referrals to Greater Glasgow health board by the Scottish dental practice division, Mr. Duff had provided unnecessary treatment. In a further two cases where complaints were considered by the health board and which were the subject of appeals to my right hon. Friend, Mr. Duff was held to have provided such treatment.

In one of the latter cases my right hon. Friend has directed that a sum be recovered from Mr. Duff for payment to the complainant to meet the cost of remedial treatment, and this has been set at the maximum contribution payable towards a course of NHS dental treatment. A similar direction is under consideration in the other case. In a total of 14 cases, complaints against Mr. Duff have not been considered by the health board's dental service committee because of the lateness of the complaint. In these circumstances, the question of compensation does not arise. There are no provisions whereby the cases which have been determined can be reviewed.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date the Dental Practice Board called in regional dental officers to investigate the claims for treatment submitted by Mr. William Duff; and if he will publish their report. [12729]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Inspections of Mr. William Duff's patients were first undertaken by regional dental officers on 25 August 1986. On 12 December 1990, Mr. Duff was referred to a dental service committee by Greater Glasgow health board on the grounds that he had not employed a proper degree of skills and attention in respect of a patient. On that occasion, Mr. Duff was found not to be in breach of his NHS terms and conditions of service. In view of the confidentiality relating to health records, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State cannot publish the reports compiled by regional dental officers.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total level of fines imposed upon Mr. William Duff for breach of professional codes of practice; and what plans he has to impose further penalties. [12731]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: In response to the report on Mr. Duff's performance by the national health service tribunal dated 6 February 1996 my right hon. Friend directed Greater Glasgow health board to recover £75,000 from Mr. Duff by withholding from remuneration or otherwise. The board has also been directed to recover from Mr. Duff up to the maximum contribution towards the cost of a NHS course of dental treatment, at present £325, in the case of one patient. A further direction is under consideration in another case.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will order an investigation into the handling of the case of Mr. William Duff by Greater Glasgow health board. [12732]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans for such an investigation. Mr. Duff was the subject of an inquiry and report by the national health service tribunal which directed that his name should be removed from the dental list of Greater Glasgow health board and not included in the corresponding list of any other health board. My right hon. Friend drew the matter to the attention of the General Dental Council which has now barred Mr. Duff from practising dentistry. In addition, appeals in subsequent cases concerning Mr. Duff which were the subject of investigation by the health board's dental service committee have been determined by my right hon. Friend.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide financial support to Greater Glasgow health board to organise a helpline for ex-patients of William Duff. [13950]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 February 1997]: Greater Glasgow health board has no plans to organise a helpline for ex-patients of William Duff. The number of requests for information received from this source would not justify such an initiative.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to reply to the questions from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill of 24 and 28 January, relating to Mr. William Duff. [17392]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I replied to the hon. Member's questions today.

Dental Services

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average current charge for (a) a crown and (b) root treatment. [12623]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Patient charges for crowns range from £36.24 to £74.32, depending on the particular tooth, the material used, whether a post is required and whether the crown is free standing or part of a bridge. Patient charges for root treatment range from £18.12 to £43.52. These charges are net of any ancillary treatment.

NHS general dental services are provided free or with partial relief to certain categories of adults and they are also provided free to children.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the limit on the number of patients any one NHS dentist can have registered with his practice. [14032]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 February 1997]: Patients are registered under NHS continuing care and capitation arrangements with an individual dentist and not with a dental practice. There is no statutory limit on the number of patients a dentist may accept under these arrangements. At 31 March 1996, there was an average of 1,412 patients registered per dentist in Scotland.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the limit on compensation to patients for mistreatment by dental practitioners. [14033]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 February 1997]: There is no statutory provision for such compensation, although the National Health Service (Service Committees and Tribunal) (Scotland) Regulations, as they apply to complaints made before 1 April 1996, provide for the recovery from a dentist and payment to a person of expenses which, by reason of the dentist's failure to comply with his terms of service, that person reasonably and necessarily incurs in obtaining further treatment. Any such treatment should be obtained under the national health service. The maximum patient contribution for a course of NHS treatment is currently £325.

Since 1 April 1996, the procedures for dealing with complaints and discipline have been separated following the recommendations of the review committee on NHS complaints procedures charged by Professor Alan Wilson. The regulations now deal only with discipline and any question of payment to a person by way of reimbursement of the remedial treatment or compensation would be a matter for consideration as part of the non-statutory complaints procedure.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what safeguards exist to prevent a dentist from falsifying a patient or guardian's signature on forms authorising treatment for under-16s. [14035]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 February 1997]: No routine practical mechanism exists at present for verifying signatures on dental payment claim forms but ad hoc checks are undertaken by the Common Services Agency's dental practice division.

Ministerial Visits

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the overseas visits of Ministers, indicating if they were accompanied by officials and the costs involved, in each of the past five years. [16500]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1997]: Ministers are always accompanied on overseas visits by at least one official. Costs of visits prior to 1995 are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Since 1992, Scottish Office Ministers have attended 28 Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Councils in Brussels or Luxembourg. The total costs of attendance at Councils in 1995 and 1996 was £34,861.70. Figures for 1997 are not yet available. In addition, Ministers also undertook the following visits to promote or represent Scotland's interests abroad:

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17071]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Six items of equipment with a total estimated value of £250 and 17 items of information technology equipment, and some accessory pieces, with a total value of approximately £15,000 have been reported missing over the last 12 months. No items of information technology or other equipment valued at £5,000 or more have been reported missing.

Sleep Disorders

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made of the need for a Scottish centre for the diagnosis and management of sleep disorders; what funding he has provided since 1992 for such a service; and if he will make a statement; [17996]

(2) what plans he has to ensure continued provision for a national diagnosis and management centre for sleep disorders; and if he will make a statement; [17997]

(3) if he will make a statement on the implications of the closure of the sleep laboratory at the royal infirmary of Edinburgh; [18002]

(4) what is the current availability of continuous positive airways pressure units and accessories in the NHS in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.[18004]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am glad to confirm that the royal infirmary of Edinburgh NHS trust will not be closing its sleep laboratory. I am pleased that the laboratory has secured sufficient funding of £530,000 to enable it to continue in operation after 1 April 1997.

The assessment of need for sleep disorder services is a matter for health boards to determine. A Scottish needs assessment programme report on obstructive sleep apnoea and allied disorders is to be published shortly. In the light of the report, health boards, other purchasers and interested providers will wish to assess the appropriate level of sleep disorder services required and how best to deliver care locally and nationally, for patients across the length and breadth of Scotland.

The current availability of continuous positive airways pressure units and accessories in the NHS in Scotland is a matter for health boards and providers and information is not held centrally. Sleep disorder services at the royal infirmary's sleep laboratory were purchased on a national basis until 31 March 1996 when the purchasing of services was devolved to health boards. Funding from 1991–92 to 1995–96 is set out in the list.

1992–93: £55,000
1993–94: £296,000
1994–95: £287,000
1995–96: £519,000

ENVIRONMENT

Social Housing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much the Government spent on (a) new social housing and (b) maintenance of social housing in (i) England, (ii) the west midlands and (iii) London between 1990 and 1996; [16551]

(2) how much the Government spent on (a) new social housing and (b) maintenance of social housing between 1990 and 1996; and what were the equivalent figures for other OECD countries. [16550]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 20 February 1997]: The available information on allocations for expenditure on social housing stock made by the government for the years 1990–91 to 1996–97 is set out in the table. Some of the resources allocated through the single regeneration budget challenge fund and city challenge will be used for investment in social housing but this element is not separately identified in the allocations made. Corresponding figures on a comparable basis for other OECD countries are not available.

[1] Resources were provided for cash incentives schemes in 1990–91 and 1991–92 but within a package of measures directed at homelessness which are included in the 'other local authority' row.
[2] Covers special programmes for homelessness, rural housing, energy efficiency, New Town defective dwellings, flats over shops and the Housing Partnership Fund.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17067]

Sir Paul Beresford: During the 12 months from 1 February 1996 to 31 January 1997, 217 items of equipment and furniture have been stolen from this Department and its agencies with a total value of £200,013; this includes 174 items of IT equipment with a total value of £183,314, with one item being valued at £5,000 or more—a portable computer valued at £5,126. There is also one item of IT equipment valued at £300 that is unaccounted for.

Landfill Directive

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding the proposed European directive on landfill; and what meetings he has had with industrial and other non-governmental bodies to discuss the proposed directive. [17518]

Mr. Clappison: The European Commission has not yet published its draft proposals for a landfill directive. When it does so, we shall consult widely about what is being proposed with industrial and other non-governmental bodies.

Landfill Sites (Methane)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the proportion of methane produced at landfill sites that can be captured for energy conversion over the entire period that methane will be produced. [17519]

Mr. Clappison: The quantity of methane gas which can be collected from a landfill site over its lifetime depends on a wide range of site specific details. However, for the purpose of investigations into landfill gas emissions, a gas extraction efficiency of 70 per cent. over the lifetime of the waste has been assumed. This is based on available published information resulting from field studies.

It is further estimated that, in 1994, 28 per cent. of extracted methane was burnt in landfill gas energy recovery schemes the remainder being flared.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the proportion of organic compostable waste currently disposed of via landfill, incineration, anaerobic digestion and composting, and other disposal routes by the water industry and the agriculture, food processing, commercial and other industrial sectors; and how he predicts these disposal routes will change, following the introduction of the landfill tax. [17521]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not available. The Environment Agency's national waste survey and research is expected to improve data quality. We expect that one of the effects of the landfill tax will be to reduce the proportion of waste going to landfill.

Landfill Sites

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for curbing greenhouse gas emissions from landfill sites. [17512]

Mr. Clappison: The waste strategy for England and Wales includes targets both for the reduction of waste going to landfill and measures to increase the proportion of organic (degradable) content in municipal solid waste (MSW) which is diverted from landfill to other forms of treatment.

Additionally guidance to regulators drafting and enforcing waste management licences for landfill sites—set out in waste management paper 4—advises that the most satisfactory control option is the installation of whole-site landfill gas collection at new sites receiving biodegradable wastes and also for existing sites if the site has significant remaining capacity and if significant gas production is likely.

As a result of these measures it is anticipated that landfill gas emissions will fall from the 1990 estimate of 1.89 mte to 1.54 mte in 2000.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17606]

Sir Paul Beresford: The following contracts were held in 1995–96 by Electronic Data Systems:

Scope of work	Value £ thousand
Quality assurance on HMIP assessment of Nirex	358

The following contracts were let to Capita during 1996–97:

Scope of work	Value £ thousand
Evaluation of estate action	431
Recruitment services	312
Evaluation of housing action trusts	249
Monitoring funding on special needs housing	186
Use of private sector finance in local authority housing	85
Housing investment programme: review of present process	49
Developing framework on codes of practice for standards in homes in multiple occupation	31
Legal and financial advice on rundown of Bristol development corporation	27
2 x training seminars	0.6
2 x services	0.9

Further information on years preceding 1999–97 is obtainable only at disproportionate cost.

Sellafield

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the report by British Nuclear Fuels' Director of Health, Safety and the Environment on the reprocessing and high level waste storage at Sellafield presented to a conference at Drogheda on 11 and 12 January. [17263]

Mr. Gummer: None.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total sum allowed for local authority credit approvals for housing investment in 1996–97; what were the figures in current prices for each of the preceding three years; and if he will make a statement on his Department's current assessment of future needs. [17290]

Mr. Curry: The sum allowed for local authority credit approvals for housing in 1996—97 in England is £789 million. The figures for the preceding three years at current prices are:

1995–96: £869 million

1994–95: £893 million

1993–94: £1,014 million

The Department takes its figures for the need for repairs to local authority housing from the English house condition survey. The 1996 survey will give us an up-to-date picture of the need for investment in the local authority stock. We expect to publish results later this year.

Correspondence

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the office of the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Croydon, Central (Sir P. Beresford), (a) received the letter dated 24 January concerning stage II of the Avon ring road from the hon. Member for Kingswood and (b) forwarded this letter to the Minister of State for Transport. [18116]

Sir Paul Beresford: The hon. Member's letter dated 24 January was received in my private office on 30 January 1997. It was then passed to Department of the Environment officials in the Government office for the south-west on 4 February and was forwarded to regional transport officials on the following day to consider whether the issues raised were more appropriate to the Department of Transport. Once this became apparent, officials notified the Department of Transport centrally, on 21 February. I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay. I have asked my hon. Friend the Minister of State to reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Water Cannon

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times water cannons have been used by police forces in Britain since 1967; for what reasons they were used; on what dates they were used; in what places they were used; and if police forces are currently authorised to use water cannons. [17949]

Mr. Maclean: Water cannons have never been used by police forces in England, Wales or Scotland. It is for chief police officers to decide what public order equipment to deploy and how to authorise its deployment.

Sexual Orientation (Police Database)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances an individual's sexual orientation is recorded on the police national computer. [18222]

Mr. Maclean: An individual's sexual orientation should not be recorded on the police national computer.

Charities (Criminal Records Checks)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) Barnardos and (b) the Scouts Association about the proposed charges for criminal records checks on charities; and if he will make a statement. [17968]

Mr. Maclean: We have received many representations on this matter from a range of voluntary groups, including Barnardos and the Scouts Association. My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary announced to the House on Second Reading of the Police Bill [Lords] that we shall seek

> "to amend the Bill ... to introduce an order making power to enable free checks to be provided for specific groups, such as volunteers, if and when the money became available to cover the costs of doing so."—Official Report, 12 February 1997; Vol. 290, column 359.

Convicted Paedophiles

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he is taking to track convicted child sex abusers who, on release from prison on licence, have immediately disappeared; [18355]

(2) what steps he is taking to track convicted child sex abusers who change their names. [18343]

Mr. Maclean: The Sex Offenders Bill places an obligation on those convicted or cautioned for paedophile and other serious sex offences to notify changes of name and address to the police. Failure to do so, in the circumstances laid down by the Bill, will be a criminal offence.

The police have devoted substantial efforts to managing the risks posed by paedophiles, in co-operation with other agencies, and have developed strategies to monitor the movements of paedophiles who try to escape from view. If a prisoner released on licence fails to keep contact with his probation officer in accordance with the terms of his licence, he may, depending on the circumstances, be recalled to prison.

Youth Justice System

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what proposals he has to publish a Green Paper on the youth justice system; and if he will make a statement. [13199]

Mr. Maclean [pursuant to his answer, 30 January 1997, columns 313–14]: The Government will be publishing a Green Paper tomorrow, setting out proposals for preventing children offending.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Companies

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in which years since 1979 Government assistance was given to capital or revenue expenditure of (i) publicly owned and (ii) private water companies for (a) new reservoirs and (b) prevention of leaks in mains supplies; and in each case what was the nature of the assistance. [17740]

Mr. Clappison: In 1983–84 the Government made a specific grant, repayable within five years, to Northumbrian Water towards the financing costs of major investment including the Kielder reservoir. No other financial assistance from Government since 1979 has been specifically for the provision of new reservoirs or the prevention of leaks in mains supplies, which have been matters for the former water authorities and the water companies.

Sellafield

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what report he has received from the Environment Agency in respect of Nirex's assessment of the likely destruction of geological information from the construction of a rock characterisation facility at Sellafield. [17729]

Mr. Gummer: None.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has for public consultation on (a) the groundwater pressure data and (b) Nirex's revised interpretation of the base line hydrogeology before he makes a decision on the proposed rock characterisation facility at Sellafield; [17734]

(2) what plans he has for consulting interested parties regarding the impact on base line hydrogeology of the proposed rock characterisation facility, at Sellafield. [17735]

Mr. Gummer: I am considering the matter.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information Nirex has provided to him in respect of independent peer review of the base line groundwater pressure dataset relating to the proposed rock characterisation facility at Sellafield; [17736]

(2) what assessment he has made of the relevance of the hydrogeological base line dataset to the safety case of a nuclear repository at Sellafield. [17733]

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 23 January, Official Report, column 678.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee has given to his Department regarding consultation with interested parties over the base line hydrogeological effects of the proposed rock characterisation facility at Sellafield. [17737]

Mr. Gummer: None. However, in the response that the committee published in February 1993 to UK Nirex Limited's "Consultative Document on a Rock Characterisation Facility", RWMAC said that it would be important to ensure that the base hydrogeological regime in the region of the potential repository site and the extent of monitoring was agreed by independent peer review or other means with as many interested parties as possible and that a period of 18 months to two years of monitoring prior to the commencement of shaft sinking would be regarded as normal practice.

In September 1995, the committee published a report, "Review of aspects of the scientific mission and role of the Nirex Rock Characterisation Facility at Sellafield", made in response to requests by UK Nirex Limited and Cumbria county council. In this, the committee said that its recommendations over timing remained, but were now likely to be met

> "in view of the interpolation of the RCF planning inquiry into the overall repository programme."

The committee said that the proposed peer review should be published prior to the start of RCF shaft excavation.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements were made for peer review by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution of the Nirex proposal to begin construction work at the proposed nuclear waste repository site during the public inquiry into the proposed RCF at Sellafield. [17981]

Mr. Gummer: I am not aware of any such proposal.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what cost recovery arrangements have existed between HMIP and Nirex since the public inquiry into the proposed rock characterisation facility at Sellafield. [17980]

Mr. Gummer: None. HMIP's previous agreement with UK Nirex Limited ended in September 1994, following notice of termination given by the company. The Environment Agency is currently consulting publicly on the terms of a new agreement that it is minded to enter into with Nirex.

Caesium-137

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department has conducted into the re-suspension of Caesium-137 into the environment via biological pathways following nuclear accidents (a) within and (b) outside the United Kingdom. [18108]

Mr. Gummer: A study of re-suspension of radioactive caesium at a number of sites within the United Kingdom and western Europe was undertaken for my Department following the Chernobyl accident. The report of this work, entitled "Environmental Radioactivity from Chernobyl", has been placed in the Library of the House.

Biodiversity

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes have been made to his Department's commitments to action in 1997 in respect of biodiversity plans set out in section 6 of "This Common Inheritance" 1997, in his most recent departmental Minis report. [17725]

Mr. Gummer: My Department is totally committed to achieving the UK biodiversity plan's actions for 1997 and beyond as set out in section 6 of the commitments table of "This Common Inheritance" 1997. The latest departmental Minis report will fully reflect this commitment.

Homes (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of (a) council and (b) housing association homes that will be required for the Greater London area in each of the years to 2000. [17982]

Mr. Clappison: There are no official projections of council homes or housing association homes required for the Greater London area in future years.

Social Housing (Lancashire)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the number of new social homes required in each borough in Lancashire in each of the years to 2000. [18436]

Mr. Clappison: There are no official projections of social homes required in each borough in Lancashire for future years.

Countryside Commission

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the name of the national heritage adviser to the Countryside Commission; and what is his professional background. [18010]

Mr. Clappison: The National Heritage adviser to the Countryside Commission is Mr. Paul Walshe. His professional background is that of a landscape architect and an architect. He also has a postgraduate degree in environmental conservation.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which consultants were employed by the Countryside Commission to advise it on the crossing of the River Avon by the proposed Salisbury bypass; what were the terms of reference given to the consultants; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the consultants' report. [18012]

Mr. Clappison: The consultants were Novell Tullett of Bristol, assisted by Christopher Taylor, who is a landscape historian and former head of the archaeological survey for the Royal Commission on historic monuments of England.

The terms of reference given to the consultants were as follows:

"The appointed consultants will be required to undertake the following tasks:

an assessment of the character and importance of the landscape setting of Salisbury Cathedral in the Nadder and Avon Valleys, through which the proposed road runs;

an assessment of the impact of the proposals on this landscape, in particular in the vicinity of the East Harnham Meadows; advise whether or not the measures proposed for landscaping will significantly ameliorate the impact of the proposal on the area and, if not, what, if any, further measures could be adopted."

The consultants were also asked to advise on the impact of any alternative alignments put forward by the Highways Agency avoiding the East Harnham meadows site of special scientific interest.

I have made arrangements for a copy of the consultants' report to the commission to be placed in the Library.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid and Trade Provision

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on aid and trade provision. [18277]

Dr. Liam Fox: Given the success of British companies in winning business with ATP support, the ATP budget in Asia is under severe pressure. This is why companies were advised of a hold on new offers of ATP support in Asia last November.

I have now finalised the future allocation of aid resources following the Budget. The allocations for ATP in the next two years have been increased by 45 per cent. and 37 per cent. respectively, to £77.7 million in 1997–98 and £70.7 million in 1998–99. The 1999–2000 allocation is £49 million.

In Asia, these enhanced levels will allow ODA to meet contractual commitments; to support those projects on which offers of assistance have been made; and to proceed, subject to satisfactory appraisal, with identified projects for which appraisals are nearly complete or are close to approval. Further ahead, we shall fulfil our obligations under the concessionary finance arrangements signed with overseas Governments as aid programme resources allow. In practice, with the exception of the small number of projects mentioned above where appraisal is well advanced, no further offers of ATP in Asia are likely to be made for some time. However, ATP remains a significant element in the ODA aid effort, and the position will be reviewed again during this year's public expenditure round.

In Africa where demands are fewer, business can continue as usual within the resources allocated.

Companies seeking further information on ATP in either Asia or Africa should consult the ODA or Department of Trade and Industry.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which five companies were allocated the largest sums from the United Kingdom aid and trade budget between 1978 and 1994; how much cash was allocated during this period; and what percentage of the budget for this period their allocation represented. [18019]

Dr. Fox: I refer the hon. member to the reply given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right honourable Friend the hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) to the hon. Member for York (Mr. Bayley) on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 357.

Ivory Coast

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Government of the Ivory Coast regarding measures taken against the Student Federation, Fédération Estudiantine et Scolaire de Côte d'Ivoire. [17849]

Dr. Liam Fox: The British embassy in Abidjan recently met senior Ivorian Government officials to discuss the legal status of FESCI and the measures taken against that organisation.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had in respect of the human rights situation in the Ivory Coast. [17850]

Dr. Fox: My ministerial colleagues and I receive occasional representations from groups concerned with human rights in Cote d'Ivoire. The British embassy in Abidjan closely monitors human rights and recently met senior Ivorian Government officials to discuss the issue. Foreign Office officials have also met visiting Ivorian parliamentary opposition leaders.

WALES

Bron Dyffryn Special School

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much direct funding Bron Dyffryn special school has been in receipt of from Her Majesty's Government during each of the last three years. [18288]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None that I am aware of. Bron Dyffryn is a local education authority maintained special school funded by Denbighshire county council in accordance with the resource allocation formula contained in its local management of schools scheme.

Targets for the Planning Inspectorate Agency

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what performance targets he has set for the Planning Inspectorate Agency's work in Wales for the financial year 1997–98. [18600]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The key objectives for the agency in 1997–98 continue to be to preserve the impartiality and quality of the inspectorate's work while seeing further to improve its efficiency. I have set the following key targets for the agency's work in Wales:

Timeliness

(a) Eighty per cent. of all planning appeals decided by written representations to be determined within 17 weeks;

(b) Eighty per cent. of all planning appeals decided by hearings to be determined within 22 weeks;

(c) Eighty per cent. of all planning appeals decided by inquiries to be determined within 30 weeks;

(d) To provide an inspector for local plan inquiries on request within 26 weeks of the end of the objection period and to deliver 90 per cent. of inspector's reports to local authorities by the dates agreed in service agreements.

Financial

(a) Unit costs of planning appeals decided by written representations not to exceed the target to be set for the Inspectorate by the Department of the Environment;

(b) Recover 90 per cent. of receipts due within eight weeks of the invoice date.

Efficiency

Contribute to the generation of an efficiency improvement in the Agency's use of running costs compared with 1996–97, in accordance with the target to be set for the inspectorate by the Department of the Environment.

Quality

To satisfy the advisory panel on standards and thus the Secretary of State, annually and following rigorous monitoring, that the quality of the Inspectorate's work is being maintained at a high standard with 99 per cent. of its case work, free from error.

Welsh Language

To respond in Welsh to all inquiries, written or oral, received in Welsh within the same time scales as allowed for responding to inquiries generally.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobcentres (Jobs Advertised)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the average number of hours per week advertised for jobs in each jobcentre in England in the latest week for which figures are available; [17715]

(2) what was the average number of jobs advertised in each jobcentre in England in each week from November 1996 to the latest week available; [17724]

(3) what percentage of jobs advertised in each jobcentre in England were for part-time work; and what percentage of jobs advertised in each job centre in England were for jobs specifying 40 hours or more in the latest week for which figures are available; [17716]

(4) what percentage of jobs advertised in each jobcentre in England were for permanent employment at the latest date for which figures are available; [17717]

(5) what was the average pay rate on offer at each jobcentre in England in the latest week for which figures are available; [17722]

(6) what was the lowest pay rate on offer at each jobcentre in England in the latest week for which figures are available. [17723]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 3 March 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the details of vacancies held at Employment Service Jobcentres in England. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The Employment Service (ES) does not collect figures relating to the average weekly hours of vacancies held at Jobcentres, nor details relating to vacancies specifying forty hours or more per week.

I have arranged for a copy of a table to be placed in the Library, which shows the number of vacancies remaining unfilled at Jobcentres in England for the months of November 1996, December 1996 and January 1997. Vacancy statistics are collected on a monthly basis, rather than weekly, and published by the Office for National Statistics through the National Online Manpower Information System (NOMIS). A Nomis access point is located within the House of Commons Library.

A simple split of vacancies between those which are part-time or full-time is held on Nomis, but the latest available figures relate to January 1996. I regret that later figures are not currently available as a result of problems arising from the introduction of new computer systems but I expect that the Office for National Statistics will be able to resume quarterly publication later this year when the problems have been overcome.

Although the Employment Service does not collect regular figures on wage rates of vacancies held at Jobcentres, some national estimates are available from research. The latest available information relates to 1994 and was in the reply to your previous question which appeared in Official Report Column 907 dated 1 February 1996.

I hope this is helpful.

Higher Education

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received regarding numbers of students in higher education. [17727]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend regularly receives representations from a range of bodies and institutions on a number of higher education issues, including student numbers. Nearly one in three young people in Britain now enters full-time higher education, compared with one in eight in 1979. Our spending plans assume that this record participation rate will continue. Longer-term plans for student numbers will be decided in the light of recommendations from the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if, in the case of people refused incapacity benefit, her Department takes into account the information contained in the incapacity benefit application form regarding illness and incapacity, when applying the availability for work criteria to a claim for jobseeker's allowance. [17880]

Mr. Forth: A decision on incapacity benefit that a person is capable of work also applies to jobseeker's allowance. While a person may be capable of work, we recognise that some people's mental or physical condition may restrict the type of work for which they are available. That is why under JSA a person with a mental or physical condition may restrict their availability for work in any way, provided that those restrictions are reasonable in the light of their condition.

In determining what is reasonable the Employment Service may, in cases of doubt, require more information about a condition which restricts availability. The IB disallowance notice sets out the level at which a person has been assessed and the functional areas in which limitations were identified; the ES may request this information from the jobseeker and this is normally sufficient. In the few cases where additional information is required an independent adjudication officer may approach the Benefits Agency Medical Service for further information about the condition. ES staff do not, however, have access to IB application forms when assessing a person's availability for work.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if fluctuating disability is taken into account under the jobseeker's allowance scheme when considering a person's availability for work. [17882]

Mr. Forth: Under the provisions of the jobseeker's allowance a person with a mental or physical condition may restrict their availability for work in any way, provided that those restrictions are reasonably in the light of their condition. In determining what is reasonable the employment adviser will consider all the relevant aspects of a person's condition, including whether it is a fluctuating disability.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17603]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has entered into the following contracts since 1 April 1993.[1]

Contractor	Number of contracts	Value £	Function
Capita	Three	47,674	Management consultancy (management information systems)

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Authority Contracts (VAT)

Mr. Allason: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the extent to which public authorities, with special reference to schools and hospitals, have disproportionately favoured non-VAT registered traders when issuing contracts. [18154]

Mr. Page: The information requested is not available as no assessments have been carried out of the extent to which public authorities contract with VAT registered and non-VAT registered traders.

The Audit Commission tells me that local education authorities—schools—can recover VAT on their non-business activities under section 33 of the Value Added Taxes Act 1994, so have little incentive to favour non-VAT registered traders.

For the NHS—hospitals—as for similar bodies such as banks which cannot recover their input VAT, there is an incentive to favour non-VAT registered businesses. The Audit Commission has no knowledge of this happening on a wide scale and the registration limit of £47,000 for VAT means that non-VAT registered traders may be involved only in very small scale contracts.

Anti-dumping Duties

Mr. Couchman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the amount raised from anti-dumping duties imposed by the EU on photocopiers in 1995. [17749]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Anti-dumping duty on photocopiers amounting to £906,522 was collected by HM Customs and Excise in the UK in 1995. Information on the amount collected across the EU is being collated and will be placed in the Library of the House when available.

Mr. Couchman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many anti-dumping duties have been imposed by the European Union (a) from 1980 to 1985, (b) from 1985 to 1990 and (c) since 1990. [17750]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Definitive EU anti-dumping duties were applied to the following number of products in the periods in question:

1980 to 1984: 40

1990 to date : 99.

Mr. Couchman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the anti-dumping duties imposed for the periods (i) 1984 to 1990 and (ii) 1990 to 1996 in (a) the European Union, (b) the USA, (c) Australia and (d) Mexico. [17751]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 28 February 1997]: The table lists the definitive anti-dumping duties imposed in the European Union by year from 1984; 55 such duties were imposed between 1984 and 1989, and 98 between 1990 and 1996. Details of each duty were published in the Official Journal of the European Communities, for which references are given. This is available in the Library of the House. The annex does not list anti-dumping cases which were terminated or for which undertakings were obtained.

Information on anti-dumping duties imposed by the US is available on the world wide web, reference http://www.ita.doc.gov\import_admin\records. Complete details could be reproduced in the form requested only at disproportionate cost. Information on anti-dumping duties imposed by Australia and Mexico is being collated and will be placed in the Library of the House when available.

Nuclear Power Stations (Decommissioning)

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated year for decommissioning for each of the nuclear power stations in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [17963]

Mr. Page: Decommissioning of a nuclear power station is a matter for the operator, taking into account the requirements of the regulatory authorities. This includes details of timing.

Army Sales

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of British arms sales to overseas countries during 1996; and if he will make a statement. [17966]

Mr. Nelson: Information on UK trade in defence equipment is not yet available for 1996. Information for pervious years is published in "UK Defence Statistics" which is available in the Library of the House.

Research Grants

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the total amount of Government research grants allocated in each of the past five years to each university in (i) pharmacology, (ii) bio-physics, (iii) food hygiene and (iv) information technology. [17287]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 26 February 1997]: Information on Government spending is not held centrally, but the available information on grant funding awarded to universities by the research councils is given in tables, which I have placed in the Library of the House.

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15921]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Department sets out the following age requirements in primary legislation:

Under the Explosives Act 1875, sections 31 and 39, it is an offence to sell gunpowder and other explosives, including fireworks to any person apparently under the age of 16.

Under the Consumer Credit Act 1974, section 50, it is an offence to send, with a view to financial gain, any document inviting a minor—a person under the age of 18—to borrow money, obtain goods on credit or hire, obtain services on credit or apply for information or advice on borrowing money for otherwise obtaining credit for hiring goods.

Under the Employment Rights Act 1996, section 211, for the purposes of a redundancy payment, no period of employment counts until the employee has attained the age of 18.

Privatisation Brochure

Mr. Grocott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 329, how many inquiries have been received on the Government's telephone information services on (a) its regulatory policy and (b) its privatisation programme advertised in the document "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free." [17480]

Mr. Lang: The telephone numbers given in the publication "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free" are those of senior Treasury officials with a range of responsibilities which include providing information about the UK's regulatory policy and the UK's experience and expertise in the process of privatisation, particularly in response to inquiries from overseas. These contact points have been advertised for several years. No record has been kept of the number of specific inquiries each of the officials has received over the period.

Mr. Grocott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 329, if he will indicate the categories of (a) individuals and (b) organisations to whom copies of his privatisation document were sent. [17479]

Mr. Lang: Copies of the booklet, "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free", were sent to Members of Parliament, to delegates to the privatisation conference of 5 December, to the commercial sections of London diplomatic posts which were not represented at the conference, and to the commercial sections of UK diplomatic posts overseas.

Copies have also been sent to others upon request.

Mr. Grocott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 329, what is the cost of operating the inquiry services on (a) UK regulatory policy and (b) the Government's privatisation policy advertised in "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free"; and how many staff are employed, at what cost in salaries, in each case. [17481]

Mr. Lang: Explaining regulatory policy forms a small part of the Treasury's work on utility regulation. Up to five people at various levels are involved in this work as necessary—the team also covers energy, competition and deregulation interests. The explanatory work incurs salary costs of no more than £10,000 per annum.

As set out in the Government's second competitiveness White Paper, the Treasury promotes the export of UK expertise in privatisation through a dedicated unit. It devotes some 2.25 person years to this work at a salary cost of some £65,000 per annum.

Science, Engineering and Technology

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the work of the women in science, engineering and technology unit; and if he will make a statement on the future of the unit. [18357]

Mr. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and I have considered the report on the first two year's work of the development unit on women in science, engineering and technology, and it is clear that considerable progress has been made on the recommendations in the "Rising Tide" report. Nevertheless, further work is required and we have decided that the unit should continue for a further period. A detailed announcement will be made in due course.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the growth in short-term appointments within the publicly funded science, engineering and technology base; and what actions he is taking to reduce the number of such appointments. [18358]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In principle, fixed-term contracts bring benefits to research and to researchers in terms of increased flexibility and opportunities. In recent years, there has been particularly strong growth in universities in research and in the number of research posts, most on a fixed-term basis. Tensions can arise where contract staff are, for whatever reasons, not as well managed as they might be.

We acknowledged the concerns in the 1993 White Paper "Realising Our Potential: A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology" and set out policies for addressing them. To implement these we have increased funding for the prestigious and longer-term university research fellowships, administered by the Royal Society. The research councils have also restructured and strengthened their fellowship provision.

A significant achievement has been an agreement, or concordat, brokered by the Office of Science and Technology, between the research councils, the Royal Society and bodies representing the universities and colleges, which aims to improve the career management of contract research staff. This was launched in September last year, and has been widely welcomed. The research councils are committed to applying its principles to research staff in council institutes and units. The OST is discussing with other Government Departments the possible extension of principles in the concordat to the management of research staff in other public sector research establishments.

Cecchini Report

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the extent to which the United Kingdom has realised the proposals set down in the Cecchini report. [18119]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 28 February 1997]: The Cecchini report of the 1988 considered the considerable potential benefits which might flow from the European single market. The European Commission completed last autumn a major review of the impact and effectiveness of the single market, which presented an assessment of its operation and the benefits which have accrued from it. The review concluded[1] that employment opportunities, income per head, productivity, and competitiveness have all increased because there has been a single market, but that there was more which could still be done to complete it and to improve its working. The Commission is now preparing an action plan and timetable to take this forward. The Government have supported the objectives of the single market, welcomed the review, and support further steps to maximise its benefits.

[1] The results of the review are summarised in Commission communication COM(96) 520 of 30 October 1996.

Genetically Engineered Animals

Mr. Morley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the United Kingdom patents which have been (a) granted and (b) applied for since 1 July 1995 in respect of (i) genetically engineered animals and (ii) the processes for creating such animals. [17828]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 27 February 1997]: There have been a total of three patent applications filed under the Patents Act 1977 and published since 1 July 1995 relating to genetically engineered animals and processes for preparing them. GB 2295395 relates to an animal model for Alzheimer's disease, GB 2291646 relates to transgenic fish and GB 2288807 relates to transgenic animals expressing an insecticidal protein. One application—GB 2265909—which was made before 1 July 1995, and which relates to a process for producing transgenic animals, has since been granted.

Research Councils (Employment)

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many scientists were employed by (a) the Agriculture and Food Research Council and (b) the Biotechnology and Biological Science Research Council in each year from 1979 to the present. [17655]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Science budget money freed up by institute restructuring will have been recycled for research purposes, either in institutes or universities where there has been significant growth in the number of researchers.

The figures—staff in post—are shown in the table.

Institute of Food Research

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many scientists were employed at the Institute of Food Research in each year from 1986 to the latest available date. [17657]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Science budget money freed up by institute restructuring will have been recycled for research purposes, either in institutes or universities where there has been significant growth in the number of researchers.

The figures—staff in post—are shown in the table.

Number of scientists employed at IFR—1986 to 1996

Year	Number of scientists
1985–86	534
1986–87	514
1987–88	517
1988–89	463
1989–90	425
1990–91	308
1991–92	338
1992–93	335
1993–94	303

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Disarmament

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress being made at the conference on disarmament to start negotiations on a fissile material cut-off treaty. [18220]

Mr. David Davis: A work programme for the 1997 session of the conference on disarmament is under discussion in Geneva. We are pressing for negotiations to begin on a fissile material cut-off treaty as a priority.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 27 November 1996, Official Report, column 321, if he will make a statement on progress in preparing draft legislation in respect of a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty. [18256]

Mr. Davis: Preparatory work on legislation needed for the United Kingdom to ratify the comprehensive test ban treaty continues. We hope to include it in the next parliamentary session.

Hong Kong

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the level of the Hong Kong gold and foreign currency reserves on the date of signing the China-UK agreement on the future of Hong Kong. [18082]

Mr. Hanley: The Sino-British joint declaration was signed on 19 December 1984. At the end of December 1984, the value of gold reserves held by the Hong Kong Government was HK$439 million or approximately £49 million at the then exchange rate of £1=HK$9.0344. The value of foreign currency reserves, excluding gold reserves, was HK$50,151 million or £15,550 million.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current level of gold and foreign currency reserves held by the Hong Kong authorities. [18110]

Mr. Hanley: At the end of January 1997, the value of gold reserves held by the Hong Kong Government was HK$182 million or approximately £15 million at the then exchange rate of £1=HK$12.4216. The value of foreign currency reserves, excluding the gold reserves, was HK$510,200 million or £41,070 million.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date he arrived and departed from Hong Kong during his recent visit; what official meetings he had; and with whom. [18353]

Mr. Rifkind: I arrived in Hong Kong on Saturday 15 February and departed on Monday 17 February. I held meetings with the Governor of Hong Kong and senior Hong Kong Government officials including the Chief Secretary Mrs. Anson Chan; with the chief executive designate of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Mr. C. H. Tung; with members of staff at the British Trade Commission and of the office of the British senior representative, Sino-British joint liaison group; and with members of the Executive and Legislative Councils.

European Union Offices (Costs)

Mr. Lamont: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representative offices, where some staff have diplomatic immunity, the EU has around the world; what are their running costs; how many staff they employ; and what proposals he has to bring about reductions in the cost of the offices and the number of staff. [18092]

Mr. David Davis: The European Commission has 128 representative offices overseas, employing about 2,400 personnel of which some 600 are Brussels-based Commission officials. The granting of diplomatic privileges and immunities for the staff of the representative office is a matter of local custom. For 1996, the budget for the representative offices was £152 million, inclusive of salaries and running costs.

We take every opportunity to press for the terms of service of Commission officials to take full account of the tight budgetary constraints which affect all EU member Governments.

Mr. Lamont: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the EU will be spending (a) in the current year and (b) in each of the next five years, on publicity and information offices; and what plans he has to bring about reductions in these amounts. [18093]

Mr. Davis: There is an overall budget of 110,800,000 ecu for all EU information and communication activities in 1997. The budget is set annually and so spending for the next five years has not yet been fixed. The Council agreed to cuts in this budget for 1997, but spending was restored by the European Parliament.

Iran

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards the encouragement of trade with Iran. [17883]

Mr. Hanley: There are restrictions on the sale of military, dual-use and other such goods to Iran as announced by the then Foreign Secretary, my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd), on 1 March 1993, Official Report, column 8. Otherwise, we engage in normal trade.

Burma (Trade)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the European Commission's proposal to withdraw preferences for Burma under the generalised system of preferences. [18231]

Mr. David Davis: Our priority on Burma is to promote economic and political reform. We are considering the Commission's proposal on GSP against this background. The Council of Ministers has not yet been asked to take a decision.

DEFENCE

Findlay Court Martial

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what response the Government are making to the European Court of Human Rights judgment on the Findlay court-martial case; and if he will make a statement. [18699]

Mr. Soames: The Government fully support the court-martial system as the appropriate and necessary framework within which to deal with military discipline.

We have recently made a number of changes to reform aspects of the court-martial system as part of the Armed Forces Act 1996. As I said when announcing our preliminary proposals in the Armed Forces Bill to the House on 7 December 1995—Official Report, columns 346–47—the changes represent a valuable and coherent package of reforms and improvements to take the court-martial system into the next century. The new arrangements will enable it to continue to meet the armed forces' requirement to administer justice firmly but fairly.

Although the court found the United Kingdom to be in violation of article 6(1) of the European convention on human rights, the court has recognised our action in reforming the court-martial system, and in its judgment describes the changes we have made, noting with satisfaction that we have done so. The court made clear that its judgment applies to the system that existed before the reforms we have made. These are due to be introduced on 1 April 1997.

RAF Accident Investigation

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes have been made to the procedures and regulations governing Royal Air Force accident investigation and the role of senior officers in relation to board of inquiry findings since June 1994. [17989]

Mr. Soames: The following changes have taken place since June 1994:

(a) The minimum rank of the president of a board of inquiry into an aircraft accident has been raised from Flight Lieutenant to Squadron Leader.

(b) The role of the relevant Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief in the investigation has been titled "Reviewing Authority" (it was previously untitled).

(c) Assessment of the degree of negligence has been transferred from the president of the board of inquiry to the convening and reviewing authorities.

(d) An intermediate degree of negligence has been introduced, such that negligence is now described as "minor", "major" or "gross".

(e) Differences in the rules on representation at boards of inquiry for service men and service women were removed.

(f) Persons affected were given the right to make a further statement if the degree of negligence attributed by one authority was increased by another.

West Indian Guardship

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to public funds of the West Indian guardship for the year 1996. [17961]

Mr. Soames: The cost of the West Indies guardship for the year 1996 was £7.22 million. Her associated Royal Fleet Auxiliary tanker was provided at a cost of £2.38 million.

Civilian Affairs Units

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilian affairs units are established in the field Army; how many personnel are assigned to these units; and what are his plans to expand or establish additional units for this role. [17986]

Mr. Soames: A civil affairs group is currently being established. This will comprise of four Regular and 50 Territorial Army specialists. There are currently no plans to establish additional units.

Scimitars (Parachute Dropping)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects approval to be given for parachute dropping of Scimitar CVR(T) vehicles from RAF Hercules aircraft; and if he will list the locations where parachute dropping of Scimitars will be permitted. [17988]

Mr. Soames: There has been no capability for the parachute dropping of Scimitar CVR(T)s since the mid-70s. However, approval for the dropping of Scimitars from RAF Hercules aircraft has been granted for the purposes of trials of a re-engineered parachute delivery system for heavy equipment. The trial drop zone locations are all within the Larkhill/Salisbury plain military training area. The trials are due to conclude later this year. Subject to a satisfactory outcome, the equipment will be dropped on routine airborne exercises at locations judged technically and operationally suitable.

Visual Air-to-air Training

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current weather minima for visual air-to-air training by Royal Air Force Tornado F3 aircraft at less than 5,000 feet above ground level, in terms of (a) discernibility of the horizon, (b) in-flight visibility, (c) cloud ceiling and (d) vertical and horizontal separation from cloud; and if he will list changes made to these criteria in the last five years. [17992]

Mr. Soames: The current weather minima for visual air-to-air training by Royal Air Force Tornado F3 aircraft at less than 5,000 ft above ground level are that (a) there are clear visual meteorological conditions enabling pilots to orientate themselves; (b) there is a minimum in-flight visibility of 5,000 overland and 8,000 over sea; (c) any cloud base is no lower than 1,500 ft; and (d) the pilot is able to maintain 1,500 m horizontal and 1,000 ft vertical separation from cloud. There have been no changes to these criteria in the past five years.

NATO (Extension)

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the (a) political and (b) strategic advantages of the extension of NATO to include the states of Eastern Europe. [17977]

Mr. Soames: The study on NATO enlargement, published by the Alliance in September 1995, concluded that political and strategic benefits would result from extending membership of NATO to European states. We continue to support that conclusion.

Media Units

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many media units are established in the field Army; how many personnel are assigned to these units; and what are his plans to expand or establish additional units for this role. [17985]

Mr. Soames: Although there are no units established for this specific purpose, 87 military and civilian staff are currently providing support to media operations within the Army. This number may increase to reflect the current level of operational commitments.

Aircraft (Visual Practice Interceptions)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the minimum vertical and horizontal separation distances between intercepting aircraft and their targets when conducting visual practice interceptions of (a) other fast jet aircraft, (b) military transport aircraft, (c) civil transport aircraft and (d) helicopters. [17991]

Mr. Soames: The information is as follows:

Type	MSD[1] (feet)	Remarks
Fast jet target	1,000	MSD becomes 500 feet if closing for simulated gun attack astern of target.
Military transport aircraft	1,000	—
Civil transport target	See remark	Standard civil air traffic minimum separation requirements of 1,000 feet vertically and 3 nautical miles (nm) horizontally apply
Helicopter target	1,000	—

[1] Minimum separation distance.

School Armouries and Firing Ranges

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent by the Ministry of Defence since 1984 on school armouries and firing ranges on school grounds; and if he will list the cost and name of each school involved. [17884]

Mr. Soames: I regret that the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Meetings (Hong Kong)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what official meetings he held during his recent visit to Hong Kong; and when he (a) arrived and (b) departed. [18352]

Mr. Portillo: During my visit to Hong Kong I met the Governor, the Commander British Forces and a wide range of personnel from the garrison. I arrived at 08.50 on 26 February, and departed at 19.30 the same day.

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15923]

Mr. Soames: For service personnel, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 30 January, Official Report, columns 348–49. The minimum age of recruitment for civilians is the school leaving age of 16.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his Department's latest assessment of the capability of Russia to destroy safely its stockpile of chemical weapons; [18280]

(2) what is his Department's latest assessment of the capability of the United States of America to destroy safely its stockpile of chemical weapons. [18279]

Mr. Soames: The Russian Federation signed the chemical weapons convention in the full knowledge of the destruction timetable it would be obliged to meet under the terms of the convention. However, Russia has yet to ratify the convention and, until it does so, it is not bound by these provisions. Although Russian fulfilment of these obligations is feasible, some technical difficulties are still to be overcome. The Russians also claim that they would not be able to do so due to financial and environmental problems, and continue to press for outside financial assistance. The UK believes it is for the Russian Government to resolve these difficulties. Early ratification of the CWC and full implementation of its provisions, may, however, help to secure financial assistance from the outside.

Although the United States has not yet ratified the chemical weapons convention, it is obliged by national legislation to destroy its stockpile of chemical weapons by 2004. This date is earlier than will be required if the US ratifies the CWC before entry into force. We have no reason to believe that the United States does not have the capability or political will to meet this goal.

BATES

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the original estimated cost of the battlefield artillery target engagement system when the project was originally undertaken; and what was the total outturn cost of the BATES 1 facility; [18224]

(2) what was the original estimated cost of the BATES 2 project; what has been the total expenditure on it to date; and what is the latest total estimated outcome cost of the BATES 2 facility. [18225]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The release of cost figures for BATES phase 1 would prejudice continuing negotiations with the contractor and I am therefore withholding them under exemption 7 of the "practice on access to Government information". BATES phase 2 is expected to cost about £80 million, slightly less than the original estimated cost. Less than £1 million remains to be spent.

TREASURY

EU Member States (National Accounts)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the accounting treatments being adopted by each EU member state in their 1996 and 1997 national accounts which differ from United Kingdom practice; and what assessment he has made of the expected effect of each difference. [15333]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Shaw, dated 3 March 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to reply to your recent question on the accounting treatments being adopted by each EU member state in their 1996 and 1997 national accounts which differ from United Kingdom practice; and what assessment he has made of the expected effect of each difference.

There is a requirement for certain statistics relating to European Monetary Union convergence to be compiled and reported to Eurostat in line with the European System of Accounts, second edition (ESA79). For the purposes of excess deficit criteria, the European System of Accounts (ESA95) Regulation 2223/96 requires that 1 September 1999 reports will be the last to be submitted on an ESA79 basis.

ESA79 is used as the basis for accounting treatment for the debt and deficit criteria for EMU. There are some differences in treatment between member states. In these cases, in order to ensure better comparability for the debt and deficit procedure, after consultation with statistical experts from member states, The Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat) takes decisions on methodological rules to be applied by member states. Eurostat visits member states to check compliance with these rules. However, no specific assessment has been, or could realistically be, made of the effects of differences in treatment in other countries' own accounts from UK practice. UK accounting treatment is described in United Kingdom National Accounts—The Blue Book, published annually by the Office for National Statistics.

Council Directive 89/130/EEC, Euratom, of 13 February 1989 (known as "the GNP Directive") requires that member states provide data on Gross National Product at market prices (GNPmp) on an ESA79-basis for own resource purposes annually to the Commission. The Directive also requires member states to provide the Commission (Eurostat) with an inventory of the procedures and basic statistics used to calculate GNPmp and its components. The GNP Committee has the job of examining compliance of GNPmp data with ESA79 definitions, and examining the statistical sources and the procedures used for calculating GNPmp and its components.

Data for 1996 have not yet been compiled by member states. What treatment has been adopted—and any differences between countries—will not become clear until these accounts are published, or submitted to Eurostat. Therefore any comparison of differences in treatment between the UK and other member states could not yet be done for latest years.

For the national accounts in general, in advance of the introduction of ESA95, there is no statutory framework which determines treatment to be adopted by each member state in their national accounts as a whole. As I mention above, Eurostat does however maintain copies of inventories describing the procedures and basic statistics in that part of the accounts used to calculate data on Gross National Product at market prices (GNPmp) and its components, required under the GNP Directive for own resource purposes.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency set up by his Department since the start of April 1992. [16976]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The costs involved in the setting up of the executive agencies of the Chancellor's Departments have been included in the published running costs for the years in which the agencies were established.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy that the United Kingdom may enter European currency union without an accompanying fiscal union among participating member states. [17044]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Yes. If the United Kingdom were to join EMU we could face sanctions if we were consistently to run up budget deficits of more than three per cent. of GDP and do nothing to correct them. Within that constraint, our budgetary choices would rightly remain a matter for national Governments and Parliaments.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress being made by each of the countries of the European Union in meeting the convergence criteria for EMU in 1996. [18123]

Mr. Clarke [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Most countries made progress towards meeting the convergence criteria for EMU in 1996. On the information available at present, my judgment is that it is very unlikely, though not impossible, that performance against the criteria will be sufficiently clear and sustainable for EMU to proceed on 1 January 1999.

Excess Winter Mortality Rates

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what have been the excess winter mortality rates for each of the last 10 years expressed in terms of excess (a) numbers and (b) percentages for (i) people over the age of 65 years, (ii) single parent families, (iii) people in receipt of income support, (iv) people with disabilities and (v) others; [17431]

(2) what have been the excess winter mortality rates in England for the past 10 years expressed (a) in excess numbers and (b) as percentages. [17423]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 3 March 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply to your recent question asking what have been the excess winter mortality rates in England for the last 10 years expressed in (a) in excess numbers and (b) as percentages.

The figures you requested are shown in the following table:

Excess winter deaths, England, all persons, all ages

Period	Excess winter deaths	Excess winter deaths index
1986–87	24,654	14.8
1987–88	31,493	18.7
1988–89	20,326	12.1
1989–90	44,370	26.5
1990–91	35,718	21.6
1991–92	33,015	20.1
1992–93	24,194	14.6
1993–94	25,029	14.7
1994–95	25,757	15.6
1995–96[1]	37,990	23.1

[1] Provisional.

Excess Winter Deaths are defined as the number of deaths in the four months from December to March, minus the average of the numbers in the preceding autumn (August–November) and the following summer (April–July).

The Excess Winter Deaths Index is the number of excess winter deaths expressed as a percentage of the average of the number of deaths in the autumn and the summer periods.

You also asked for the excess winter mortality rates for each of the last 10 years expressed in terms of excess (a) the numbers and (b) percentages for (i) people over the age of 65 years, (ii) single parent families, (iii) people in receipt of income support, (iv) people with disabilities and (v) others.

Information on parental status, income, or physical impairment is not collected at death registration and we are therefore unable to provide data in terms of these characteristics.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the weekly number of excess deaths for December 1996 and January 1997; and what were the figures for the same periods in each of the last five years. [17382]

Mrs. Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 3 March 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question asking for the weekly number of excess deaths for December 1996 and January 1997, and the figures for the same periods in each of the last five years.

The data on deaths by week of occurrence for England are shown in the tables below:

Inland Revenue

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the performance of the Inland Revenue since 31 March 1996 in meeting its targets for (a) personal callers, (b) telephone calls, (c) repayment claims and (d) correspondence. [17891]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue does not publish its performance against annual targets until results covering the full period are available and appropriate validation and checking of figures has been carried out.

On latest provisional information, the Department is broadly on course to meet or exceed its annual targets for personal callers, telephone calls and repayment claims, but it is unlikely to achieve its correspondence target.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual cost to public funds of mortgage interest tax relief at (a) 20 per cent. and (b) 23 per cent. [17857]

Mr. Jack: The estimated total cost of mortgage interest tax relief in 1997–98 is £2.4 billion. The rate of relief is 15 per cent. If the rate of relief were 20 per cent. the extra cost to the Exchequer would be about £800 million. If the rate of relief was 23 per cent. the extra cost would be about £1.3 billion.

These estimates are based on the assumption, by convention, of no change from the current estimated average building society interest rate of 6.51 per cent.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual cost to public funds of increasing the amount of a mortgage allowable for tax from £30,000 to £60,000, assuming no other changes to the tax system. [17858]

Mr. Jack: The estimated total cost of mortgage interest tax relief in 1997–98 is £2.4 billion. Relief is limited to the interest on loans of £30,000. If the limit was increased to £60,000, and the rate of relief remained at 15 per cent. the extra cost to the Exchequer would be about £900 million.

The estimate is based on the assumption, by convention, of no change from the current estimated average building society interest rate of 6.51 per cent.

Inflation and Unemployment

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 577, what assessment he has made of the contribution of (a) indirect taxes and (b) imported raw material prices to recent reductions in inflation and unemployment. [17907]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Indirect taxes and imported raw material prices are just two of the many factors that affect inflation and unemployment. In particular, the appropriate use of monetary policy and labour market reforms have played an important role in achieving recent reductions in inflation and unemployment. It is difficult to quantify the precise effects of each of these factors.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will translate the PSBR figures in table 4A.8 of the Red Book into cash terms. [18127]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 28 February 1997]: The table shows the figures requested.

Adlids

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contracts the Inland Revenue has with Adlids; what are the costs, nature and duration of these contracts; what procedures were used to enter into the contracts; and what assessment the Inland Revenue has made of the benefits of the contracts with Adlids. [18003]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 28 February 1997]: The Inland Revenue made a one-off payment of £30,000 for self-assessment information to be printed on 3 million take-away lids.

The "contract" was negotiated via Ardent, one of a number of promotions agencies working on a range of projects to help target self-assessment information to those affected. A 50 per cent. discount was negotiated on normal rates charged by Adlids.

According to research, 60 per cent. of self-employed manual trades people, a key audience for self-assessment information, regularly eat Chinese take-aways. At the cost of 1p per lid, this was a cost-effective and highly targeted way of delivering self-assessment information in an unusual and striking way.

Besides the lids themselves being seen by those likely to be affected by self-assessment, the idea achieved some very positive press coverage.

Unemployment Leavers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage of those leaving the unemployment register went into (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment in each year since 1979; [16765]

(2) how many of those leaving the register of those unemployed and entitled to claim benefit went into (a) full-time employment, (b) part-time employment, (c) permanent employment and (d) temporary employment in (i) England, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland (iv) Northern Ireland and (v) each standard English region in the last year for which figures are available. [16895]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 20 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 3 March 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to reply to your questions (16765 and 16895) on how many of those leaving claimant unemployment went into full-time, part-time, temporary and permanent employment in England, Wales, Northern Ireland and each standard English region in the last year.

The figures in the attached tables show the number of claimants who left the claimant count and went into work in 1995 and 1996 for each standard statistical region in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Information on the destination of claimants from the claimant count is not available prior to January 1995 and no information is available on the type of employment found.

The 'unknown' destinations category shown in the table includes claimants whose claims were terminated because they stopped signing at their Employment Service jobcentre, together with claimants who did not supply a reason for stopping their claim.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16746]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 20 February 1997]: This is a matter for the management of the bodies concerned.

Average Weekly Earnings

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest available figures for average weekly earnings in (a) Wales and (b) the United Kingdom for (i) males and (ii) females. [17088]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 24 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Sir Wyn Roberts, dated 3 March 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on average weekly earnings in Wales and the United Kingdom.

In April 1996, average gross weekly earnings of full time employees on adult rates, whose pay for the survey period was unaffected by absence were as follows:

	Wales £	United Kingdom £
Males	345.50	389.90
Females	250.50	282.30
All	313.10	350.30

This information is taken from the 1996 New Earning Survey conducted separately in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The results of the Great Britain survey are published in six volumes, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library. The results of the Northern Ireland survey can be obtained directly from the Department of Economic Development.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the latest estimates for gross domestic product per capita for 1996 at current market prices and purchasing power parities for (a) the United Kingdom and

(b) those of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries for which information is available to him. [17432]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 24 February 1997]: Provisional estimates of gross domestic product per capita in 1996, measured at purchasing power parity, for the United Kingdom and other OECD countries can be found in the latest edition of the OECD publication, "Main Economic Indicators," which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Income Tax

Mr. Richards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on income tax levels of raising the revenue currently raised through council tax in Wales by an increase in the basic rate of income tax. [17868]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The latest available year for income tax costings for Wales is for 1994–95. Welsh local authorities were budgeted to collect about £340 million of council tax in 1994–95. In order to raise this same level of revenue, the basic rate of tax would need to be increased by nearly 5p in Wales.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Millennium Exhibition

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his latest estimate of the numbers of visitors which will be accommodated by the millennium exhibition at Greenwich. [16705]

Mr. Freeman: The exhibition's operation company, Millennium Central Limited, has set a target of more than 10 million visitors. The indicative budget produced before Christmas was developed on the basis of this target. It is intended that the site should be accessible to the largest possible number of people from all sections of the community.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sports Grounds

2. Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement about the provision of sports grounds in England. [16696]

Mr. Sproat: The policy document, "Sport: Raising the Game," made clear our commitment to ensure that the best possible sporting facilities are in place to enable sportsmen and sportswomen to reach their full potential, and to develop sport at its grassroots level. The national lottery is already making a significant contribution supporting more than 2,500 projects totalling some £440 million to date.

Museums and Galleries (Funding)

17. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many current capital projects at museums and galleries are supported by Government resources. [16714]

Mr. Sproat: There are currently 27 projects supported by Government resources at the museums and galleries directly funded by my Department. These projects, costing £54 million, are supported by £30 million of Government funding, which is additional to the massive injection of lottery funds into museums and galleries throughout the UK; so far, lottery grants of more than £400 million have been announced.

Lottery Awards (Worcestershire)

18. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many projects in Worcestershire have won awards from national lottery funding bodies; what is the total value of these awards; and if she will make a statement. [16715]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To date, the national lottery distributing bodies have announced 122 awards to projects in Hereford and Worcester for a total of £26.3 million. Eighty-seven of these, worth a total of £18.2 million, fall within the boundaries of Worcestershire as it will be defined from 1 April.

British Waterways

19. Sir. Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage is she will make a statement on the support from the millennium fund to British Waterways. [16716]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Millennium Commission has supported one project from the British Waterways Board: the millennium link project to reinstate navigation between the Forth and Clyde and Union canals, which has been offered a grant of £32.2 million. The heritage lottery fund made an award of £25 million to the British Waterways Board for the Kennet and Avon canal.

The commission has supported four other waterways projects: the Ribble link in Lancashire; the Rochdale canel; the Huddersfield narrow canal; and the new lock at Great Conard, Suffolk. In total, canal projects have been offered £61.8 million by the commission.

Tourism (Midlands)

20. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on tourism in the midlands. [16717]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Tourism is an industry of vital importance to the midlands, as it is throughout Britain. In 1995 there were almost 20 million domestic and overseas visitor trips to the areas covered by the Heart of England and East Midlands tourist boards, generating revenue of almost £2,130 million.

The industry in all parts of the country will benefit from the measures contained in the tourism strategy, success through partnership, which I announced on 5 February. The strategy sets out a co-ordinated action plan for Government, the industry and the tourist boards working in partnership to develop tourism to its full potential.

Lottery Awards (Distribution)

21. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will review the distribution of national lottery awards. [16718]

23. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the distribution of national lottery awards. [16720]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The national lottery has been a great success. More than £3 billion has been raised for the good causes and more than 12,000 awards announced for more than 18,000 projects of all sizes in all parts of the United Kingdom. I am continuously considering how the system for the distribution of lottery funds might be improved and will continue to do so.

Historic Churches

22. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the work that English Heritage has undertaken to preserve historic churches. [16719]

Mr. Sproat: Grants from English Heritage towards the preservation of historic churches and other ecclesiastical buildings are available for grade I and grade II* listed properties, and grade II listed properties in conservation areas. Over the five years from 1991 to 1996, English Heritage has provided £47.2 million in such grants, and aims to have spent a further £11.2 million in 1996–97.

Digital Broadcasting

25. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the BBC's proposals for digital broadcasting. [16722]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I welcomed the BBC's overall digital strategy, outlined last May in its publication, "Extending Choice in the Digital Age." I have considered and given approval in principle, under the provisions of the BBC charter and agreement, to the BBC's initial proposals for public service digital television, the details of which are currently subject to public consultation by the BBC.

Television Programmes (Quality)

27. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will undertake a review of the quality of television programmes. [16724]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The monitoring of the quality of television programmes on independent television and the BBC is the responsibility of the Independent Television Commission and the BBC board of governors respectively. The ITC publishes an annual review of the performance of Channel 3 licencees and Channel 4 and the BBC governors report each year on the corporation's performance in the BBC annual report.

British Academy of Sport

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to announce the site of the British academy of sport. [16702]

Mr. Sproat: We announced on 25 February that the preferred site for the British Academy of Sport will be chosen from three contenders: the Central Consortium, the Heyford Consortium and the Sheffield Consortium. These proposals will now be considered in more detail by the United Kingdom Sports Council and my Department.

Millennium Celebrations (Wales)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations she has had with bodies and individuals in Wales with respect to Welsh participation in official millennium celebrations. [16721]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My Department is consulting widely over millennium issues. The millennium co-ordination group, which is chaired by my Department, includes representatives from the Welsh Office. The Church Together in Wales is represented on the Lambeth sub-group which considers the spiritual aspects of the millennium.

In addition, the Millennium Commission has sent its consultation document to all Welsh Members of Parliament, local authorities and local authority associations, the Welsh Office, and Welsh lottery distributors and to arts, sport and heritage bodies. Copies were also sent to the police, churches and voluntary associations in Wales and to companies in the entertainment industry, as well as to any individuals or groups who had inquired about the matter.

New Wembley Stadium

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the proposed new national football and athletics stadium at Wembley. [17100]

Mr. Sproat: I welcome the decision announced by the Sports Council on 17 December 1996 that Wembley is to be the proposed site for the new 80,000 all-seater English national stadium for athletics, football, and rugby league, and will receive a lottery award of £120 million towards the total project costs of around £210 million. This decision is a good example of the Government's commitment to facilitate, through the national lottery, the development of the necessary sporting infrastructure to enable this country to attract to these shore top international events—such as the football World Cup in 2006 and the world athletics championships in either 2001 or 2003.

Tourism Industry (Training)

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of state for National Heritage what action she is taking to promote training in the tourism industry. [16706]

Mr. Sproat: Tourism has enormous potential for job creation: it creates one in five of all new jobs. As stated in our October publication, "People Working in Tourism and Hospitality," to deliver good service—more of the industry must recruit and retain the right people and equip them with the skills that they need. Our comprehensive new strategy for tourism, success through partnership, which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State launched on 5 February, carries this work forward. It is clear from the many letters and comments that we have had already, that the industry particularly welcomes the fact that this is a joint initiative with them, with key targets and specific points for action on many aspects of tourism. As announced in the strategy, next month we shall issue a practical guide specifically for small tourism businesses which will include advice on training and developing staff.

Camelot

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will instruct Camelot to issue twice-weekly figures in cash terms for the amount (a) staked, (b) paid out in prizes, (c) paid out for good causes and (d) retained by Camelot. [17834]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 27 March 1997]: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have—therefore—asked the director general of the national lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member and to place copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

TRANSPORT

British Rail (Winding-up Costs)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when (a) the British Rail architecture design group and (b) British Rail businesses were wound up; if he will indicate in each case the number of employees (i) in total and (ii) in York one year before the wind-up date; and what sums were spent on (1) redundancy payments and (2) other costs associated with the winding-up of the businesses. [16644]

Mr. Watts: Details of the costs incurred by the British Railways Board on those businesses which were wound up as part of the privatisation process are a matter for the board itself.

London Underground (Tunnel Structures)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 25 February, Official Report, column 165, if he will give a breakdown of the figure of £1.2 billion relating to the structures of tunnels. [18075]

Sir George Young: London Underground estimates that £350 million of its investment backlog relates to civil engineering works on the railway's infrastructure, including tunnels. It does not have a more specific figure for tunnels alone. London Underground has recently completed the refurbishment of the Northern line tunnels under the Thames and has re-lined the tunnels around Old Street station. Work on the Bakerloo and East London line tunnels is well under way.

Road Traffic (New Drivers) Act 1995

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what publicity he intends to initiate regarding the Road Traffic (New Drivers) Act 1995 in advance of its implementation. [17995]

Mr. Bowis: We have already publicised the Act and its implementation in the Driving Standards Agency magazine circulated to all approved driving instructors, motorcycle trainers and local road safety officers and have sent a guidance note to justices' clerks and justices' chief executives. Articles will appear in the literature distributed at theory test centres and given to all drivers and riders on passing the practical test. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's information leaflets, including the one sent to all provisional licence applicants, will also include references to the Act, as will the highway code when it is next re-issued. Further publicity events are being planned nearer to the date of implementation which is 1 June 1997.

Bus Drivers (London)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many London bus drivers are currently in receipt of social security benefits; and what is the cost of this to public funds. [18442]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to reduce the number of accidents arising from lorries shedding their wheels. [18268]

Mr. Bowis: Following joint discussions with the Vehicle Inspectorate and the Association of Chief Police Officers, a nationwide survey of the extent of the problem is currently taking place and will continue until the end of April this year. The need for further action will be considered in light of the outcome of this study.

We are also currently updating the Department's leaflet, first issued in 1991, giving further guidance to operators on measures for preventing wheel loss.

Railtrack Land

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with Railtrack about (a) the maintenance of fencing, walls and hedges on its land and (b) the removal of litter and debris from such land; and if he will make a statement. [18437]

Mr. Watts: Maintenance of boundaries is a matter for Railtrack and enforcement of the relevant statutory duties is the responsibility of the Health and Safety Executive. The Department has consulted Railtrack about proposals to transfer the litter duty which applied to the British Railways Board, to the relevant successor bodies, including Railtrack.

London Underground (Finance)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has made to (a) London Transport and (b) London Underground Ltd. in the last five years concerning ways in which they could increase revenue for London Underground operation by (i) better marketing and (ii) more commercial use of property; and what estimate he has made of the revenue potential of (i) and (ii). [18346]

Mr. Bowis: Marketing and the management and development of its property are operational matters for London Transport, which recognises its importance.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) of 25 February, Official Report, column 157, what factors underlay his statement that operating surpluses on London Underground would grow substantially; and what sums he expects to be available for capital investment in the years 2000 to 2005. [18345]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend's comments were based on London Underground's own forecasts of substantial growth in operating surpluses. Following privatisation, investment will be funded not only from these surpluses and continued Government support, but also from the recycling of privatisation proceeds and funds raised by the private sector. It is premature to speculate on the precise sums involved, but our overall aim is to modernise the underground's infrastructure within five years of privatisation.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requests were made by London Transport for capital funding for London Underground Ltd. and what amounts were provided from public funds for (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96. [18351]

Mr. Bowis: London Transport submit to Ministers each year their views on their grant requirements for the forthcoming public expenditure round. The distribution of grant by LT between London Underground Ltd. and its other businesses is an operational matter for LT. The cash allocated to London Underground by LT from 1992–93 to 1995–96 is shown in the table. These figures exclude grant for the construction of the Jubilee line extension.

£ million outturn prices

Year	Cash paid to London Underground Ltd.[1]
1992–93	598
1993–94	511
1994–95	413
1995–96	340

London Underground (Privatisation)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place statutory limits on the re-sale of shares to those currently employed or contracted to London Underground Ltd. in the event of a management buy-out. [18349]

Mr. Bowis: Our proposals for encouraging employees and others to acquire a stake in the privatised London underground will be explained in the White Paper we plan to publish this summer.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral statement of 25 February, Official Report, columns 149–65, concerning London Underground Ltd., what (a) consultants and (b) advisers he intends to employ for what specific purposes and at what estimated costs; and from which vote such payments would be made. [18348]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend intends shortly to commence the process of inviting bids for the provision of professional advice on the financial implications of privatisation of the London Underground, and of the options outlined in his statement. No estimates have yet been made of the cost of such an appointment; nor have decisions been taken on the vote from which such an appointment would be funded.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Vauxhall (Ms Hoey) of 25 February, Official Report, column 161, concerning consultations over the privatisation of London Underground, if he will list those bodies he intends to consult and indicate for each the scope of such consultation. [18344]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend intends to consult a wide range of bodies, including but not limited to London Transport, the Health and Safety Commission, the Rail Regulator, Office for Passenger Rail Franchising, the London Pride Partnership and the London Regional Passengers' Committee. Consultation will cover matters relevant or of concern to each body. We expect that many other bodies will also wish to let him have their views.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral statement of 25 February, Official Report, columns 149–64, on London Underground from what source he estimates that any privatised section of the activities of London Underground will provide funds for paying interest on capital borrowings (a) prior to and (b) subsequent to the completion of payment of receipts from shares being invested in capital improvements to improve structure or equipment. [18347]

Mr. Bowis: This would depend on the structure for privatisation chosen and on the arrangements made by the private sector operator concerned.

London Underground (Service Levels)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Hammersmith (Mr. Soley) of 25 February, Official Report, column 160, concerning London Underground, if he will make it a duty of the regulator to ensure that existing minimum levels and quality of service are maintained within the fare structure set out in his statement. [18350]

Mr. Bowis: The White Paper we plan to publish this summer will set out our detailed proposals, including the regulatory arrangements which will underpin these requirements.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much of the promised contribution of £300 million towards the cost of the Jubilee line extension has been paid so far by the Canary wharf developers. [18130]

Mr. Bowis: The Canary Wharf developers have agreed to contribute £400 million towards the cost of the Jubilee line extension. To date, London Transport has received £100 million. The balance of £300 million will be paid over a 24-year period starting immediately after the first day of operation of the Jubilee line extension.

Salisbury Bypass

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the terms of reference set by him and by the Secretary of State for the Environment when they sought advice last autumn from the Countryside Commission on the proposed crossing of the River Avon by the Salisbury bypass. [18011]

Mr. Watts: The terms of reference of the review of certain aspects of the proposed A36 Salisbury bypass are set out in paragraphs 51 to 53 of the letter of 22 October 1996 issued on behalf of my right hon. Friends. Specifically, the Secretaries of State instructed the Highways Agency to consult the Countryside Commission on the aspect of the review that was concerned with possible further measures to reduce the overall landscape impact of the bypass in the region of the newly notified East Harnham meadows site of special scientific interest.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Juvenile Courts (Cullompton)

35. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the capacity of Cullompton, Devon, juvenile courts to meet their work load. [16732]

Mr. Streeter: I understand that Her Majesty's magistrates courts service inspectorate is today beginning an inspection of the Devon magistrates courts committee area. We have no reason to doubt the capacity of the Cullompton juvenile court to meet its work load.

Legal Costs (Convicted Criminals)

36. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received on making convicted criminals contribute to the cost of their court hearing and legal aid bills. [16733]

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received on making convicted criminals contribute to the cost of their court hearing and legal aid bills. [16726]

Mr. Streeter: I have received no representations on making convicted criminals contribute to the cost of their court hearing and legal aid bills. However, where their means require it, defendants in criminal cases already make a contribution towards their legal costs.

Legal Aid Budget

38. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the factors underlying the growth in the legal aid budget since 1980. [16735]

Mr. Streeter: The principal factor underlying the growth in legal aid expenditure since 1980 has been the increase in the number of people helped. During the period, the number of acts of assistance increased by 219 per cent., from 1 million in 1980–81 to 3.5 million in 1995–96. Higher unit costs have also contributed significantly to growth, where average payments have consistently grown at a rate well above that of inflation.

National Marriage Week

40. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what results he expects from the institution of National Marriage Week; and what contribution has been made by his Department to its objectives. [16737]

Mr. Streeter: National Marriage Week was organised independently by the Christian charity Marriage Resource. My right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor was pleased to accept an invitation from Marriage Resource to speak at an event during National Marriage Week. He called on all those who believe in the institution of marriage to work to promote a positive and realistic vision of marriage. I and my colleagues in the Government are committed to doing all we can to support marriage.

Civil Justice (Access)

41. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to improve access to civil justice; and if he will make a statement. [16738]

Mr. Streeter: The Government have embarked on a wide-ranging set of reforms of the civil justice system, following Lord Woolf's final report "Access to Justice". October 1998 has been set as the target date for the implementation of the major planks of the reforms, which are designed to make civil litigation quicker, cheaper and simpler.

Limitation Legislation

42. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects a full review of limitation legislation to be completed. [16739]

Mr. Streeter: The Law Commission has undertaken a comprehensive review of the law of limitation periods with a view to its simplification and rationalisation. The first stage will be completed when the Law Commission publishes a consultation paper, which it hopes to do this summer. A period of consultation will follow before the Law Commission makes its final recommendations.

Advisory Board on Family Law

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Sectetary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the composition of the Advisory Board on Family Law. [18700]

Mr. Streeter: On 10 December 1966, in response to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence), Official Report column 96, I set out the Lord Chancellor's plans for the Advisory Board on Family Law which will provide independent advice on the implementation and operation of the Family Law Act 1966.

The Lord Chancellor has now appointed Sir Thomas Boyd-Carpenter to be the chairman of the Advisory Board on Family Law and the following people to be members of the board:

The Honourable Mr. Justice Wall
Naomi Angell
Dr. Carole Kaplan
Dr. Janet Lewis
Suzan Matthews QC
Professor Phyllida Parsloe
Professor Simon Roberts
Jane Simpson
David Skidmore
Colin Webb
Anthony Wells

All appointments are for a period of five years commencing on 1 April 1997 and ending on 31 March 2002. The board's first meeting will take place on 14 April 1997.

Legal Aid Centres

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Parliamentary Sectetary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much grant is allocated in 1996–97 to how many legal aid centres; in which main locations; and if he will make a statement. [17099]

Mr. Streeter: The Department provides the Legal Aid Board with funds from which annual grants are made to nine law centres, in London, Birmingham, Leeds, Cardiff and Middlesex. In 1996–97 the board has paid £900,564 in annual grants to the law centres.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractors and the value of the contract in each case. [17605]

Mr. Streeter: The information is as follows:

Consultants	Number of contracts	Nature	Value (excluding VAT)
EDS	1	A seven-year contract was awarded on 8 October 1996 under the private finance initiative. Under the contract, the local county court system (LOCCS) will computerise much of the routine work of the county courts. The first module of the new system, Caseman, will enable court documents to be issued automatically and replace the system of manual record keeping for every case, making access to case details easier. Five existing information technology systems including CREST (which supports Crown court centres) SPC and CCBC (which support centralised functions for Northampton County Court) were transferred to EDS	In region of £20–£25 million

Court Waiting Times

Mr. Straw: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his reply of 14 February, Official Report, column 354, what was the number of defendants (a) on bail and (b) in custody, who waited (i) less than eight weeks and (ii) less than 16 weeks before being dealt with. [17622]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Jack Straw, dated 3 March 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question about the waiting times for defendants on bail and in custody committed for trial to the Crown Court in 1996.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cold-related Illnesses

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what have been the excess winter treatment rates for cold-related illnesses in hospitals in Northern Ireland for (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients for each of the last 10 years; [17214]

(2) how many people in Northern Ireland received treatment by NHS doctors for cold-related illnesses for the period December 1996 and January 1997; and what was the average figure for similar periods in the past 10 years. [17221]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland received hospital treatment as (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients for cold-related illnesses for the period December 1996 and January 1997; and what was the average figure for similar periods in the past 10 years. [17218]

Mr. Moss: The information available for in-patients is shown in the table and covers the period 1989–90 to 1995–96. For the purposes of the question, "cold-related illnesses" have been defined as pneumonia, influenza, bronchitis and hypothermia.

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17063]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested in respect of the Northern Ireland Departments and their agencies is as follows for the period 1 January 1996 to 31 January 1997:

(A) Items stolen		(B) Items unaccounted for		Items valued at over £5,000	IT equipment (including in previous figures)
Number	Cost (£)	Number	Cost (£)		Stolen	Unaccounted
83	86,868	138	9,362	One Sokkisha survey instrument—£7,145 (stolen from Roads Service Agency store) One mobile chlorination unit—£6,395 (stolen from Water Service Agency—locked site) One Sokkisha station set—£7,012 (stolen from Roads Service Agency) One Ford Sierra car—£7,805 (stolen from Environment and Heritage Service Agency) One Lorry—£10,443 (stolen from Roads Service Agency locked depot)	Six items totalling £9,242	Six items totalling £2,296

Figures do not include DOE items valued at less than £500 as their inclusion would incur disproportionate costs.

All items valued at over £5,000 were the property of DOE.

Social Deprivation Funds

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when advice or instructions will be issued by the Department of Education (Northern Ireland) to schools in respect of approved uses of the funds allocated under the social deprivation factor. [17672]

Mr. Ancram: Under the local management of schools formula arrangements, it is a matter for the schools to decide and prioritise how they spend their budgets, including their targeting social need allocations. The Department does not specify how any individual elements of school budgets should be spent, but the provision made by any school is always subject to general inspection.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will investigate as a matter of urgency the effect of the social deprivation factor on the balance of funding between controlled and maintained primary schools of approximately the same enrolment, with particular reference to schools with enrolments in excess of 150 pupils. [17667]

Mr. Ancram: The Department's targeting social need policy focuses on the targeting of additional resources to schools in terms of social and educational disadvantage, regardless of whether those schools are controlled or maintained. Just over 60 per cent. of such funding allocated under the local management of schools arrangements goes to Catholic maintained schools, and that is a reflection of the additional need in these schools. However targeting social need allocations represent only a small part of the overall school budget and, when all other factors are taken in account, the total per capita allocations to controlled and maintained schools are very similar.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is (a) the total allocation in 1996–97 for the five education and library boards in Northern Ireland in respect of the social deprivation factor in their budgets and (b) the amount distributed directly to schools by the Department of Education (Northern Ireland) using a free school meals factor. [17665]

Mr. Ancram: A total of £35,726,893 was allocated to schools by the education and library boards in 1996–97 in respect of targeting social needs.

The Department allocated a total of £1,496,868 to voluntary grammar schools and £563,847 to grant maintained integrated schools in the same year.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what evidence he has obtained of low educational achievement in respect of each grammar school in receipt of funding determined by reference to social deprivation. [17670]

Mr. Ancram: None. Only 4 per cent. of the targeting social need funds is allocated to grammar schools reflecting the low incidence of social deprivation as measured by the number of pupils entitled to free school meals. All such pupils are eligible for additional support regardless of which schools they attend.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the social deprivation factor was first applied to school budgets in Northern Ireland; what steps have been taken to monitor this allocation and assess its cost-effectiveness; and when he will publish the results of the monitoring procedures. [17666]

Mr. Ancram: Targeting social need funding for schools has been an integral part of local management of schools funding arrangements since their introduction in 1991. Under the LMS formula arrangements it is for schools to prioritise how they spend their budgets, including their targeting social need allocations. Schools are responsible to parents for the way in which they spend their resources and provision made for low achieving pupils is also an integral part of the published inspection reports of schools. A recent research project undertaken by the University of Ulster showed that schools are aware of targeting social need allocations and make every effort to use the funds effectively.

Council For Catholic Maintained Schools

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment his Department makes of the level of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools expenditure per pupil relative to that in the maintained sector. [17669]

Mr. Ancram: None. The level of expenditure incurred by the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools is based on an assessment of the resources required to meet its statutory responsibilities.

Traffic Reduction Powers

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to provide the powers granted to local authorities in the Road Traffic Reduction Bill to district councils in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [17700]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service and its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. P. Fraser to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 28 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive to reply to your recently tabled PQ about the Road Traffic Reduction Bill. In his absence I will reply on his behalf.

The Road Traffic Reduction Bill, as presently drafted, applies only to local authorities which are highway authorities. The Department of the Environment is the sole road authority in Northern Ireland and, if the Bill is enacted, similar requirements can be placed on the Department, including that of consultation or liaison with district councils, by means of a policy direction.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Sectarian Harassment

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if a Northern Ireland Office Minister was involved in directing the transfer of a member of the Minister of Agriculture's private office who was subsequently found by the Fair Employment Commission to have been the victim of sectarian harassment within that private office. [17800]

Mr. Ancram: The matter is of some complexity and my noble Friend has written to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1992, with special reference to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14947]

Mr. Boswell: The residents of Bournemouth alongside those living elsewhere have benefited from MAFF policies which have led to rising farm incomes, greater protection for the interests of farmers and consumers and new measures to safeguard food and public health, while local grant-aided expenditure on flood and coastal defence amounts to more than £1.5 million over the past five years.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency set up by his Department since the start of April 1992. [16964]

Mr. Boswell: Since April 1992, the following executive agencies have been launched by MAFF:

	Date
(a) ADAS[1]	1 April 1992
(b) Central Science Laboratory (CSL)	1 April 1992
(c) Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD)	1 April 1993
(d) Meat Hygiene Service (MHS)	1 April 1995
(e) Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA)	1 October 1995

[1] Preferred bidder for privatisation announced on 19 February 1997.

An analysis of the costs of establishing these agencies is not available without incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17604]

Mr. Boswell: Since 1992 the Department has held no contracts with EDS, Andersens or BMI. Prior to September 1993 there were no contracts with Capita. There were orders placed with Sema before that date; details of these orders are not available, but were fairly insignificant compared with later years.

In September 1993 framework agreements were signed with both Capita and Sema. These agreements have no fixed value. There has been one order placed with Capita; this concerned assistance with the information technology directorate's market testing programme. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, I am unable to reveal the cost of this work. Under the Sema agreement there have been numerous orders having total value of £4,989,000. All concerned project management, systems analysis and programme resources in relation to the development of IT applications software.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the possible health risk to (a) consumers and (b) animals of the use of bovine somatotropin in (i) milk and (ii) other products; and if he will make a statement. [17845]

Mrs. Browning: No veterinary medicine is authorised for use unless it meets stringent statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. Safety includes the safety of the consumer of any food produced from the treated animal, and the health and welfare of the treated animal. As part of this process the applicant company is required to submit data to the veterinary medicines directorate, where they are carefully assessed by specialists qualified in various scientific disciplines including biology, pharmacy, veterinary medicine, toxicology and ecotoxicology.

Applications for the authorisation of bovine somatotropin have been very carefully assessed by various independent expert committees in Britain and Europe. They have concluded that BST poses no hazard to public safety or to animal health or welfare.

Nevertheless there is a moratorium on marketing and use of the product in the European Union until 31 December 1999 to allow limited field tests in order to obtain any other scientific data that might be taken into account by the Council of Ministers when taking a final decision to the authorisation of BST. No application for such tests has been made in the UK.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations his Department has issued on the use of bovine somatotropin for (i) milk and (ii) other products; and if he will make a statement. [17846]

Mrs. Browning: None. There is an EU moratorium on the use of BST until the end of 1999. If the Council of Ministers authorises the use of BST when the moratorium expires, no veterinary medicinal product containing BST will be permitted for use in the UK except in accordance with a marketing authorisation issued under the Marketing Authorisations for Veterinary Medicinal Products Regulations 1994. Its use would also be restricted to veterinary prescription.

Genetically Modified Maize

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the recent actions of the Governments of Luxembourg and France in determining his policy in respect of the importation of genetically modified maize. [17847]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 24 February 1997, Official Report, column 79.

Rabies

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Dr. Strang) of 18 February, Official Report, column 513, if the revised protocol relating to rabies antibody tests will provide for mutual acceptance of test results from approved laboratories in participating countries. [18131]

Mrs. Browning: This would be the intention of the revised protocol.

HEALTH

Eye Tests

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people who have had eye tests in each year since 1987. [17683]

Mr. Malone: No information is held on the number of individual patients who receive sight tests. The estimated number of national health service and private sight tests is shown in the table. Because the information on private sight tests is from a sample survey of activity across Great Britain, the figures are for Great Britain only.

Consultant Vacancies

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there were for consultants by specialty in each year since 1990. [17862]

Mr. Malone: Information on consultant vacancies by specialty for 1990 to 1994 is shown in the table. For information for 1995, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 4 February 1997, Official Report, columns 595–96. Information for 1996 is not yet available.

Data on vacant posts are difficult to interpret and do not necessarily imply a shortage. The census is a snapshot on 30 September each year. Some vacancies will be wholly or partly filled by locums. For others, national health service trusts may find other ways to provide the service than re-advertising. The numbers give no indication of how long the post has been empty. Some of these would have been in the process of being filled.

Blood (CJD)

Sir Harold Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he has issued regarding the acceptability of blood donations from the relatives of persons suffering or who have died from the new variant of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [17809]

Mr. Horam: The National Blood Service guidelines exclude from giving blood relatives of people who are suffering from, or who have died from, any form of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what tests are available to demonstrate that blood does not contain the agent of the new variant CJD. [18022]

Mr. Horam: There is no test available to detect Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, including the new variant, in the blood of living persons.

The safety of blood is kept under regular review by the expert advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Blood and Tissues for Transplantation. There is no evidence of any risk of transmission of CJD through blood or blood products. However, as a precautionary measure, the National Blood Service guidelines exclude from giving blood people who, as a result of personal health factors or treatment received, might be at risk of developing CJD, and people with a family history of CJD.

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines indicating (a) the organisations that they represent, (b) the organisations nominating them to sit on the committee, (c) other voluntary and paid employment that they undertake and (d) other areas of expertise that they have; and if he will make a statement. The Committee on Safety of Medicines is an independent body of drug safety experts. Its members are appointed by the United Kingdom Health Ministers—the licensing authority—following consultations with appropriate organisations and on the recommendations of the Medicines Commission. The organisations consulted include professional associations such as the royal colleges, the pharmaceutical industry, and organisations concerned with the interests of consumers, women and ethnic minorities. Members do not represent organisations, but contribute by their individual expertise and judgment to the advice given by the committee to the licensing authority. In addition, members are required to follow a code of practice on relations with the pharmaceutical industry and to declare their interests which are published annually.

Pinderfields and Pontefract Hospitals Trust

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when, and by whom, approval was given to the placement of newspaper advertisements inviting applications for the chairmanship and non-executive membership of the proposed Pinderfields and Pontefract hospitals trust. [18021]

Mr. Horam: The advertisement was placed by the national health service executive following the decision to establish the new trust.

Cancelled Operations

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of cancelled operations by district health authority for the quarter ending 31 December 1996. [18281]

Mr. Horam: The information requested will be placed in the Library shortly.

NHS Facilities (Repair and Maintenance Backlog)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the outstanding repair and maintenance backlog on NHS facilities by region at the end of December 1996. [18282]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 19 November 1996, Official Report, columns 529–30. That is the latest information available.

NHS Finances

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the predicted out-turn position at the end of the third quarter for the financial year 1996–97 for (a) each NHS trust and (b) each health authority. [18283]

Mr. Horam: The information requested will be placed in the Library shortly.

Milk Tokens and Vitamin Supplements

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many mothers and expectant mothers under 25 years who receive contributions-based jobseeker's allowance are not entitled to milk tokens and vitamin supplements by region and nationally. [18285]

(2) if he will give mothers and expectant mothers under 25 years who receive contributions-based jobseeker's allowance an entitlement to milk tokens and vitamin supplements. [18286]

Mr. Horam: Under the welfare food scheme, milk tokens and vitamin supplements are provided to mothers and expectant mothers who are in receipt of an income-based jobseeker's allowance. We have no plans to extend the entitlement to women receiving a contribution-based jobseeker's allowance.

Congenital Rubella Syndrome

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were born in 1996 with congenital rubella syndrome; and what procedures are in place to train general practitioners to communicate diagnoses to the parents and refer such cases to specialist support services. [18287]

Mr. Horam: The latest year for which centrally collected figures are available is 1994–95, when there were 12 finished consultant episodes in which the primary diagnosis was congenital rubella. Communicating an adverse diagnosis to the parents of sick and disabled children is an extremely challenging task and forms an important part of general practitioners' training. Further guidance is also available to health service staff. The document "Child Health in the Community: A Guide to Good Practice", issued last September by the national health service executive—copies of which are available in the Library—includes a section on the principles involved in breaking bad news and accessing specialist support services, and advice on the training and support needs of staff undertaking this duty.

Accident and Emergency Services (London)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the report of the Greater London Association of Community Health Councils on the accident and emergency services in London; and if he will make a statement on its recommendations. [18289]

Mr. Malone: We have noted the report.

Work has been undertaken by health authorities and trusts to ensure that the service is able to cope with peaks of activity. Every health authority produced an action plan with its trusts in advance of this winter and these arrangements have, in general, worked well. We have made £20 million extra funds available during the current financial year to meet particular pressures, out of which around £4 million is going to health authorities in London.

Broadmoor Hospital

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the High Security Psychiatric Commissioning Board last made an (a) planned and (b) unplanned visit to Broadmoor. [17820]

Mr. Burns [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Since its inception on 1 April 1996, the High Security Psychiatric Services Commissioning Board has made numerous visits to Broadmoor. The last visit was on 7 February 1997. The HSPSCB will be making unannounced visits to each of the three high security hospitals, including Broadmoor, from 1 April 1997.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about staffing levels and security matters at Broadmoor and when; and if he will make a statement. [17821]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 February 1997]: I received a letter from Mr. Andy Gossage of the Prison Officers Association on 19 February, which raised various concerns about Broadmoor hospital. In the light of these and other concerns, I have asked the regional director of Anglia and Oxford regional office of the NHS executive to consider the adequacy and appropriateness of security arrangements, and the overall quality of patient care, at Broadmoor hospital, and to report to me with recommendations by the end of March.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the allegations of an assault by a patient on a seven-year-old girl visiting Broadmoor; and what actions his Department has undertaken in respect of the allegation. [17822]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 27 February 1997]: I understand that these allegations, dating from April 1995, were investigated at that time by both the hospital management and the local police and no evidence was found to warrant further action. The review to be carried out by the Anglia and Oxford regional office of the NHS executive will include in its consideration the arrangements within Broadmoor hospital for handling this and similar allegations.

Special Hospitals

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the current arrangements for monitoring the special hospitals. [17823]

Mr. Burns [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The current arrangements for monitoring the three high security hospitals are set out in an NHS executive document, "High Secure Psychiatric Services: Changes in Funding and Organisation", which was published in June 1995. Monitoring procedures are regularly reviewed. The hospitals are also regularly visited by the Mental Health Act Commission, whose responsibilities are well set out in the Mental Health Act.

SCOTLAND

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15919]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As the information is lengthy, it has been placed in the Library.

Locate In Scotland

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs have been created or safeguarded as a result of action by Locate in Scotland (a) by company, (b) by region and (c) in Scotland, since its establishment; and if he will make a statement. [16542]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 18 February 1997]: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Inward investment projects attracted to Scotland since Locate in Scotland was established in 1981 have, however, involved the planned creation or safeguarding of over 130,000 jobs.

Edinburgh Royal Infirmary

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will intervene to stop the Royal Infirmary trust closing the varicose ulcer clinic at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh. [17510]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This leg ulcer clinic within the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh was established as a research project, the funding for which expires shortly. The trust, in consultation with Lothian health board, is reviewing the range of its vascular surgery services to determine whether there is any way in which existing resources can be used more effectively to enable the leg ulcer clinic to continue.

Prison Construction

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the planned expenditure for constructing prisons in Scotland over the next three years; and what is the design capacity of each planned prison. [17695]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One new 500-cell prison is planned at Bowhouse, Kilmarnock as part of the private finance initiative. The earliest opening date is 1999, from which time an annual payment would be made by the Scottish Prison Service to the successful contractor for operating the prison, which would include an element to reflect construction costs. Provision to meet the estimated initial costs of the prison is included in the Scottish Prison Service's financial allocation of some £186 million for 1999–2000. Additional prison places required in the light of the early release proposals in the Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill would also be financed through the PFI. As the new places would not come on stream until after the time period covered by the Government's current public expenditure plans, no financial provision has yet been made.

Offenders (Release)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary for State for Scotland how many and what percentage of serious offenders were released in Scotland without a supervision order, in each year since 1992. [17694]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available. However, it may be useful to highlight the current legislative requirements in relation to supervision of offenders. Sections 12 and 14 of the Prisoners and Criminal Proceedings (Scotland) Act 1993 set out, with effect from 1 October 1993, new provisions in relation to the supervision of prisoners. Section 12 requires that all long-term prisoners—those sentenced to four years or more—will be supervised on release by a relevant local authority officer. Similarly, section 14 enables the courts to order supervision for those short-term prisoners sentenced to between one and four years who may pose a potential risk to the public on release. This power is exercised by imposing a supervised release order. Measures are therefore in place to ensure the supervision of offenders as appropriate.

The Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill, currently before Parliament, contains provisions to extend the availability of the supervised release order. It would provide for mandatory supervision for up to 25 per cent. of sentence for those convicted of the most serious violent offences.

Prison Population

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of Scottish prisoners are currently serving sentences of less than six months; and what percentage of those are female. [17691]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of this question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mrs. Ray Michie, dated 3 March 1997:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the percentage of Scottish prisoners who are currently serving sentences of less than six months; and the percentage of those that are female.

As at 26 February 1997 13 per cent. (815) of the Scottish prison population were serving sentences of less than six months, 6 per cent. of which (49) were female.

Young Offenders

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons in Scotland aged under 18 years were charged with a criminal offence in 1996. [17693]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information is not collected centrally on the number of persons charged with a criminal offence. In 1994, the latest year for which information is available, there were 10,601 occasions when persons aged under 18 were proceeded against for a criminal offence at court and a further 25,735 occasions when persons aged under 18 were referred to the reporter to the children's panels on offence grounds.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of convicted sex offenders in Scotland who would have been registerable if the provisions of the Sex Offenders Bill had been in force at the time of their conviction. [17799]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No estimate has been made as this is not relevant for the purposes of the Bill.

Food Poisoning

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of food poisoning have been reported in Scotland to date in 1997. [17659]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 February 1997]: By the week ending 15 February 1997, there had been 902 notifications of food poisoning to the Common Services Agency for the Scottish Health Service.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of reported cases of salmonellosis in Scotland in each year since 1979; and what is the latest available figure for 1997. [17660]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The following table shows total numbers of Salmonella infections—human laboratory isolates—reported to the Scottish centre for infection and environmental health over the period requested.

Year	Total
1979	1,483
1980	1,577
1981	2,526
1982	2,621

Farmed Salmon

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many salmon farms in Scotland are permitted to use ivermectin to control sea lice. [17829]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 27 February 1997]: I understand from the Scottish Environment Protection agency that discharge consents have been granted to 15 Scottish salmon farms in respect of ivermectin which will be used to control sea lice. Twenty-four applications for discharge consent have been refused by the agency.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the letter of the Lord Advocate of 14 February to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, who assessed (a) the current role of Mr. James Thurman and (b) his former role in respect of the Lockerbie case. [17291]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Issues as to Mr. Thurman's current role are for the relevant United States authorities, but Mr. Thurman's role in respect of the Lockerbie case was considered by the then Lord Advocate, Lord Rodger of Earlsferry, in September 1995. He advised the hon. Member in October 1995 that proof of the case does not depend on evidence which Mr. Thurman might give.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant, to the letter of the Lord Advocate of 14 February, to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, if he has assessed a draft of the US inspector general's report into laboratory practices and alleged misconduct in explosives-related and other cases. [17292]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Lord Advocate has not seen a draft of the US inspector general's report into laboratory practices and alleged misconduct in explosives-related and other cases.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioner Incomes

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide an updated analysis for each quintile of pensioners' income for single pensioners, pensioner couples and all pensioner units on the same basis as that given on 12 March 1996, Official Report, columns 595-98. [14302]

Mr. Heald: The information has been placed in the Library.

Home Responsibilities Protection

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women qualified for home responsibilities protection during each of the past five years, by reason for protection; and what is his estimate of the annual cost of making each year of home responsibilities protection equivalent to a year in which full national insurance credits have been awarded. [15797]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

The Government Actuary's Department has estimated that replacing the home responsibilities protection arrangements with full national insurance credits would cost £150 million in the year 2030.

Notes:
1. Figures relate to Great Britain and are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. It is not possible to determine how many of the years will be used in the final pension calculation until the individual claims retirement pension.

Claimants (Exempt Work)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of invalidity benefit were undertaking therapeutic work during the year 1994–95; how many claimants of incapacity benefit have undertaken exempt work since its introduction in 1995; and what is his estimate of (a) the annual cost and (b) the numbers affected if the therapeutic work rules were reintroduced into incapacity benefit. [16098]

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Retirement Incomes

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the average wealth and income, other than the basic state retirement pension, of people retiring at the present time and at convenient intervals in the past 30 years. [15844]

Mr. Heald: The latest available information is contained in "The Pensioners' Incomes Series 1994–95". This shows that recently retired pensioner units[1] have a mean average gross income of £235.60 per week, 58 per cent. of which is from a source other than state benefits[2]. The earliest data available form the Pensioners' Income Series is 1974 (23 November 1994, Official Report, columns 171–76). Information for intervening years has been published in the annual "Social Security Statistics" since 1993. Further details about pensioner households are given in the annual "Households Below Average Income" statistics.

Copies of all these publications are available in the Library.

Notes:

[1] A pensioner unit is defined as a single person over state pension age or a couple where the man, defined as the head, is over SPA. A recently retired pensioner unit is defined as a pensioner unit where the head of the benefit unit is less than five years older than SPA.

Benefit Claimants (Earnings)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the levels of gross earnings at which (a) single people, (b) lone parents, (c) couples without children and (d) couples with children face marginal deduction rates in excess of 100 per cent. for (e) 1996–97 and (f) 1997–98; and what are the numbers affected in each group. [16301]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The gross earnings at which different family types face marginal deduction rates in excess of 100 per cent. depends on the individual characteristics of the claim.

Information on the marginal deduction rates faced by certain family types across a range of gross earnings is available in the April 1996 tax benefit model tables, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16315]

Mr. Roger Evans: Assessments have been completed on hazardous materials in buildings we occupy under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994 and risks identified have been recorded as required by the legislation.

Arrangements for storage and disposal of hazardous waste conform to the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

An assessment has been made of ozone-depleting substances and a target date set for replacement.

The policy of this Department is to minimise the use of substances which are hazardous to human health or to the environment and to eliminate the use of all ozone-depleting substances such as chlorofluorocarbons and halons.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people under the age of 25 years have had their housing benefit reduced to single room rent levels; what savings in public expenditure have so far been made as a result of this policy; and what evaluation has been undertaken by his Department of the impact of the policy on the finances and housing situation of young people. [16302]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not yet available.

However, the introduction of the single room rent restriction is being monitored. Information on the operation of the changes, based on data supplied by a sample of local authorities, will be available in late summer.

The Department is putting into place a series of research projects for evaluation of the long term effects of the changes. Results are expected next year.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the amount of housing benefit fraud detected by local authorities during 1995–96; how many claimants were involved; what was the average amount of overpaid benefit per claimant; and how many prosecutions were instigated in that year. [16665]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The amount of housing benefit fraud detected by local authorities in 1995–96 was £186 million[1].

There were 114,300 overpayments, totalling £43 million, which were attributable to fraud[2].

Figures on the number of prosecutions instigated are currently being processed and will be available in early March.

Notes:

[1] Based on the weekly benefit savings method of accounting. No central records are kept of the number of claimants involved in detected housing benefit fraud.

[2] The number of overpayments does not reflect the number of claimants involved in each fraud, so it is not possible to give an average amount per claimant.

Local authority 1995–96 subsidy claims.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients there currently are of housing benefit in (a) north Devon and (b) Devon; and how many of these are under 25 years of age. [15003]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

In May 1996, there were 6,100 housing benefit recipients in the North Devon district council area and 78,200 in the whole of Devon.

Notes:

1. Estimates of the numbers of recipients aged under 25 are not available below regional level.

2. Recipients may be a single person or a couple.

Mr. Austin Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the amount of housing benefit subsidy paid to local authorities in England in respect of rent allowances in each of the years from 1991–92 to 1996–97; what is his estimate for 1997–98; and what is his estimate of the housing benefit subsidy that would have been paid in each of those years if local authorities had continued to receive 97 per cent. subsidy. [15163]

Mr. Evans [holding answer 10 February 1997]: The information is in the table.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 30 January, Official Report, column 362.

The reduction from 97 per cent. to 95 per cent. in the rate of direct subsidy which local authorities receive for the majority of their private sector housing benefit expenditure was made with effect from 1 April 1991 on a cost neutral basis. Local authorities were compensated for the reduction in direct subsidy by an appropriate addition to the revenue support grant.

Child Care Disregard

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 15 January, Official Report columns 254–5, if he will indicate how many claimants would gain from extending the child care disregard to those on family credit subject to a 70 per cent. and 50 per cent. taper. [16668]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is as follows:

Numbers gaining from extending the childcare disregard to those on family credit subject to a 70 per cent. and 50 per cent. taper 1996 prices

	Number of gainers
70 per cent. taper	12,000
50 per cent. taper	12,000

1. Figures are based on the May 1996 family credit statistics, and use actual child care recipients at that time.
2. Estimates do not include behavioural effects.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers gaining if the child care disregard with (i) family credit and (ii) disability working allowance applied to each child under age 11 years. [16671]

Mr. Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 24 January, Official Report, column 772.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report column 245, what progress has been made in changes to benefit delivery in Yorkshire, the west country and east London and Anglia directorates; when he expects proposals for change to be submitted by the consortiums of private companies; and what elements he expects to be run by the private sector. [16669]

Mr. Roger Evans: No changes to benefit delivery have been made in the relevant areas.

The partnerships between three private companies or consortia and the Benefits Agency area directorates are expected to start in early May and last for approximately 12 months.

The partnership period will give the private companies or consortia the opportunity to work closely with managers and staff, enabling them to understand Benefits Agency business. The private companies or consortia involved in the partnerships will not run the area directorates, or any other part of the agency during the partnership period.

By the end of the partnership period, the private companies or consortia will be expected to provide proposals on how the agency's business can be delivered more efficiently, effectively and economically, including the possibility of further parts of the operation being run by the private sector. Proposals can be submitted at any time during the partnership period.

Until the private companies or consortia submit their proposals, it is not possible to determine what changes may be made.

Family Credit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant, to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 535, what estimate he has made of the numbers gaining from a maintenance disregard for lone parents of (a) £5 and (b) £10. [16670]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 17 December 1996, Official Report, column 535. Some 240,000 lone parents would gain from the introduction of a maintenance disregard of £5, £10 or £20 a week.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which benefits people are entitled to when they are refused incapacity benefit but cannot meet the availability for work criteria of the means-tested jobseeker's allowance due to illness or disability. [17878]

Mr. Roger Evans: Those found capable of work following an all-work test for incapacity benefit, but who have a continuing medical condition or disability, are able to restrict their availability for work and qualify for jobseeker's allowance, provided that the restrictions are reasonable in the light of their physical or mental condition.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefits are available to people awaiting an appeal against a Department of Social Security decision to refuse incapacity benefit. [17879]

Mr. Burt: Those people awaiting an appeal hearing after failing the all-work test for incapacity benefit may register with the Employment Service and claim jobseeker's allowance. Those who are not seeking work may, provided that they satisfy the entitlement conditions, receive income support.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if people refused incapacity benefit and awaiting an appeal decision who have sufficient national insurance contributions qualify for non-means-tested jobseeker's allowance as a matter of right. [17881]

Mr. Evans: Those who have paid sufficient national insurance contributions may receive a personal rate of contributions-based jobseeker's allowance for up to six months, provided that they satisfy the labour market conditions.

Claim Processing Costs

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the unit cost for processing claims for (a) income support, (b) income support for lone parents,

(c) income support for pensioners, (d) child benefit, (e) family credit, (f) the basic state pension, (g) incapacity benefit and (h) contributory jobseeker's allowance; and (i) means-tested jobseeker's allowance; [18236]

(2) what is the unit cost for processing claims for (a) income support, (b) income support for lone parents, (c) income support for pensioners, (d) child benefit, (e) family credit, (f) the basic state pension, (g) incapacity benefit, (h) contributory jobseeker's allowance and (i) means-tested jobseeker's allowance in Yorkshire; [18232]

(3) what is the unit cost for processing claims for (a) income support, (b) income support for lone parents, (c) income support for pensioners, (d) child benefit, (e) family credit, (f) the basic state pension, (g) incapacity benefit, (h) contributory jobseeker's allowance and (i) means-tested jobseeker's allowance in Wales. [18233]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. The Department publishes figures for the average weekly administration cost per beneficiary, for the main benefits, in its annual departmental report. The report for 1996–97 is due to be published shortly.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the unit cost for handling inquiries by claimants in person in Benefits Agency offices for (a) income support, (b) income support for lone parents, (c) income support for pensioners, (d) child benefit, (e) family credit, (f) the basic state pension, (g) incapacity benefit, (h) contributory jobseeker's allowance and (i) means-tested jobseeker's allowance. [18235]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested.

The average unit cost, excluding overheads, for dealing with a caller in the Benefits Agency is £1.84.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the unit cost for handling inquiries from claimants by telephone for (a) income support, (b) income support for lone parents, (c) income support for pensioners, (d) child benefit, (e) family credit, (f) the basic state pension, (g) incapacity benefit, (h) contributory jobseeker's allowance and (i) means-tested jobseeker's allowance. [18234]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available.

Camborne Benefits Agency Office

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reopen Camborne Benefits Agency office in Cornwall; and if he will make a statement. [17937]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison To Mr. David Jamieson, dated 28 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will reopen Camborne Benefits Agency office in Cornwall.

I can confirm that the Camborne advice shop, which was temporarily closed on 8 January, will reopen on 3 March 1997.

The Advice Shop service, which does not have benefit processing or payment facilities, was suspended in order that staff could be redeployed to cover temporary absences and to deal with a greater than predicted take up of Job Seekers Allowance. The number of claims received have now reduced to anticipated levels. More staff will have completed their training which will in turn release staff to their usual duties. This will enable normal service to be resumed at the Advice Shop.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

WALES

Glamorgan

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors underlay the decision not to recreate the historic county of Glamorgan as a unitary authority. [18505]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The fundamental principles underpinning local government reorganisation were that: local authorities should be democratically accountable to their electorate; the roles of local authorities, and their responsibilities for service delivery, should be clearly understood by local people; local authority boundaries should, as far as possible, reflect and strengthen existing community loyalties; and local public services should be of high quality, and be efficient, economical and effective.

Wherever practicable, Ministers attempted to recreate the pre-1974 counties, but a unitary authority based on the historic administrative boundaries of Glamorgan would have resulted in a unitary authority of some 1.3 million electors—far too large to accord satisfactorily with all the principles set out.

TREASURY

London Transport Funding

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, columns 118–19, if he will place in the Library a copy of the Lord Mayor of London's letter to him and his response on London Transport's investment programme. [15911]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have placed in the Library copies of the correspondence referred to.

London Underground (Privatisation Receipts)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the receipts that will accrue to the Treasury as a result of the sale of London Underground. [18625]

Mr. Jack: Proceeds will depend on the structural option selected for the sale and the level of demand from bidders.

Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with which airlines and travel companies he has recently had discussions about the enforcement of CITES regulations; and what has been the response in each case. [17837]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 February 1997]: I have written to a number of airlines and travel companies, as I explained on 13 February in my answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway), Official Report, column 448, seeking their participation in an initiative aimed at producing a video for in-flight display aimed at enhancing the CITES profile and environmentally responsible tourism.

The airlines I contacted were Aer Lingus, Aeroflot, Air Canada, Air France, Air India, Air UK Ltd., Alitilia Airlines, American Airlines, Bangladesh Airlines, British Airways, British Midland Airways, Cathay Pacific Airways Ltd., Continental Airlines, Cyprus Airways, Egyptair, El Al Airlines, Finnair, Ghana Airways, Iberia Airlines, Kenya Airways, KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, Lufthansa Airlines, Malaysia Airlines, Middle East Airlines, Monarch Airlines, Olympic Airways, Pakistan International Airlines, Qantas Airways, Royal Jordanian Airlines, Sabena Airlines, Singapore Airlines, South African Airways, Swissair, United Airlines and Virgin Atlantic.

Airtours, Leisure International Airways, Iberia, Kenya Airways, and Singapore Airlines have already agreed to show the video as part of their in-flight entertainment. British Airways has asked for a meeting to discuss the technical detail. Lufthansa and United Airways have referred the matter to their head offices. Air France, Air UK, and KLM all indicated that they have no in-flight entertainment on their UK services. Other airlines, including Virgin Atlantic, have yet to respond but replies have been solicited through follow-up letters.

The following tour operators and travel agents were contacted: Airtours plc, Althams Travel Services Ltd., American Express Europe Ltd., Avro plc, Bakers Dolphin, Britannic Travel Ltd., British Airways Holidays Ltd., British Airways Travel Shops Ltd., Carlson Wagonlit Travel, Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd., Cosmosair plc, Cresta Holidays Ltd., Crystal Holidays Ltd., Dawson and Sanderson Ltd., First Choice Holidays and Flights Ltd., Going Places Leisure Travel Ltd., Gold Medal Travel Group plc, Hogg Robinson (Travel) Ltd., Hotel Plan Ltd., Inspirations East Ltd., Kuoni Travel Ltd., Lunn Poly Ltd., Midlands Co-operative Society Ltd., MTG (UK) Ltd. (AT Mays and The Travel Agents), Portman Travel Ltd., STA Travel Ltd., Sunset Holidays plc, Sunworld Ltd., Thomas Cook Group Ltd., Thomson Tour Operations Ltd., Trailfinders Ltd., The Travel Company Ltd., Travel 2 Ltd., Unijet Travel Ltd., United Norwest Co-operatives Ltd., Virgin Holidays Ltd. and Woodcock Travel Ltd.

Airtours plc, Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd., Hogg Robinson, Midlands Co-operative Society Ltd. (Co-op Travel), Trailfinders Ltd., Unijet Travel Ltd., United Norwest Co-operatives Ltd. (Co-op Travel) are lending support by agreeing to distribute associated literature. Bakers Dolphin explained that it covers the issue in its existing leaflets.

Britannic Travel Ltd., Carlson Wagonlit Travel, AT Mays and The Travel Agents, and Virgin Holidays Ltd. replied that for a variety of practical reasons they were unable to participate. As with the airlines, other correspondents have yet to reply but we are optimistic of receiving further positive responses in the near future.

I will be announcing further details in due course.

Air Passenger Duty

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the revenue received from air passenger duty at (a) the lower rate and (b) the higher rate on traffic in and out of the Scottish isles in 1995–96. [17944]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Customs' estimate of revenue received from air passenger duty on flights in and out of the Scottish isles in the financial year 1995–96 is (a) for the lower rate of £5, about £3 million and (b) for the higher rate of £10, less than £1 million.

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the revenue received from air passenger duty on domestic United Kingdom flights in and out of the Scottish isles in 1995–96. [17945]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Customs' estimate of revenue received from air passenger duty on domestic United Kingdom flights in and out of the Scottish isles in the financial year 1995–96 is about £2 million.

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the revenue received from air passenger duty at (a) the lower rate and (b) the higher rate of traffic in and out of Northern Ireland in 1995–96. [17946]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Customs' estimate of revenue received from air passenger duty on flights in and out of Northern Ireland in the financial year 1995–96 is (a) for the lower rate of £5, about £13 million and (b) for the higher rate of £10, less than £1 million.

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the revenue received from air passenger duty on domestic United Kingdom flights in and out of Northern Ireland in 1995–96. [17947]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Customs' estimate of revenue received from air passenger duty on domestic United Kingdom flights in and out of Northern Ireland in the financial year 1995–96 is about £12 million.

Illegal Firearms (Imports)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's latest estimate of the number of illegal firearms entering the United Kingdom (a) via the channel tunnel and (b) via other points of access in each of the last five years. [18129]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 March 1997]: Customs does not hold central statistics of the number of illegal firearms entering the UK broken down in this way. The following table sets out the number of firearms seized by customs since 1992.

Year ended 31 March	Hand guns	Rifles	Shot guns	Total
1992	176	126	82	384
1993	138	41	39	218
1994	94	338	49	481
1995	261	49	111	421
1996	[1]13,342	61	124	[1]13,527
Totals	[1]14,011	615	405	[1]15,031

[1] The large number of handguns seized was due to a single seizure of 13,260 flares incorporating barrels which are regarded as firearms within the meaning of the Firearms Acts.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersen, (c) BMI, (d) Sema and (e) Capita since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor and the value of the contract in each case. [17610]

Mr. Howard: The contracts let by my Department since 1992 are as follows:

Contractor	Date	Function

Alcohol Sales (Young People)

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prosecutions have been brought against licensees for selling alcohol to people under the age of 18 years since 1988; [18150]

(2) how many licensees have been successfully prosecuted for selling alcohol to people under the age of 18 years since 1988; [18151]

(3) how many off-licence proprietors have been successfully prosecuted for selling alcohol to people under the age of 18 years since 1988; [18153]

(4) how many prosecutions have been brought against off-licence proprietors for selling alcohol to people under the age of 18 years since 1988. [18152]

Mr. Maclean: Information collected centrally under section 169(1) of the Licensing Act 1964—selling intoxicating liquor to persons under 18—does not separately identify the type of licensee involved.

The table shows the number of prosecutions and convictions in England and Wales from 1988 to 1995 for this offence.

Persons prosecuted and convicted for offences under section 169 (1) of the Licensing Act 1964—selling intoxicating liquor to persons under 18, 1988–1995

England and Wales

	Prosecutions	Convictions
1988	673	357
1989	747	388
1990	574	273
1991	309	155
1992	195	87
1993	156	70
1994	137	83
1995	198	108

Identity Cards

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his policy that the proposed voluntary national identity card will eventually become compulsory for United Kingdom subjects. [18246]

Mr. Sackville: The Government's policy is for the national identity card to be voluntary. It may in practice be held very widely, but there are no plans for it to become compulsory.

Mr. Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his policy that the proposed national identity card will be electronically linked to the police national computer database. [18219]

Mr. Sackville: Decisions have not yet been taken on the practical arrangements for storing identity card data, but there are no plans for an electronic link between the national identity card and the database of the police national computer.

Philip Saunders

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to inquire into the assistance given by public agencies to Ms Sharon Saunders of Bolton in her efforts to break the drug addiction of her late son; if he will order a public inquiry into the case; and if he will make a statement. [18143]

Mr. Sackville: As I am sure the hon. Member is aware, an inquest is to be held into the death of Philip Saunders. We will consider any issues that arise from the inquest in respect of services for which the Home Office is responsible.

CS Gas

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times during 1996 CS gas was used by police in the Metropolitan police area. [17962]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that during 1996 the Metropolitan police has used CS incapacitant spray on 120 occasions.

Casino Operations (Croydon)

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to designate Croydon as a permitted area for casino operation. [17975]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Home Office issued consultation papers in February and November 1996 proposing 21 new permitted areas for casinos, including Croydon. We are currently considering the responses to the November proposals.

Victim Support

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the responsibilities of local authorities in relation to victim support initiatives. [18258]

Mr. Maclean: I am not aware that local authorities have any formal responsibilities in relation to victim support initiatives. However, I understand that many local authorities do provide financial support to their local victim support schemes, and that the total amount of such support provided in 1995–96 was in the order of £1.4 million.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was his Department's financial contribution to the National Association of Victim Support Schemes in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [18259]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is as follows:

Financial year	Home Office grant (£ million)
1992–93	7.260
1993–94	8.375
1994–95	10.016
1995–96	10.817
1996–97	11.682

This generous funding has enabled Victim Support to achieve nationwide coverage with its 365 local schemes and branches and to establish a witness support service at all 77 Crown court centres. The Home Office grant meets the salary and related costs of over 600, full-time equivalent staff, who deploy over 12,000 volunteers to offer practical help and emotional support to well over 1 million victims of crime a year.

Rabies

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons rabies is singled out for particular attention in his Department's publication "Essential Information for United Kingdom passport-holders". [18361]

Mr. Kirkhope: It is felt desirable to warn British passport holders travelling abroad of the potential dangers of rabies as it is still endemic in certain parts of the world, such as the Indian sub-continent, where over 10,000 deaths a year are directly attributable to the disease.

The "Essential Information" publication, issued with all British passports, provides helpful advice and reminders to passport holders about sensible precautions which they can take when going abroad. The inclusion of factual information about rabies is still considered highly appropriate.

Children (Crime)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for preventing children offending. [18914]

Mr. Howard: The Government attach a high priority to dealing with juvenile crime. We have acted to provide the courts with the powers they need to deal effectively with serious and persistent young offenders; and we have acted to reduce the use of inappropriate cautioning. But it would be better if young people did not offend in the first place.

We have, therefore, developed proposals for a new strategy which aims to reduce the risk of children turning to crime. The strategy is based on research about the effectiveness of early intervention with children. We propose that it should be delivered by local agencies, including those in the voluntary sector, working together in partnership in a new local organisation, which might be known as a child crime team. Its task would be to identify children at risk of offending at an early age, and refer them to programmes designed to help them stay clear of crime. A Home Office research study published today—"Reducing Criminality among Young People", by David Utting—describes a selection of the kinds of programme that might be effective.

Parents have a very important role to play in bringing up their children to respect the law. Most parents face up to their responsibilities, and we believe that they would co-operate with suitable programmes which reduced the risk of their children turning to crime. But there is a small minority of parents who do not bring up their children responsibly and who may refuse to accept any support that is offered. To meet that situation, we propose to give the courts a new power to make a parental control order requiring parents to exercise proper care and control over their children. The courts would be able to attach conditions, such as attendance at a suitable programme. The order would be available both where a child aged 10 to 16 had committed an offence, and where no offence had been committed but a child of any age up to 16 had demonstrated unruly behaviour likely to lead to offending.

These proposals are contained in a Green Paper which had been published today. I have placed a copy in the Library.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the results of the latest CCTV challenge competition; and if he will make a statement. [18915]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend will be announcing the results of the 1997–98 closed circuit television challenge competition on Wednesday 5 March. Details of the successful bids will be placed in the Library. A total of £15 million is being made available in this competition.

Data Protection

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the responses to the March 1996 consultation paper on the EC data protection directive (95/46/EC). [18916]

Mr. Sackville: I am today placing a summary of the responses in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

British Beers

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee if he will ensure that British beers are available as an option at all receptions booked in the House where the House catering facilities are used. [18263]

Sir Colin Shepherd: I am advised by the Director of Catering Services that British beers are available for all functions booked with the House of Commons Refreshment Department. The precise range of drinks served at any reception is a matter for agreement with the function organiser.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many hon. Members representing English constituencies addressed oral or supplementary questions to the Secretary of State for Scotland in the Session 1995–96. [18639]

Mr. Newton: The figures, supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, are:

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid Projects

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which United Kingdom aid projects were not subject to competitive tendering procedures in the country in which they were to take place; how much money was involved in each case; what was the relative percentage of those cases identified of the aid budget for that year; and who were the recipients of any moneys paid in each year since 1980. [18402]

Dr. Liam Fox: It is ODA's policy that wherever practicable, and to ensure value for money, bilateral aid projects should be competitively tendered in the United Kingdom or in the recipient country. In many cases, however, the additional cost of tendering, particularly on smaller projects, outweighs the potential savings to the taxpayer and the recipient country. In such cases a waiver to tender is applied.

In the current financial year to date, about 46 per cent. of ODA expenditure on contracts let for the provision of goods and services were subject to competitive tendering. Figures for in-country expenditure and tendering are not kept centrally in ODA. These details and those of specific projects could not, therefore be provided without disproportionate cost.

EU Social Summit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy in respect of the 1995 EU social summit 20:20 initiative; and if he will make a statement. [18680]

Dr. Liam Fox: The 20:20 initiative was discussed at the 1995 United Nations social summit in Copenhagen. Interested developed and developing countries agreed to allocate, on average, 20 per cent. of development assistance and 20 per cent. of national budgets respectively, to basic social services.

The United Kingdom expressed reservations about certain aspects of the initiative, including lack of clarity about definitions and its excessive focus on inputs, not results. However, the United Kingdom attaches importance to development assistance in the area of basic social services and is willing to discuss the initiative with recipients who raise it on a bilateral basis.

Family Planning

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the UK will be spending (a) in the current year and (b) in each of the next five years on overseas family planning programmes, indicating the amount per geographical area; and if he will make a statement. [18681]

Dr. Liam Fox: No specific allocation is made for family planning programmes in the development assistance budget. Expenditure on population and reproductive health—which includes family planning—in 1995 was £62.3 million. The figure for 1996 is not yet available. Commitment figures from 1994 onwards are strong and we expect the level of expenditure to remain substantial in the next five financial years. So far the majority of this expenditure is in Africa and to a lesser extent Asia, with smaller amounts being spent in Latin America and the Caribbean, and central and eastern Europe.

Food Crops (Aid)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the United Kingdom aid programme was (a) directly and (b) indirectly devoted to promoting food production for local consumption; how much was devoted to promoting cash crop production for export; and what are these figures as a percentage of the total aid programme in each year since 1979. [18020]

Dr. Liam Fox: ODA does not maintain data covering the specific information on food production and cash crop production in the form requested for the period 1979 to 1986. It would, therefore, not be possible to provide a detailed answer for the period 1979 to 1986 without disproportionate cost. However, from 1987–88 onwards the information requested as a percentage of the total bilateral aid programme is contained in the table.

Promotion of food production under the UK bilateral aid programme

Financial year	New commitments devoted to direct[1] promotion £	New commitments as a percentage of total annual bilateral aid programme (direct)	New commitments devoted to indirect[2] promotion £	New commitments as a percentage of total annual bilateral aid programme (indirect)

[1] Direct promotion; any activity which has the promotion of exports of cash crops as a stated objective or output.
[2] Indirect promotion; any activity which does not have an explicit objective to increase the export of cash crops, but addresses crops that do have export potential.

International Development Association

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in implementing the agreement reached in Tokyo last year on the 11th replenishment of the International Development Association. [18918]

Dr. Liam Fox: Under the arrangements established at Tokyo, it was agreed that, in the first year of the new IDA triennium, the United States would aim to pay off its arrears to the 10th replenishment of IDA and the rest of the donor community would contribute to an interim trust fund for that year: procurement opportunities from this fund would be limited to contributors—and developing countries—thus excluding the United States. There would be a traditional burden-sharing arrangement for the final two years of the replenishment, with no restrictions.

The interim trust fund has now been established and is operational: the selection and approval process is under way in respect of some $2.3 billion-worth of projects—out of a total of some $3.3 billion. Parliament has approved our own contribution to the trust fund and we have deposited the promissory note.

However, despite this progress, the United States Administration have sought a relaxation of the procurement restrictions in order to try and ensure that Congress will approve the funds to meet both the IDA-10 arrears and their pledge to IDA-11. Following a meeting of senior officials on 6 and 7 February in Paris, it has not been agreed to adjust the trust fund arrangements. In short, an amount of uncommitted trust fund money—limited to SDR700 million (around $1 billion)—is to be held back pending the results of congressional deliberations on the United States Administration's request for finance to cover both the IDA-10 arrears and the first tranche of the US contribution to IDA-11 proper. The result will not be known until the autumn at the earliest when the issue will be discussed further among IDA contributors.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

State Visit (President of Israel)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what issues were raised during his discussions with the Israeli President during his state visit to the United Kingdom. [18624]

Mr. Hanley: President Weizman's discussions with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary covered bilateral relations, which are excellent, and regional issues including recent developments in the middle east peace process.

PRIME MINISTER

Sir Nicholas Lloyd

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Prime Minister what advisory function Sir Nicholas Lloyd is carrying out on his behalf; and if there is any resultant cost to public funds. [18341]

The Prime Minister: Sir Nicholas Lloyd is not carrying out any advisory functions for me as Prime Minister and therefore there is no cost to public funds.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 4 March. [17369]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 4 March. [17370]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Gulf War Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Prime Minister if he received a letter from Hilary Meredith of the solicitors firm of Donn and Co. in July 1995 enclosing documents concerning the use of organophosphate pesticides by British forces during the Gulf war. [18658]

The Prime Minister: My Office received correspondence in 1995, which was passed to the Ministry of Defence.

TRANSPORT

Policy Initiatives

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to which policy initiative he has devoted most funding in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement on progress with each such initiative. [15084]

Mr. Bowis: The annual transport reports give details of the Department's expenditure and progress with programmes. The 1997 transport report is due to be published on 20 March.

Air Traffic Control (North Sea)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to develop satellite communication-based positive air traffic control arrangements for offshore industry helicopter operations in the North sea beyond radar coverage. [16827]

Mr. Bowis: The Civil Aviation Authority's National Air Traffic Services Ltd. already provides air traffic services to helicopters over the North sea using satellite communications. Radar coverage in the UK sector of the North sea is adequate and currently there are no plans to develop satellite-based surveillance systems in this area.

Traffic Calming

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of total expenditure on traffic-calming measures by transport authorities in England in each of the last three years. [18460]

Mr. Bowis: Traffic calming is one element among the traffic management techniques available to local authorities for relieving congestion, improving safety and enhancing the environment. We do not require detailed returns from authorities on expenditure of this kind.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated concerning (i) good and bad practice in respect of traffic-calming measures in England and (ii) the overall effect of such measures; and if he will make a statement. [18459]

Mr. Bowis: Since April 1992, the Department of Transport has commissioned 10 research projects to study a range of traffic-calming measures, assessing their effectiveness in reducing and controlling traffic speeds and their effect on the environment:

UG16 Traffic calming on distributor roads

UG24 Speed control humps

UG25 Traffic calming on roads through villages

UG46 Innovative traffic calming measures

UG48 Traffic calming on major roads

UG93 Environment management

UG127 Traffic management and vehicle emissions

UG128 Urban activity in 20 mph zones

UG137 Vertical and horizontal deflections

S204F Monitoring of 20 mph zones

Details of most of these projects are in the Department's "Urban and Local Transport Compendium of Research Projects", copies of which have been placed in the Library and can be seen on the Department's Internet site.

The results of this research are published in the form of research reports and traffic advisory leaflets.

Epping to Ongar Train Service

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the disposal of the Epping to Ongar line; and what commitment will be sought from prospective purchasers about the restoration of a train service. [18441]

Mr. Bowis: The conditions which the former Secretary of State attached to the closure of the Epping to Ongar line required London Underground to seek a private operator for the line. I understand that London Underground has identified a preferred bidder following an open competition. The details of the negotiations are a commercial matter for London Underground. If it seeks the Secretary of State's consent to a disposal to the preferred bidder, he will want to be satisfied that the proposed operator is committed to running a train service.

Rural Residents (Buses)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of rural residents who live more than half a mile from a bus route; and if he will make a statement. [18405]

Mr. Watts: Information from the national travel survey indicates that about 12 per cent. of rural residents live further than 13 minutes, walking time from a bus stop, which equates to about half a mile in distance.

Vehicle Licence Fraud

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the loss of revenue caused by the display of fraudulent vehicle excise licences. [18577]

Mr. Bowis: This figure cannot be established separately from the estimated loss through evasion of vehicle excise duty. The amount involved is likely to be minimal.

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to combat the practice of motorists displaying fraudulent vehicle excise licenses. [18576]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for the police. We have no evidence to suggest that the practice is widespread.

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the loss of revenue caused by motorists not obtaining vehicle excise licences. [18568]

Mr. Bowis: The estimated vehicle excise duty loss through evasion in Great Britain in 1995–96 was £170 million. This represents 4.1 per cent. of the total revenue due. Over £74 million of this total was recouped through enforcement action undertaken by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency.

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to address the problem of motorists failing to display vehicle excise licences. [18569]

Mr. Bowis: The offence of failure to display a vehicle licence is dealt with by the police under the fixed penalty procedures. In addition, police and traffic wardens pass offence reports to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency for enforcement action if the vehicle is unlicensed. Last year successful action was taken against nearly 500,000 unlicensed motorists.

London Underground

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his objection of clearing the investment backlog within five years of privatisation of London Underground will be a contractual commitment for purchasers. [18660]

Mr. Bowis: The privatisation of London Underground will be structured so as to ensure that the underground's infrastructure is modernised as soon as possible. Our aim is to achieve this within five years. The exact mechanism for delivering this commitment depends on the structural option chosen. Further details will be included in the White Paper that we aim to publish this summer.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what mechanisms he will put in place to ensure that fares will not rise following the privatisation of London Underground; and if purchasers will be under a contractual obligation not to increase fares; [18662]

(2) what safeguards will apply to employees' pension rights and travel concessions in legislation introduced to privatise London Underground; [18629]

(3) what proposals he has to ensure that a guaranteed minimum level of service is maintained following the privatisation of London Underground; [18647]

(4) by what means (a) the continuation of through ticketing, (b) freedom of interchange between lines and (c) the current concessionary fares arrangements will be specifically safeguarded in legislation introduced to privatise London Underground; [18627]

(5) what proposals he has to limit fare increases on London Underground in year five after privatisation; [18626]

(6) by what means he will ensure the continuation of the London travelcard following the privatisation of London Underground. [18628]

Mr. Bowis: The Secretary of State has given clear commitments in all these policy areas—Official Report, columns 149–65. We shall now develop the precise mechanisms for delivering them, which in almost all of these cases will depend on the structural option that we choose. Further details will be included in the White Paper that we aim to publish in the summer.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list those companies invited to tender for the provision of advice for the sale of London Underground, indicating which were successful; [18649]

(2) on what date his Department began the process of appointing advisers for the process of the sale of London Underground; [18648]

(3) what budget he has allocated for the provision of advice and consultancy fees for the sale of London Underground. [18650]

Mr. Bowis: We have not yet appointed any advisers on the privatisation of London Underground, nor have any potential advisers yet been invited to tender. We shall be starting the process of appointing advisers shortly. No estimates have yet been made about the cost of advisers.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the investment backlog of the London Underground. [18659]

Mr. Bowis: London Transport estimates the size of the investment backlog to be around £1.2 billion.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total income received by London Underground for advertising in each of the last five years. [18622]

Mr. Bowis: London Underground has provided the information requested which is set out in the following table.

Year	Advertising income £ million
1996–97	[1]15.5
1995–96	12.8
1994–95	15.1
1993–94	18.1
1992–93	18.0

[1] Current forecast.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the amount of surplus available for other transport investment following the sale of London Underground. [18661]

Mr. Bowis: We believe that there should be sufficient proceeds from the privatisation of London Underground to fund not only the modernisation of the underground's infrastructure but additional transport investment. The amounts involved will depend on the structural option chosen for privatisation and the level of demand from the private sector.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the income received from the marketing of products bearing the London Underground logo for each of the last five years. [18620]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not readily available.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the income received by London Underground from the lease of its properties in each of the last five years; and if he will list the income he expects for each of the next five years. [18619]

Mr. Bowis: London Underground has provided the following figures showing income from property leasing since 1992–93. It has not been able to provide forecasts for income expected in the next five years from this source.

Year	Income from property leasing £ million
1992–93	20.6
1993–94	20.4
1994–95	22.3
1995–96	24.7
1996–97[1]	24.8

[1] Current forecast.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) of 25 February, Official Report, column 164, if he will make a statement on the treatment of future public and private investment in London Underground Ltd. in respect of limits on public borrowing set out in the convergence criteria in the Maastricht treaty. [18354]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 3 March 1997]: The general government financial deficit is the measure used in the Maastricht criteria. The general government sector excludes public corporations, such as London Underground. Net borrowing by a publicly owned London Underground would however score against London Transport's external finance limit and against the public sector borrowing requirement.

Air Traffic Control (Scotland)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the new Scottish air traffic control centre to be fully operational. [18618]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 25 February 1997, Official Report column 141, to the hon. Member for Cambridge (Mrs. Campbell).

London Transport Museum

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the income of the London transport museum for each of the last five years. [18621]

Mr. Bowis: The income generated by the London transport museum, excluding Government grant, is as follows:

1991–91: £1,201,000
1992–93: £1,429,000
1993–94: £1,172,000
1994–95: £2,043,000
1995–96: £1,977,000

London Buses (Subsidy)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the level of subsidy paid by London Underground Ltd. to London Buses Ltd. in each of the last five years. [18623]

Mr. Bowis: The distribution of resources by London Transport to its businesses is an operational matter for LT. The cash it allocated to London Buses activities in each of the last five years is shown in the table.

Year	Cash paid (£ million outturn prices)[1]
1991–92	157
1992–93	174
1993–94	78
1994–95	43
1995–96	44

[1] Figures supplied by London Transport.

Taxi Licences (North Lincolnshire)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has approved the request from North Lincolnshire district council to allow it to implement a policy of vehicle age limits when licensing taxis in the former Glanford borough area. [18592]

Mr. Bowis: The council does not require the consent of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to implement such a policy. My right hon. Friend has consulted on a proposal to make an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 which would prohibit the imposition of age limits on taxis and private hire vehicles; the responses are being considered.

Rail Tickets

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 69, if he will list the consultants commissioned to test the capabilities of station ticket offices, indicating the cost of employing them. [18656]

Mr. Watts: Following a competitive tendering exercise in 1995, the Rail Regulator commissioned Steer Davies Gleave to verify the capabilities of station ticket offices. The cost involved is commercially confidential.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 69, if he will list the market research organisation commissioned to survey rail ticket outlets. [18655]

Mr. Watts: Following a competitive tendering exercise in autumn 1996, the Rail Regulator commissioned NOP Mystery Shopping to survey rail ticket outlets.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 69, if he will list the stations included in the Rail Regulator's survey of ticket outlets. [18657]

Mr. Watts: No. The Rail Regulator's survey is a Mystery Shopping exercise. It would be inappropriate to identify the stations involved.

Channel Tunnel Fire

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 70, on what basis he believes it could be prejudicial to release information on the channel tunnel fire. [18654]

Mr. Watts: The investigations into the causes and consequences of the channel tunnel fire are continuing to examine evidence and establish the facts relating to the incident. Until the results of these investigations are known it could be misleading to release partial information.

London and Continental Railways

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total amount paid by London and Continental Railways to Her Majesty's Government for its acquisitions during the privatisation of the railways. [18640]

Mr. Watts: Nil. London and Continental Railways—LCR—was appointed in February 1996 to design, building and operate the channel tunnel rail link as part of the private finance initiative. An explanatory memorandum describing the Government's agreements with LCR was deposited in the House Library in March 1996.

Research Site, Crowthorne

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the sale of the Department's former research site at Crowthorne. [18901]

Mr. Bowis: My Department has exchanged contracts with Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd. to dispose of the research site at Crowthorne, to take effect from 25 March. The price is £18.2 million with a clawback provision on the undeveloped part of the site. The disposal represents a good deal for the taxpayer and the local community at Crowthorne which will have the benefit of a respected financial institution as the new landlord. The Transport Research Laboratory has a long lease for most of the site which has 14 years to run. TRL will be able to continue its excellent research, for which it is world famous.

Train Track Fences

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) who is responsible for the maintenance of fences alongside railway lines; [18240]

(2) what are the regulations governing the height and strength of fences alongside railway lines; and if these differ between built-up and rural areas. [18241]

Mr. Watts: Responsibility for maintaining railway fencing rests the infrastructure controller, Railtrack, in the case of the main network.

The controller's general duties under sections 3 and 4 of the Health and Safety at Work Act, etc. 1974, to protect the public from its premises and activities, extend to taking reasonably practicable measures to prevent unauthorised access. This obligation will be made explicit in the Railway Safety (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 1977 which come into force in early May. The new regulations will replace an existing fencing requirement in section 10 of the Railway Regulation Act 1842.

Guidance published by the Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate gives detailed advice on standards of railway fencing distinguishing between built-up and rural areas.

En Route Centre (Swanwick)

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the purpose of his Department's press briefing to be held at the new en route centre at Swanwick on 6 March; how many previous press briefings at Swanwick have taken place in the last 24 months; by whom they were organised; who attended; and if he will make a statement. [18290]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 3 March 1997]: The press briefing at Swanwick on 6 March is not being held or organised by the Department of Transport. It has been arranged by the Civil Aviation Authority's corporate communications department—CCD.

The purpose is to demonstrate the systems integration achieved to date, prior to the commencement of air traffic controller training at the centre in the near future.

I understand that this is the first major press briefing to be held at the Swanwick centre in the past 24 months although numerous individual journalists have made visits during that period. All these visits have been co-ordinated by the CAA's corporate communications department.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency associated with her Department. [16965]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Employment Service is the executive agency associated with the Department for Education and Employment. The Teachers Pensions Agency was an agency until it was contractorised in October 1996. The cost of setting up these agencies can be calculated only at disproportionate cost and would, in any case, be marginal when set against their overall budgets.

Both the Employment Service and the Teachers Pensions Agency carried out broadly the same functions before they become agencies. Therefore, although no actual figures are available, the cost of setting up these agencies is likely to have been marginal. The benefits in setting up these organisations as agencies can be seen in their clearer roles and responsibilities and in the freedom to meet targets they are set by Ministers and the successful performance against those targets.

General Schools Budget

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for High Peak (Mr. Hendry), of 10 February, Official Report, columns 54–55, (i) what factors underlie the variations in the amounts of money in the general schools budget which are not delegated to schools; [18407]

(2) what assessment she has made of the reasonableness of the amounts of money in the general schools budget which (a) Buckinghamshire and (b) Lancashire chooses not to delegate to schools. [18408]

Mr. Robin Squire: Within the general schools budget, funding is retained centrally by local education authorities for a wide variety of purposes, of which the most significant include capital expenditure; programmes supported by grants for education support and training and other specific grants; home-to-school transport, school meals, and various aspects of special educational needs. A number of these items are generally acknowledged to be particularly difficult to delegate, and in certain cases, known as "mandatory exceptions", delegation is currently forbidden by law.

There may therefore be many reasons why one LEA delegates a higher percentage of its GSB. In the case of the two LEAs referred to in the hon. Member's second question, the most significant factor would appear to be Buckinghamshire's proportionately higher provision for capital expenditure, which is a "mandatory exception".

Post-16 Pupils

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the educational institutions in Kirklees that provide post-16 places; and how many post-16 pupils attended each in the most recent year for which figures are available. [18410]

Mr. Paice: The following table shows the educational institutions in Kirklees that provide post-16 places and how many post-16 pupils attended each one on the latest date for which figures are available.

School (January 1996)	16+ pupils
All Saints RC High School	107
Batley Boys High School	117
Colne Valley High School	124
Heckmondwike (GM) Grammar School	150
Honley High School and Sixth Form Centre	145
Howden Clough High School	208
Mirfield Free Grammar School	190
St. John Fisher RC High School	129
Shelley High School	332
Whitcliffe Mount High School	175

College of further education (June 1996)	Full-time students	Part-time students
Dewsbury College	1,800	3,900
Greenhead College	1,265	—
Huddersfield New College	1,058	—
Huddersfield Technical College	3,400	7,400

Mrs. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what representations she has received from the Audit Commission about the provision of post-16 places in Kirklees; [18413]

(2) what advice he has received from the Audit Commission about the number of educational institutions for post-16 pupils. [18414]

Mr. Paice: None.

Mrs. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many surplus post-16 school places there were in Kirkless in the latest year for which figures are available; [18415]

(2) what is the cost of maintaining surplus places for post-16 pupils in Kirklees; and what is the cost per surplus place. [18416]

Mr. Paice: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mrs. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the educational institutions within five miles of Castle Hall grant-maintained school that provide post-16 places; [18411]

(2) if she will list the educational institutions in Kirklees available for year 11 pupils leaving Castle Hall grant-maintained school in the summer of 1997 to attend. [18412]

Mr. Paice: The following educational institutions, all within five miles, are available in Kirklees for year 11 pupils leaving Castle Hall GM school in the summer of 1997 to attend:

Colleges of further education

Dewsbury College

Greenhead College

Huddersfield New College

Huddersfield Technical College

Schools

All Saints RC (VA) High School

Batley High School for Boys

Batley Grammar (independent mixed selective) School

Colne Valley High School

Heckmondwike GM Grammar (selective) School

Honley High School and College

Howden Clough (Girls) High School

Mirfield Free Grammar School and Sixth Form Centre

St. John Fisher RC (SA) High School

Shelley High (VC) School

Whitcliffe Mount High School

The following schools providing post 16 places are also within five miles of Castle Hall GM School:

Calderdale LEA

Brighouse GM High

The Brooksbank GM

Hipperholme and Lightcliffe GM High

Rastrick GM High

Wakefield LEA

Ossett School

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of (a) 16, (b) 17 and (c) 18-year-olds are in full-time education in each local authority area. [18610]

Mr. Paice: This information is published for 16 and 17-year-olds in the Department's "Statistical Bulletin 8/96: Participation in education of young people aged 16 and 17 in each local education authority and region of England, 1990–91 to 1994–95". Information on 18-year-olds could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students residing in Lancashire receive their education under the assisted places scheme in schools (a) located in each of the district council areas of Lancashire and (b) in other local education authority areas; and if she will list those areas. [18387]

Mrs. Gillan: Information about the district council area or the local education authority area from which assisted pupils originate is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many successful applicants there were under the assisted places scheme in (a) Crewe and Nantwich and (b) Cheshire indicating the total value of the payments made in the last three years for which figures are available. [18642]

Mrs. Gillan: No schools in the Crewe and Nantwich constituency were successful in joining the assisted places scheme. Abbey Gate college, Chester and the Grange school, Northwich joined the scheme in September 1996 and Beech Hall preparatory school, Macclesfield has been successful in its bid for participation from September 1997. Four other schools in Cheshire—King's school, Chester; King's school, Macclesfield; Mount Carmel school; and Queen's school, Chester—were already participating before 1996.

The total amount spent on the scheme at the existing four participating schools in Cheshire in the academic years 1993–94 to 1995–96, the latest year for which information is complete, is given in the following table:

Assisted places scheme: Cheshire schools

Academic Year	1993–94		1994–95		1995–96
	Pupils	£000s	Pupils	£000s	Pupils	£000s
King's School, Chester	95	220	89	212	87	234
King's School, Macclesfield	173	553	179	619	193	670
Mount Carmel School	25	74	30	94	35	109
Queen's School, Chester	63	135	58	136	58	152
Total		972		1,061		1,165

Information is not collected centrally on the place of residence of assisted pupils. Participating schools generally draw from a wide catchment area.

First Aid (Schools)

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what requirements there are for the teaching of first aid in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools; and what data she collates on the numbers of schoolchildren achieving first aid qualifications. [18393]

Mrs. Gillan: There is no specific requirement on schools to teach first aid. However, all maintained schools are required under section 351 of the Education Act 1996 to deliver a curriculum which promotes the spiritual, moral, cultural, mental and physical development of pupils at the school and of society; and prepares such pupils for the opportunities, responsibilities and experiences of adult life. This can include teaching about first aid.

The Department does not collate information centrally on the numbers of schoolchildren achieving first aid qualifications.

Teacher Training

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of students who, on completion of a postgraduate certificate of education or equivalent qualification, will gain qualified teacher status in (a) mathematics and (b) physics, for each of the years 1997 to 2000. [18248]

Mr. Forth: The information is given in the following table. Estimates for undergraduate completers are based on students who entered such courses between 1993–94 and 1996–97, assuming a four-year course length. Estimates of postgraduate completers in 1997 are based on actual entrants in 1996–97, and for later years on the anticipated intakes for postgraduate courses, assuming that intake targets are met. Estimates for completers reflect the average in-course wastage by type of course; 25 per cent. in the case of undergraduate and 11 per cent. for postgraduate courses.

Year	Maths completers	Science completers
1996–97	1,550	2,600
1997–98	1,900	2,850
1998–99	1,650	2,600
1999–2000	1,600	2,650

Figures shown to nearest 50.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps her Department is taking to encourage new entrants into the teaching profession in (a) mathematics and (b) physics. [18249]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for promoting teaching as a profession rests with the Teacher Training Agency. I will ask the chairman of the gency, Geoffrey Parker, to write to the hon. Member direct.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the training of teachers in (a) mathematics and (b) physics. [18250]

Mr. Forth: From this September, there will be a national training curriculum for initial teacher training in primary mathematics. A curriculum for secondary mathematics and science and primary science will be introduced next September.

In addition, the Teacher Training Agency is developing national standards for classroom teachers, subject leaders and head teachers. The national standards will provide a focus for teachers' continuing professional development, whatever subject they teach. It is for schools and teachers to decide what individual training needs are appropriate.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions she has had with universities and their representatives over changes in the number of university physics courses; and what assessment she has made of the impact of those changes on the number training to be physics teachers. [18252]

Mr. Forth: None. My right hon. Friend continues to attach importance to the supply of places in science and engineering, but it is for individual universities to decide which courses to offer in the light of demand from suitably qualified applicants and other factors. The latest available information from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service suggests that the number of applicants for higher education physics courses has risen compared with this time last year. The number of students commencing initial teacher training courses in science, including physics, has increased significantly since 1990.

Enborne Lodge School, Newbury

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment under what statutory authority orders have been made prohibiting (a) the proposed closure and (b) the sale of Enborne Lodge school in Newbury. [18583]

Mrs. Gillan: There are no orders that prohibit either the sale or the closure of Enborne Lodge school. The school was transferred by the Education (Inner London Education Authority) (Property Transfer) Order 1990 to Lambeth local education authority subject to a condition that should the authority cease to use it wholly or mainly for its education functions or should it wish to sell the school it must first offer it to all other inner-London councils for transfer at nil consideration. Statutory proposals to close the school were published on 4 February 1997 and are currently under consideration.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment to whom the proceeds of the sale of Enborne Lodge school in Newbury would be payable. [18584]

Mrs. Gillan: Enborne Lodge is currently subject to conditions in the Education (Inner London Education Authority) (Property Transfer) Order 1990 which specify that proceeds of sale would be divided among the inner-London councils.

Education Reform Act 1988

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on proposals (a) to amend the Education Reform Act 1988 and (b) to issue new orders under the Act. [18585]

Mrs. Gillan: The Education Act 1996, which is a consolidated Act, made amendments to and superseded most of the Education Reform Act 1988. The Education Bill, which was introduced in the House on 30 October 1996, proposes amending section 218 of the ERA, which concerns the employment of teachers and others in positions involving regular contact with young people under the age of 19.

Part III of the ERA confers a number of order-making powers on the Secretary of State. The Government have recently consulted about proposals to exercise those powers in order to relax conditions on certain former Inner London education authority properties which were transferred to the inner-London boroughs.

Schools (Cheshire)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the average class size for (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools for (i) the constituency of Crewe and Nantwich and (ii) Cheshire; [18641]

(2) how many schools in (a) Crewe and Nantwich and (b) Cheshire have an average class size over 30. [18643]

Mr. Robin Squire: Average class sizes of classes as taught by one teacher in Cheshire local education authority area in January 1996 were 27.4 for primary schools and 21.3 for secondary schools; 53 primary schools and no secondary schools had average class sizes over 30.

Information on average class sizes in schools in the constituency of Crewe and Nantwich is not collated centrally.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was spent by each training and enterprise council on (i) administration, (ii) youth training, (iii) training for work and (iv) other areas in 1995–96. [18710]

Mr. Paice: Information on training and enterprise council spend for administration is published by each TEC in its annual statutory accounts, a copy of which is placed in the Library. Information on TEC expenditure on youth training, training for work and other areas is stated in an annual amalgamated income and expenditure account for all TECs, which will be published shortly.

Long-term Unemployment

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she is planning to introduce to reduce long-term unemployment. [16086]

Mr. Forth: Long-term unemployment has fallen by 36 per cent. over the last three years. We are continuing to build on the success of our economic and labour market policies by introducing this year a new package of measures to help people unemployed for two years or more.

From February project work will be extended to help up to 100,000 people. The new pilots will include an emphasis on identifying and tackling basic skills problems which might be preventing some individuals from returning to work. In addition, a new contract for work pilot initiative will explore ways in which the talents of the private sector might be used to help more very long-term unemployed people back to work. From April, under a new jobfinder programme, people reaching two or more years' unemployment will benefit from an intensive series of one-to-one interviews with an Employment Service adviser which will focus on helping the individual jobseeker back to work. We will also be making the jobmatch programme—which helps people to leave unemployment for a part-time job—available nationally to those aged under 25 who have been unemployed for two years or more; and within the existing training for work programme, there will be new opportunities for long-term unemployed people whose job prospects can best be increased through training designed to improve their basic skills.

Home-school Agreements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research her Department has undertaken with regard to the best way of implementing home-school agreements; and if she will make a statement. [16932]

Mr. Forth: The Department has not commissioned research in this area beyond that referred to in the reply given to my hon. Friend on 29 January by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State, the Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan), Official Report, column 256. A good deal of work has however previously been undertaken on home-school agreements. This includes the two-year project "Home-School Contract of Partnership" carried out jointly by the Royal Society of Arts and the National Association of Head Teachers.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to reduce discrimination against potential employees on the grounds of age. [16084]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government are fully aware of the problem of age discrimination against older employees. That is why this Department promotes the Government's campaign for older workers which persuades employers to recruit, train, and retain them on merit, disregarding age.

Science, Technology and Mathematics Council

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the work of the Science, Technology and Mathematics Council; and if she will make a statement on the future of the council. [18356]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 3 March 1997]: Since it was set up in 1994, the Science, Technology and Mathematics Council has successfully undertaken a range of development activities in support of national vocational education and training policies including national vocational qualifications and Scottish vocational qualifications.

I understand that the council intends to bid for national training organisation status later this year. Bids for recognition will be judged by an independent recognition panel chaired by Gordon Beaumont, against national criteria. The future of the Science, Technology and Mathematics Council as an NTO is, therefore, dependent upon its ability to meet the recognition criteria.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the definition of fuel poverty. [15238]

Mr. Roger Evans: The term fuel poverty has no precise meaning and is not adopted by the Department.

Extra help has been made available through the benefit scale rates and premiums—which includes help with payment of VAT on fuel—and is worth around £1.4 billion a year to low-income families with children and £1.1 billion a year to poorer pensioners. Cold weather payments, which provide help to those most in need during periods of exceptional cold weather, the home energy efficiency scheme and the direct payments scheme, which plays an important role in protecting benefit recipients who might otherwise be at risk of having fuel or water supply disconnected, are further examples of our commitment to helping the most vulnerable.

Fuel bills have fallen by more than 1 per cent. in real terms over the last two years, while the main income-related benefit rates have continued to be increased in line with inflation.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department estimates it cost to establish each executive agency set up by his Department since the start of April 1992. [16971]

Mr. Burt: The Department of Social Security has set up two agencies since April 1992. The total cost of setting up the Child Support Agency was approximately £146 million which includes the cost of the work transferred from the Benefits Agency, the costs of computers, accommodation, recruitment and training of staff in the administration of new legislation.

The cost of setting up the War Pensions Agency was approximately £1 million as it retained an existing organisation and staff together with the same framework of legislation.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances, in answering questions to Ministers regarding appeal tribunals, it is his policy to (a) provide the information requested, (b) inform the questioner that the president of the independent tribunal service will write to him and (c) inform the hon. Member that it is a matter for the independent tribunal service; and in what respects the policy changed between 23 January and 17 February. [17402]

Mr. Roger Evans: Responsibility for the judicial functions and administration of appeal tribunals is vested by statute in the president of the independent tribunal service.

Where the information requested by an hon. Member lies wholly within the responsibilities of the independent tribunal service, Ministers may decide either to obtain the information from the independent tribunal service in order to reply to the hon. Member, or suggest that the hon. Member deal directly with the independent tribunal service. As the hon. Member's recent questions related to matters within the responsibility of the independent tribunal service, I judged it more appropriate to direct the hon. Member to the service for the information requested.

Questions on the Government's policy in relation to appeal tribunals will, of course, continue to be answered by Ministers.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what methodology is to be adopted by his Department to ensure that contractorisation of the services provided to the Benefits Agency delivers (a) value for money and (b) quality standards for the full term of the contract. [17621]

Mr. Roger Evans: The methods and procedures used on all contracts for services awarded by this Department take account of prescribed policies, EU legislation and best practice.

The key criterion used in selecting contractors is that the chosen bid must demonstrate itself to be the most economically advantageous. Formal evaluation procedures, pertinent to each specific project, are put in place to ensure this is achieved.

The necessary quality standards are part of a contractor's contractual obligation. The actual performance achieved is measured against the requirements throughout the contract to ensure compliance.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to (a) EDS, (b) Andersen, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992 and the broad function to be carried out by the contractor, and the value of the contract in each case. [17614]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 18 December 1996, Official Report, columns 752–53.

Pensioners

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of pensioners aged (a) 75 years and over, (b) 80 years and over and (c) 85 years and over received income support for the latest year for which figures are available. [17485]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Proportion of pensioners in the population of Great Britain receiving income support: (February 1996)

Age of pensioner	Percentage of population
75 years and over	24.6
80 years and over	30.9
85 years and over	35.9

Notes:

1. Sample size 5 per cent.
2. Percentages are based on the age of the income support claimant as a proportion of all pensioners in the specified age group.
3. There will be an overlap in the numbers of recipients accounted for in each banding as a recipient may appear in more than one group ie. an 80 year old recipient will be represented in both the 75 years and over and the 80 years and over groups.

Social Fund

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of the social fund was spent on administration costs in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [17732]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table. Information for 1995–96 will be published in the Social Security departmental report later this month.

Year	Administration cost (£ million)	Percentage of total gross expenditure	Percentage of total gross[1] expenditure plus recoveries
1992–93	208	51.9	35.3
1993–94	[2]270	61.1	41.4
1994–95	209	46.3	30.5

[1] The social fund recycles loan repayments to help more people. Since the start of the scheme loans valued at over £1.9 billion have been made for an outlay of £384 million—a multiplier effect of some 5 times.

[2] The high administration cost for 1993–94 was largely due to expenditure on the new social fund computer system.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the budget of the social fund for the financial year 1997–98. [18237]

Mr. Evans: Details of the discretionary social fund budget for 1997–98 will be announced later this month.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the budget of the social fund in each of the last five years. [18238]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table:

£ million

Year	Grants budget	Gross loans budget[1]	In-year allocation (loans)	Total gross loans budget
1992–93	91	211	15	225
1993–94	95	251	0	251
1994–95	97	255	15	270
1995–96	97	309	0	309
1996–97	97	322.5	21	343.5

[1] Includes contingency reserve.

Income Support

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to end the classification of taxed inheritance as capital in assessing income support entitlement. [17746]

Mr. Roger Evans: There are no plans to do so.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will amend the rules for the disqualification of income support entitlement for families from a capital sum for each partner to an aggregate sum for both partners. [17747]

Mr. Evans: The income support rules already provide that the capital resources of partners are aggregated when assessing entitlement to benefit. The exception is where one partner is permanently in a residential care or nursing home. In such cases, each partner is assessed separately and their capital resources are not aggregated. We have no plans to amend these rules.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of the current cost of funding the jobseeker's allowance; and if he will make a statement. [17731]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated programme cost of jobseeker's allowance in 1996–97 is £5,681 million.

The departmental report for 1997–98, which is due to be published later this month, will contain new estimates of the cost of jobseeker's allowance.

Source: Table 1A, Departmental report 1996–97.

Pensions (Winter Supplement)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with the British pensioners and the trade unions action association regarding the introduction of a supplement to the basic pension during the winter months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on this matter. [18251]

Mr. Heald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no discussions with either group.

We have no plans to introduce a supplement to the contributory retirement pension during the winter months. Cold weather payments from the social fund give extra help towards additional heating costs resulting from a sustained period of very cold weather. People in receipt of income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance who have a pensioner premium are eligible. So far this winter, over 5 million payments worth over £43 million have been issued to almost 3 million eligible people.

Young Benefit Claimants (Crewe and Nantwich)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the current number of under 25-year-olds claiming benefits in (a) Crewe and Nantwich and (b) Cheshire. [18644]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Disability Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many medical members of disability appeal tribunals are involved in examining claimants for the purpose of the all-work test. [11087]

Mr. Roger Evans [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1997, c. 719]: A comparison of Benefits Agency medical services and independent tribunal service records indicates that 88 doctors who perform work for Benefits Agency medical services on a fee-paid sessional basis involving incapacity benefit are also members of disability appeal tribunals.

Note:

Data are provisional and subject to change.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances medical members of disability appeal tribunals are involved in examining claimants for the purpose of the all-work test. [13327]

Mr. Evans [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1997, c. 362-63]: Medical members of disability appeal tribunals may be involved in examing claimants for the purposes of the all-work test if they are qualified and contracted to do so by Benefits Agency medical services on whose behalf such examinations are carried out.

Sources:
Independent Tribunal Service. Benefits Agency Medical Services.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) medical members of disability appeal tribunals and (b) doctors appointed to sit as medical assessors in appeals involving the all work test are employed by the Benefits Agency; and in what capacity. [11086]

Mr. Evans [pursuant to the reply, 27 January, 1997c. 107]: No doctor who is currently employed by the Benefits Agency medical services, in a salaried capacity, may be appointed as a medical member of a disability appeal tribunal or as a medical assessor.

A comparison of Benefits Agency medical services and independent tribunal service records indicates that 241 doctors who perform work for Benefits Agency medical services on a fee-paid sessional basis are also members of disability appeal tribunals. These doctors do not sit as a members of the tribunals which are considering cases in which they have been involved in connection with their work for Benefits Agency medical services.

Information on the number of doctors who perform work for Benefits Agency medical services on a fee-paid sessional basis who also act as medical assessors to Social Security Appeals tribunals is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, a doctor who performs work for Benefits Agency medical services on a fee-paid sessional basis which involves incapacity benefit is not eligible for appointment as a medical assessor. On appointment as a medical assessor, it is emphasised that an individual cannot undertake sessional work for Benefits Agency medical services in connection with incapacity benefit because of the possible conflict of interest.

HEALTH

EU Anti-smoking Campaign

Mr. Lamont: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been Her Majesty's Government's policy towards proposals for an EU anti-smoking campaign; and what is the current status of these proposals. [18088]

Mr. Horam: The Government acknowledge the European Commission's work in putting together a paper on the present and proposed future Community role in combating tobacco consumption.

However, we consider that tobacco control measures are primarily a matter for individual member states, taking account of their differing social and economic contexts.

Fibromyalgia

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into fibromyalgia; what treatment is available for it under the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [18100]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has not commissioned or evaluated any research into fibromyalgia. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC is an independent body deciding what research to support on its own expert judgment. The council is always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications.

Decisions about the treatment of individual patients with fibromyalgia are the responsibility of the doctors concerned who are required to exercise their clinical judgment, in consultation with their patients, informed by the patient's medical history.

The organisation of health services and the manner in which they are delivered are matters for health authorities in their role as purchasers of services for their populations. They enter into arrangements with hospital and community units—trusts—to ensure that the entire range of services is available, taking account of the needs of the local population and the priorities set for the use of the available resources.

Human Growth Hormone

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost to his Department to date of the litigation in respect of human growth hormone. [18086]

Mr. Horam: The legal costs to date are estimated at £500,000. In addition, numerous staff at various levels and for various periods of time have been involved in matters related to the litigation and their costs cannot be separately identified.

Dental Laboratories

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy in respect of third-party accreditation of dental laboratories. [18465]

Mr. Malone: The Government support the principles of third-party accreditation of dental laboratories, highlighted in their response to the fourth report from the Health Select Committee, Session 1992–93.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures his Department has taken to control the levels of laboratory prices charged by dentists; [18446]

(2) what measures he has taken to ensure the laboratory expense element of dentists' NHS work is properly accounted for; [18466]

(3) what role his Department has, and what consultations it has had, in determining how and where the annual expenditure on laboratory treatment is spent. [18447]

Mr. Malone: None. Dentists are paid a fee for each item of service which covers both remuneration and the expenses met by a dentist in providing treatment. These expenses include any laboratory expenses. Dentists decide for themselves which laboratories they use and they then make entirely private transactions with those laboratories. The control of the level of laboratory prices is, therefore, a matter for individual dentists.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons statistics are not available on the (a) levels of dental laboratory work and (b) cost of dental laboratory items. [18444]

Mr. Malone: These statistics are not collected centrally. They are a matter for laboratories and their customers.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department has taken to safeguard the quality of dental appliances for which dentists are paid a fixed fee; and if he will issue guidelines containing indicative costs for laboratory work. [18443]

Mr. Malone: National health service dentists are required by law to employ a proper degree of skill and attention and to use only materials which are suitable for the purposes for which they are used. The work of dentists is monitored by the dental reference service. There are no plans to issue guidelines containing indicative costs of laboratory work.

Vitamin B6

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment will make a further statement about the safety of vitamin B6 supplements. [18384]

Mr. Horam: The Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment has yet to complete its further consideration of the safety of vitamin B6.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what scientific studies of vitamin B6 the secretariat of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment based its assertions, in respect of (a) peripheral neuropathy in humans at 50 mg and above over a prolonged period and (b) corroborating evidence from reports of animal toxicity. [18383]

Mr. Horam: The secretariat of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment reflects the views of the committee. As concerns a list of the scientific studies first considered by the committee, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food gave him on 21 January 1997, columns 548–49. A list of the additional studies being considered by the Committee will be placed in the Library shortly.

Dental Services

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons dentists are not required to provide patients with an itemised invoice for all dental work. [18445]

Mr. Malone: For most courses of dental treatment, including those involving laboratory work, dentists are required, under their terms of service, to provide treatment plans for patients, detailing the treatment they require and the likely cost. Dentists are also required by regulations to issue a receipt for the amount of the national health service charge the patients have paid.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons he rejected the Health Committee's recommendations in its fourth report of Session 1992–93 on dental services (HC264) that laboratory fees should be ring-fenced. [18493]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 47 of the Government response to the fourth report from the Health Select Committee, Session 1992–93, published in August 1993 as Cm 2308.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now hold a public inquiry in respect of patients treated with pituitary-derived human growth hormone who have contracted Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [18944]

Mr. Horam: I regret if I inadvertently misled the House on 24 February 1997 at column 128 in saying that the judge, Mr. Justice Morland, had actually said that the hearing was in inquisitorial examination rather than an adversarial one. He did, however, say that the Department had

"given full discovery so far as logistically possible and have not withheld any witnesses who could have given worthwhile evidence."

In practice, therefore, the court case was very much like a public inquiry, and I am not convinced that another public examination of these issues would add anything further.

Needless to say, in what is undoubtedly a tragic situation, the Department is committed to settling compensation for those who will receive it as soon as possible, as well as offering counselling and support, and financing research into the causes and nature of this condition.

Community Care (Suffolk)

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people Suffolk county council had placed under community care in its own residential homes at the most recent date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [18292]

Mr. Burns: At 31 March 1996, Suffolk county council was supporting a total of 1,059 adult and elderly residents in its own residential homes.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to Suffolk county council per week of a community care place in a residential home run (a) by the county council and (b) by the private sector; and if he will make a statement. [18293]

Mr. Burns: As published in "Key Indicators of local authority social services 1996", copies of which are available in the Library, the latest available figures, for 1994–95, show gross expenditure per week by Suffolk county council on residential care per supported resident in staffed homes for older people was £268 for local authority homes and £178 for independent sector homes.

Prescriptions

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances patients are entitled to an NHS prescription from a private consultation; and what contractual limitations health authorities may place on general practitioners in respect of such prescriptions. [18360]

Mr. Malone: Doctors who are consulted in a private capacity may not provide national health service prescriptions.

Rabies

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data he has collated on the number of British subjects who have contracted rabies in the past five years; and where it was contracted in each case. [18363]

Mr. Horam: The public health laboratory service collates information on human rabies cases imported into the United Kingdom. It has had no reports of clinically diagnosed rabies in British subjects in the last five years.

NHS Trusts (Funding)

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS trusts which will receive funds from the public capital budget to support their proposed private finance initiative projects, indicating for each the amount that will be paid in each year of these arrangements. [18482]

Mr. Horam: The following 14 trusts have been offered funds from the support scheme:

Bishop Auckland Hospitals NHS Trust
Bromley Hospitals NHS Trust
Calderdale Healthcare NHS Trust
Carlisle Hospitals NHS Trust
Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust
Greenwich Healthcare NHS Trust
Hereford Hospitals NHS Trust
North Durham Acute Hospitals NHS Trust
Oxleas NHS Trust
St. James and Seacroft University Hospitals NHS Trust
Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust
Walsgrave Hospitals NHS Trust
Wellhouse NHS Trust
Worcester Royal Infirmary NHS Trust

The trusts are still negotiating with their private sector partners to finalise these projects. Therefore the amount of support being offered to each trust is commercial in confidence. However, the total cost of the support scheme is not expected to exceed £9 million a year, less than 1 per cent. of the total NHS capital budget.

Waiting Lists (Cheshire)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the current number of patients on waiting lists for each of the hospitals in Cheshire. [18646]

Mr. Horam: Information on the numbers of patients waiting for admission to each of the trusts in Cheshire is given in the table.

Provisional number of patients on waiting lists on 31 December 1996

	Number
Warrington Hospital National Health Service Trust	5,979
Halton General Hospital NHS Trust	1,857
West Cheshire NHS Trust	105
East Cheshire NHS Trust	1,528
Mid-Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust	6,577
Countess of Chester Hospital Trust	6,425

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the current average waiting times for operations for each of the hospitals in Cheshire. [18645]

Mr. Horam: Information in the form requested is not available centrally.

Blood Products (Recalls)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in the last 12 months blood plasma and other blood products have been recalled from hospitals by the blood transfusion service; in how many cases the cause for recall was possible contamination; and in how many cases batches of products later recalled had begun to be used by hospitals. [17535]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 25 February 1997]: The National Blood Authority, of which the former blood transfusion service forms a part, has made two such recalls in the last 12 months after the products had been issued to hospitals and had begun to be used by them. The products in question were assessed as safe for use because of the production processes to which they were subjected. The recalls were undertaken as a precautionary measure only, in order to avoid unnecessary public concern.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the extent of farmers concealing incidents of BSE infection; and if he will make a statement. [18147]

Mrs. Browning: There is no evidence to suggest that farmers are concealing BSE suspect cases. The temptation to do so would be greatest on holdings where no previous BSE case had occurred, as it is these farmers who might expect to have the most to lose by reporting a case. Statistical data give no indication that this is happening. In Great Britain in 1995, 1,351 cases were reported on holdings with no previous BSE case; in 1996, 789 cases were reported; and as at 28 February 1997, 72 cases had been reported. This is in line with the overall year-on-year decline in the epidemic as a result of controls on animal feed.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many new cases of BSE infection have been reported in each of the last 48 months categorised by area; and if he will make a statement. [18148]

Mrs. Browning: Details of confirmed cases of BSE by date of restriction for the last 48 months categorised by county are being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of concealment over BSE infection (a) are currently under investigation and (b) have been reported in each of the past two years; of those investigated, how many and what percentage have resulted in (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction; and if he will make a statement. [18146]

Mrs. Browning: None.

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the Government's current estimate of the additional public expenditure attributable to BSE in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what estimate he has made of the amount of this expenditure which will be reimbursed from the European Union's budget. [18432]

Mrs. Browning: Details of BSE-related expenditure and receipts for the years in question are as follows:

£ million

	1996–97	1997–98
Estimated expenditure	1,370	1,010
Estimated recoveries from EU	340	590

Cod (North Sea)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the decline in cod stocks in the North sea; and by what percentage total stocks have declined over the last 12 years. [18017]

Mr. Baldry: The advisory committee on fishery management of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea has estimated that the spawning stock biomass of North sea cod declined by 16 per cent. over the period 1985 to 1996 inclusive. The total allowable catch set for 1997 by the Fisheries Council in December 1996 reflected concern about the pressure on this important stock and provides for the spawning stock biomass to increase by 38 per cent. over the period 1996 to 1998.

Cloning

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will establish a review of the ethical issues relating to the cloning of animals and birds threatened with extinction. [18390]

Mrs. Browning: The breakthrough in cloning technology has the potential to be used to save animal and bird species threatened with extinction, but it has yet to be shown to be possible in species other than the sheep. A review of the ethics of the application of this technique to threatened species would be premature.

Bullfinches

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance his Department issues to fruit growers regarding the prevention of damage caused by bullfinches. [18365]

Mrs. Browning: Advice to fruit growers regarding the prevention of damage caused by bullfinches is provided, on request, by ADAS (Statutory), the Ministry's wildlife adviser. The basis of the advice is that, wherever possible, non-lethal means of preventing any damage, for example the use of netting or fine threads spread over trees, should be used. Advice on longer-term measures, such as future planting strategies to reduce the risk of damage, would also be available.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many individual licences have been issued by his Department for the killing or taking or bullfinches since the restriction on general licences to the county of Kent; and how many bullfinches have been killed or trapped during that period. [18364]

Mrs. Browning: One individual licence has been issued since the restriction on the general licence to kill or take bullfinches to the county of Kent came into effect on 1 November 1996. The licensee is not required to submit details of the number of bullfinches killed or taken until after the licence has expired. As the licence is still in force, this information is not yet available.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what data he has collated on the damage to fruit orchards by bullfinches; how those data were gathered; and how often the situation is reviewed. [18366]

Mrs. Browning: Past evidence and the best advice currently available to the Ministry are that bullfinches can cause serious damage to fruit orchards; this can happen very quickly and is often unpredictable. The Ministry's experience in dealing with problems caused by bullfinches has shown that whole trees can be affected, resulting in total crop losses. The situation is kept under continual renewal.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many bullfinches have been killed or taken under general licences issued by his Department in each of the past five years; [18367]

(2) what data he has collated on the number of bullfinches killed or taken under general licence in Kent in each of the past five years. [18368]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is set out below.

Number of bullfinches killed or taken

Year	Within all areas in England covered by the general licence, including Kent	Within the County of Kent
1991–92	433	341
1992–93	620	567
1993–94	326	312
1994–95	262	262
1995–96	317	317

Swine Fever

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of classical swine fever were recorded in the United Kingdom in each year, from 1992 to 1996; and how much compensation was paid to the owner of those animals in each year. [18359]

Mrs. Browning: None.

Rabies

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what data he has collated relating to rabies in those parts of Europe where it is a serious hazard. [18362]

Mrs. Browning: Those data are available from a quarterly report entitled "Rabies Bulletin Europe", which is compiled and published by the World Health Organisation collaborating centre for rabies surveillance and research in Tübingen, Germany.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Executive

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of Housing Executive properties (a) demolished and (b) replaced in each local authority catchment area since 1992. [17744]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I am advised that the information, for the period 1 April 1992 to 25 February 1997, is as follows:

District council area	Demolitions	Completions
Belfast	2,921	790

Housing Executive

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met members of the Northern Ireland Housing Council to discuss the budget of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. [17742]

Mr. Moss: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has not met the members of the Northern Ireland Housing Council, but I met them on 4 April 1996 at which time we discussed several matters including the allocation of resources for 1996–97 for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and housing associations.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many submissions he has received (a) in favour of and (b) opposed to, his proposals to subject Northern Ireland Housing Executive functions to compulsory competitive tendering; and if he will make a statement. [17745]

Mr. Moss: Over 130 copies of the proposal for the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order, which included provisions subjecting the Northern Ireland Housing Executive functions to compulsory competitive tendering, were issued on 19 January 1996. Thirty-four submissions were received, of which two were in favour of, and eight were opposed to, the proposals to subject Northern Ireland Housing Executive functions to compulsory competitive tendering.

Water Service Staff

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many posts within the Water Service were transferred to Craigavon from (i) Newry, (ii) Armagh, (iii) Belfast and (iv) elsewhere, in each of the past five years; [17803]

(2) how many people are employed in design in the Water Services in (i) Craigavon, (ii) Armagh and (iii) Newry; and what proposals there are for future staffing levels in those offices; [17807]

(3) how many posts within the Water Service were transferred to Belfast from (i) Newry, (ii) Armagh, (iii) Craigavon and (iv) elsewhere, in each of the past five years; [17805]

(4) how many employees there were in Water Service in (i) Armagh, (ii) Craigavon and (iii) Newry and Mourne in each of the past five years; [17804]

(5) what were the (a) numbers and (b) grades of recruits to the Water Service in (i) administration, (ii) personnel, (iii) design, (iv) accountancy and (v) other disciplines, in each of the past five years, indicating the location of each post; [17808]

(6) what are the projected staffing levels in the water service in (i) Armagh, (ii) Craigavon, (iii) Newry and (iv) Belfast, for the next three years. [17806]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Water Service under its chief executive, Mr. H. R. F. Plester. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from H. R. F. Plester to Mr. Seamus Mallon, dated 28 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your six Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland about Water Service operational matters. I shall answer each in turn in the order in which they were tabled. The general background is that staffing levels in the Water Service have reduced from 2529 in 1992 to 2298 at the end of 1996.

No 386

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many posts within Water Service were transferred to Craigavon from (i) Newry, (ii) Armagh, (iii) Belfast and (iv) elsewhere, in each of the past five years.

The information requested is shown in the table.

No 387

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many people are employed in design in the Water Services in (i) Craigavon, (ii) Armagh and (iii) Newry, and what proposals there are for future staffing levels in those offices.

Twenty-seven people based in Craigavon are employed in design which is taken to include construction supervision and direct administrative support. Overall design manning in the Water Service is being reduced so that engineering staff can be redeployed to enable the filling of key vacancies directly related to the provision of customer services. One option under consideration would involve a reduction of about ten staff in the Craigavon design section (together with slightly greater numbers in Belfast). Water Service is currently considering this and alternative options in line with business needs, the expressed wishes of staff and their career development, together with any possible differential impact in relation to Equal Opportunities taking full account of Government's commitments to TSN and PAFT concerning possible disparity of effect in community or sectional terms. You will be aware that Water Service Design Group does not provide direct services to the public. All staff under consideration are in mobile grades available for posting throughout Northern Ireland. Water Service has, at present, no staff involved in design permanently based in either Armagh or Newry and no change in this situation is envisaged.

No 389

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many posts within the Water Services were transferred to Belfast from (i) Newry, (ii) Armagh, (iii) Craigavon and (iv) elsewhere, in each of the past five years.

No Water Service posts were transferred to Belfast during the past five years with the exception of five posts transferred from Craigavon in 1995.

No 392

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many employees there were in Water Services in (i) Armagh, (ii) Craigavon and (iii) Newry and Mourne in each of the past five years.

The information requested is shown in the table.

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what were the (a) numbers and (b) grades of recruits to the Water Services in (i) administration, (ii) personnel, (iii) design, (iv) accountancy and (v) other disciplines, in each of the past five years, indicating the location of each post.

Recruitment of staff is to the Department of the Environment (NI); numbers, grades and initial location of recruits whose first posting was to Water Service are shown in the table.

No 396

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what are the projected staffing levels in Water Services in (i) Armagh, (ii) Craigavon, (iii) Newry and (iv) Belfast, for the next three years.

Water Service staffing levels currently under review include scientific services, design services and administrative support for operational services. The outcome of these reviews will not be known for some months. It is not, therefore, possible to provide the detailed information requested for these locations at this time. When concluded the outcome of these reviews will, however, if significant changes are involved, be communicated to elected representatives. Staffing matters are regularly the subject of trade union consultation

Housing Council

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to extend the responsibilities of the Northern Ireland Housing Council. [17741]

Mr. Moss: None.

Housing

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many units of housing were completed by (a) housing associations and (b) the Housing Executive in Northern Ireland during 1995–96; and what is the total number of applicants on housing waiting lists. [17743]

Mr. Moss: The information is as follows:

	Number
Registering housing associations	1,276
Housing executive	1,362
Waiting lists as at 31 March 1996
Urgent	11,148
General	12,201
Total	23,349

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each council area the total (i) dwellings, (ii) Housing Executive dwellings, (iii) housing association dwellings, (iv) privately owned rented dwellings and (v) owner-occupied dwellings; and if he will list each category as a percentage of the total number of dwellings in each council area. [18511]

Mr. Moss: The most recent information in the form requested is set out in table A3.21 of the Northern Ireland house condition survey 1991, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library. Similar information from the Northern Ireland house condition survey 1996 is expected to be published later this year. Between surveys, the information requested is not available at district council level.

Housing Benefit and Rate Rebate

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each council area the number and percentage of (i) all occupants, (ii) occupants of (1) Housing Executive properties and (2) housing association properties and (iii) owner-occupiers who receive (a) housing benefit and (b) rate rebate, and what are the total sums for each category in each area. [18510]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the form requested; however, information which is available as at 1 February 1997 is as follows:

	Number	Percentage	Expenditure (1 April 1996 to 1 February 1997)
Total households in Northern Ireland	518,841	—	—
Total Housing Executive properties	139,447	—	—
Tenants receiving Housing benefit	109,026	78	168,864,324
Private Sector tenants (including housing association tenants)	34,045	—	68,626,495
Owner-occupiers receiving housing benefit	43,905	—	10,200,000

Major Road Works Programme

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in respect of the major road works programme in each of the last five years and the current year the sums set out in each relevant edition of the Northern Ireland expenditure plans and priorities for that programme. [18591]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. William Ross, dated 3 March 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to your recently tabled PQ about planned expenditure on the major road works programme.

The table below details planned expenditure on major roads schemes as incorporated in the Government's Northern Ireland Expenditure Plans and Priorities.

Planned expenditure on major works (Schemes costing £200,000 and over)

Year	£000s
1991–92	18,730
1992–93	18,426
1993–94	22,747
1994–95	22,309
1995–96	16,723
1996–97	14,384

Figures for 1991–92 to 1995–96 extracted from NI Estimates. Figure for 1996–97 included in new format of NI Estimates.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the PFI contracts signed to date, indicating the total value of such contracts, the cost per year in annual payments and the total value of the payments to be made over the life of the contracts. [18617]

Sir John Wheeler: Projects approved under the private finance initiative to date include a contract energy services scheme at Holywell hospital, car parking facilities at the Royal group of hospitals, and leasing of medical and other equipment. The car parking project at the Royal group of hospitals is a financially free-standing project which will recover its costs through charges to the user. The total capital value of signed contracts amounts to approximately £5.3 million, with an annual payment of £1 million. The total value of the payments to be made over the life of the contracts amounts to approximately £5.7 million.

SCOTLAND

Voluntary Sector Projects

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to prevent closure of voluntary sector projects which would formerly have been eligible for a three-year extension subject to positive evaluation. [18173]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Under "Programme for Partnership", it is for local partnerships to make decisions on the extension of voluntary sector projects funded through the urban programme.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much of the urban programme underspend he will use to fund voluntary sector projects for one more year, in areas that were not awarded priority partnership area or regulation programme status. [18174]

Mr. Robertson: There is no reason to expect an urban programme underspend in 1996–97.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet representatives of the Glasgow Council for the Voluntary Sector to discuss the use of urban programme underspend to avoid imminent closure of voluntary sector projects. [18175]

Mr. Robertson: I met representatives of the Glasgow Council for the Voluntary Sector on 24 January 1997 to discuss its concerns about voluntary sector projects. I have already agreed to a further meeting with it on Friday 4 April 1997.

Research Grants

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total amount of Government research grants allocated in each of the past five years to each Scottish university in (i) pharmacology, (ii) bio-physics, (iii) food hygiene and (iv) information technology. [17288]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 26 February 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to her yesterday by my hon. Friend the Minister for Science and Technology at the Department of Trade and Industry.

Farmed Salmon

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what tests are currently carried out on farmed Scottish salmon for traces of ivermectin; and what proportion of fish revealed traces in the most recent tests. [17830]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The Veterinary Medicines Directorate undertakes surveillance for the presence of residues of veterinary medicines in fish as part of a programme to monitor whether residues of these substances are passing into food for human consumption in unacceptable concentrations. In the case of salmon, samples of farmed salmon, including Scottish salmon, are purchased from randomly selected retail outlets throughout the United Kingdom. The 1996 programme of analyses has yet to be completed and reported, but the most recent data show that no residues of ivermectin were determined in any of the 275 samples of salmon analysed to date.

Further Education

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to include an assessment of (a) the quality of the services and (b) other factors in the future determination of grants for further education colleges; and if he will make a statement. [17998]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 28 February 1997]: The White Paper "Raising the Standard", Cm 3542, published in January 1997 set out our plans to consult colleges on introducing, from 1997–98, a direct link between quality and funding. That, and other factors, will be considered in the review of the further education funding formula I have announced will take place.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide additional funding to the further education sector to allow for the introduction of new initiatives; and if he will make a statement. [17999]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 29 February 1997]: The White Paper "Raising the Standard", Cm 3542, published in January 1997 set out our plans to launch a challenge fund to improve the use of new technology by colleges. The sum of £1.3 million will be made available for this in 1997–98.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the funding formula for the further education sector; and if he will make a statement. [18000]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 28 February 1997]: I announced on 3 February 1997 that a review of the funding formula for the further education sector would be initiated. Work on that will commence shortly, and will involve representatives of the sector.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he has had with the further education sector in respect of its concerns about the current funding formula; and if he will make a statement. [18001]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 28 February 1997]: I met representatives of the Association of Scottish Colleges on 27 January 1997 for a discussion on further education funding. I assured them that college views will be considered as part of the forthcoming review of the funding formula.

Pupils (Standard Grades)

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many 16-year-olds gained five standard grades in each year since 1991. [18420]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 3 March 1997]: Standard grade statistics are collected for S4 pupils and not for 16-year-old pupils. Most S4 pupils, however, have attained their 16th birthday, or will shortly do so. The number of pupils who gained five or more standard grades is listed. Statistics for those who gained standard grades at levels 1 to 3 are available from 1991. Information on pupils who gained five or more standard grades at levels 4 to 7 is, however, available only from 1993.

	Level 1–3	Level 4–7	Level 1–7
1991	25,357	—	—
1992	27,527	—	—
1993	28,478	22,868	51,346
1994	30,655	23,423	54,078
1995	33,553	23,623	54,078
1996	34,884	24,091	58,975

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Brewing Industry

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on recent rulings by the Office of Fair Trading in respect of (a) the tied house in relation to brewers and (b) the Courage Inntrepreneur scheme. [18462]

Mr. John M. Taylor: (a) The Officer of Fair Trading held an inquiry into brewers' wholesale pricing policy in 1995. The inquiry concluded that, although a minority of tied tenants on long leases had experienced some hardship, the differential wholesale pricing policy of brewers had not in general placed the tied trade at a disadvantage to free houses. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade accepted this conclusion.

(b) The Office of Fair Trading recommended that the undertakings given by Inntrepreneur following the merger between Courage and Grand Metropolitan in 1991 be varied. This variation released Inntrepreneur from its previous undertakings, but introduced a new undertaking which prevented Inntrepreneur from requiring any of its tenants to take beer supplies exclusively from Scottish and Newcastle, which owns the Courage beer brands. The Director General of Fair Trading argued that, as the nature and size of Inntrepreneur were similar to that of a number of other pub chain operators, it was no longer appropriate to keep the existing undertakings in place. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade accepted this recommendation.

Oil (Control and Jurisdiction)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the European Union has any entitlement to exercise control or jurisdiction over the organisation of oil development and exploration and the disposal of the oil from United Kingdom waters; and if he will make a statement. [18586]

Mr. Page: The exploration for and development of the UK's oil and gas resources continue to be carried out under licences issued by the UK Government. The UK's licensing regime is required to conform with the provisions of the hydrocarbons licensing directive of 1994, which sets out common rules relating to the procedures for granting authorisations for the exploration and production of oil and gas. However, that directive also reaffirms the important principle that

"Member States have sovereignty and sovereign rights over hydrocarbon resources on their territories".

Structural Funds Programmes

Mr. Faber: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the negotiation of the 1997 to 1999 British objective 2 structural funds programmes. [18863]

Mr. Greg Knight: The Government in collaboration with local partnerships produced regional and social conversion plans for each of the 13 British areas. These were submitted to the European Commission during August 1996.

Following negotiations, the Commission has announced its agreement in principle to 10 programmes of grant, based on these plans, subject to consultation of the EU structural funds committees. Some questions raised by the Commission remain to be settled; I hope that this can be done as soon as possible so that the programmes can be adopted by the Commission by the end of March.

The 10 programmes cover:

North-east England

West Cumbria

Yorkshire and Humberside

London

West Midlands

Greater Manchester, Lancashire, Cheshire

South Wales

Eastern Scotland

Western Scotland

Gibraltar

The remaining programmes for the east midlands, Thanet and Plymouth are close to agreement and should be adopted during April.

The programmes set a coherent strategic framework for the use of approximately £1.9 billion of EU structural funds grant for economic regeneration, the development of enterprise and skills, and the creation of jobs based on the local needs and the potential of each area. They draw on the experience and successes of the 1994 to 1996 programmes to ensure continuity and improved value for money.

Under the programmes, a range of projects will be approved, for the support for small and medium enterprises, increasing the technology base, tourism and community economic development, with an anticipated total value of around £4.7 billion.

I welcome the effective way in which the Government and local partnerships have co-operated on these programmes. Over the past few years, the experience of local programme monitoring committees has grown. Increasingly, they address strategic issues, as well as the more working level consideration of programme implementation. Although these committees essentially deal with administrative matters and are mainly attended by officials, we have received representations from some committees seeking to involve local councillors. After considering these representations, I have decided that it should be for each United Kingdom monitoring committee to determine whether to accept elected members as representatives of local councils.

Most of the programmes for England and Wales provide for part of their grant, £160 million in total, to be awarded to projects through the second round of regional challenge. This will be run locally, and after the programmes have been adopted, each area will launch its own competition.

Regional challenge aims to increase competition in the allocation of European structural funds. The first round awarded a total prize fund of £160 million to 34 innovative projects in England and Wales. Winning applicants included flagship projects such as the earth centre in South Yorkshire and the Lowry centre in Salford. The first round of regional challenge projects has levered in an estimated £359 million of private sector contribution.

Films (Copyright)

Mr. Faber: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what form notifications should take for the purpose of regulation 33(b) of the Copyright and Related Rights Regulations 1996 (SI, 1996, No. 2967) when authors or performers wish to exercise their right to equitable remuneration for rental of films made under agreements concluded before 1 July 1994. [18864]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Directive 92/100 EEC, which these regulations implement, does not specify how such notification are to be made and nor, therefore, can the regulations do so. It would nevertheless appear that any form of notifications that clearly indicates an intent to exercise the right to equitable remuneration would be valid for the purposes of regulation 33. Such notifications may be given on behalf of the persons to whom they relate by those representing them, such as professional agents or advisers or organisations such as Equity. It would also appear that notifications need not list individually the performers or films to which they relate to be valid. Ultimately, however, these are matters for the courts to determine.

DEFENCE

Pipeline Inspection Notification

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what conclusions were reached following the trial of published avoidances around the United Kingdom ethylene pipeline, promulgated by aeronautical information circular No. 73/1994; [17993]

(2) how many aircraft proximity incidents between helicopters whose activities were notified under the pipeline inspection notification system and military aircraft have been reported since the introduction of the system; and if he will list the date and risk category of each incident; [17994]

(3) if he will list the changes made to the pipeline inspection notification system since its introduction, including the date on which each change was introduced; [17984]

(4) what plans he has for further changes to the pipeline inspection notification system. [17983]

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Ion Exchange Resin

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress being made in developing a treatment process for ion exchange resin arising from the MODIX process at Rosyth and Devonport. [18221]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Ships Support Agency. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Roger Babington to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 4 March 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the progress on the treatment of ion exchange resin arising from the MODIX process at Rosyth and Devonport, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

The resin generated as a result of the MODIX process can be categorised into two groups; resin containing chelates (chemicals which affect the rate at which the radioactivity within the resin may leach out) and resin without chelates. The resin without chelates, categorised as low level waste, is sent to BNF Plc Drigg for disposal. The resin without chelates, categorised as intermediate level waste, is stored safely until it has decayed to low level waste, when it too can be disposed of at BNF Plc Drigg. The resin containing chelates is cleaned by a process called MODULOX (trade name for Modular Oxidisation) which removes the chelates so the waste can be disposed of at BNF Plc Drigg once classified as low level waste.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress being made to construct building D151 at Devonport to store arisings of ion exchange resin. [18218]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Ships Support Agency. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Roger Babington to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 4 March 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the progress being made to construct building D151 at Devonport to store the arisings of ion exchange resin, as this mater falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

The construction work on the building which will accommodate arisings from the ion exchange resin is progressing to programme, under project D151, for handover to Devonport Management Limited early in 1998.

Radium Experiments (Alverstoke)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what data his Department has collated concerning radium experiments on humans at Alverstoke. [18098]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on operational effectiveness of moving from a system of military air traffic control to utilising the system of civilian air traffic control. [18260]

Mr. Soames: The RAF has carried out a thorough assessment, involving practical simulations and managerial studies, of delivering a military air traffic control service using the equipment and associated software designed to be provided for the new en route centre at Swanwick. The assessment determined that the same degree of service in terms of quality and safety could be provided to military aircraft without any loss of operational freedom.

Gulf War (Organophosphate Pesticides)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report specific corrections to each of the previously inaccurate replies relating to the use of organophosphate pesticides during the Gulf war. [18342]

Mr. Soames: I apologised to the House on 10 December last year for the fact that earlier parliamentary questions on this subject had been answered incorrectly. Full details of what is now known about the use of organophosphate pesticides by British service personnel during the Gulf war are contained in the organophosphate pesticide investigation team report which was published on 10 December 1996. A copy of this report was also placed in the Library.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to his Department of aid to the Russian Federation to assist the safe transport and storage of nuclear weapons for each of the last five financial years; and from which subheads of which votes these funds were taken. [18278]

Mr. Soames: UK assistance to the Russian Federation in the context of safe transport and storage of nuclear weapons has comprised two related projects: the supply of heavy duty trucks and the supply of supercontainers. The total costs by year for each of the last five years for these two projects are as follows:

£ million

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Vehicles	1.171	11.358	9.447	2.049	1.653
Containers	0.000	2.75	8.65	0.03	0.007

These costs are charged to Vote 2. Further breakdown by subhead is not held centrally and is not available.

RAF Greenham Common (Radioactive Contamination)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the recent report by the geosciences advisory unit of Southampton oceanography centre relating to alleged radioactive contamination around RAF Greenham Common base. [18340]

Mr. Soames: As this report was issued only very recently, it has not yet been possible to assess in detail all the information it contains. We are, however, pleased to note that the conclusions of this independent study broadly substantiate the findings of the National Radiological Protection Board report which was published in December last year. The results relating to the Greenham Common and Newbury areas must be particularly reassuring to local residents and provide further confirmation that there was no truth in last year's irresponsible allegations of a nuclear weapon accident.

The tentative evidence regarding man-made radioactivity in the immediate environment of AWE Aldermaston must be compared with the extensive environmental survey data held at AWE and published annually before any proposals for yet further work can be considered.

British Military Personnel (Rwanda)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training assistance British military personnel have provided in Rwanda over the past five years. [18474]

Mr. Soames: No training assistance has been provided by British military personnel in Rwanda over the past five years. A member of the Royal Army Medical Corps has, however, provided assistance in 1995 to the independent international commission of inquiry set up at the request of the Government of Rwanda to investigate events surrounding deaths of an unknown number of persons at the Kibeho refugee camp. In addition, a member of the RAF legal services led a seminar sponsored by the UN centre for human rights in February on training the Rwandan army in the human rights aspects of military activity.

European Directives

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work has been carried out or commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) the Adjutant General to assess the impact on the Royal Navy, the Army and the Royal Air Force of (i) the working time directive, (ii) the posting of workers directive, (iii) the parental and family leave directive, (iv) the young workers directive, (v) the burden of proof directive and (vi) the data protection directive. [18369]

Mr. Soames: The Ministry of Defence takes its full part in government consideration of EU legislation. All relevant directives are examined within MOD to assess the potential impact on the armed forces, and the appropriate service authorities contribute fully to the debate. Any proposed EU directives which might affect service personnel policy are routinely referred to the Army's Adjutant General and to his counterparts in the other two services for their views. The parental and family leave directive and the burden of proof directive do not apply to the UK since they are being made under the agreement on social policy. The posting of workers directive does not apply to the armed forces. The working time directive, the young workers directive and the data protection directive are all currently under active consideration within the Department.

HMS Monmouth (Lynx Helicopter)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the loss of the Lynx helicopter from HMS Monmouth off Plymouth on 25 February; and what the helicopter will cost to replace. [18424]

Mr. Soames: HMS Monmouth was exercising in the channel south of the Eddystone light on 25 February, in heavy seas, when the lashing securing her Lynx helicopter to the flight deck broke, causing the aircraft to topple overboard following a sequence of heavy rolls by the ship. The crew of the helicopter, who were aboard the aircraft at the time, were recovered shaken but uninjured. The Royal Navy has begun an inquiry into the incident.

It is intended to salvage the aircraft so that the extent of the damage to it, and the possibility of returning it to service, can be assessed. HMS Monmouth is currently being provided with a replacement Lynx from within the existing aircraft fleet. It is too early to say what further action, if any, will be required to replace the damaged aircraft, or what the costs would be.

New Building (Abbey Wood, Bristol)

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, (1) pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 32, if the new claim for additional payments and extensions for time submitted by the shell and core contractor for his Department's new building at Abbey Wood, Bristol, incorporates the claims referred to in his answer of 24 June 1996, Official Report, column 39; [18502]

(2) what claims for compensation have been made on the basis of the accuracy of the specifications in his Department's documentation for its new building at Abbey Wood, Bristol; [18503]

(3) on how many occasions the shell and core contractor for his Department's new building at Abbey Wood, Bristol, was prevented from progressing because of delays by the client team in approving design change. [18504]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The new claim submitted for additional payment and extensions of time has subsumed that previously submitted by the Abbey Wood shell and core contractor.

Common Security and Defence Policy

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the agreement made between France and Germany at Nuremburg in December 1996 on common security and defence and the relevance of this agreement to NATO obligations. [18587]

Mr. Soames: The agreement is a matter for the French and German Governments, but we note its reaffirmation of the importance of NATO to Europe's stability and security, and its signatories' commitment to strengthen their contribution to the alliance.

German Military Forces

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement describing the current restrictions on the participation of German military forces outside their own borders in consequence of post-war agreements. [18588]

Mr. Soames: Germany is not bound by any post-war treaty in this respect. The basic law lays down that the German armed forces may be used only for defensive purposes. The federal court ruled in July 1994 that this provision was no bar to the deployment of German forces outside Germany. The court did, however, require that any such deployment be approved by the Bundestag in each case. German forces are now deployed to Bosnia as part of NATO's security force.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military sites in the United Kingdom have nuclear waste storage facilities; and what is the total amount of radioactive waste in storage at the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force sites. [15999]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 14 February 1997]: MOD stores radioactive waste in numerous locations throughout the United Kingdom. Details, including predicted future arisings, from the 10 major MOD sites in the United Kingdom, either storing or producing radioactive waste, were published by Nirex in "The 1994 United Kingdom Waste Inventory", a copy of which has been sent to the Library. Other minor items of radioactive waste are stored at various locations prior to disposal; however, it would involve disproportionate cost to provide details of these.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16785]

Mr. Soames: A list of the number of written and oral parliamentary questions answered by Ministers in my Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, has been placed in the Library. Figures for the earlier years requested are not available.

The other information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Deaths

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of each armed service have (a) been killed on active service, (b) been killed in accidents, (c) committed suicide and (d) died of natural causes in each of the last seven years. [17819]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 27 February 1997]: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Paul Altobell to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 4 March 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of personnel serving in the Armed Forces who have died since 1990 as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Defence Analytical Services Agency.

The information you request is detailed in the attached tables. I have listed deaths according to our standard classification system which I hope you will find useful as it gives slightly greater detail than requested in your question. You will also note that as well as giving figures for the last seven years I have included the position for the first three months of this year.

UN Service Medal (Korea)

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons stocks of the United Nations service medal with clasp "Korea" are exhausted; and when further medals will be made available. [17752]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 28 February 1997]: It is normal procedure that claims for the United Nations service medal with clasp "Korea" are passed to the appropriate single service medal office where eligibility may be confirmed following a check of service records. Until recently, stocks were held at the Army medal office. Those stocks were depleted in August 1995 and a request for additional medals was sent to UN headquarters, New York. In late 1996 the UN secretariat informed the United Kingdom mission to the UN that it did not intend to issue any more "Korea" medals, as its stocks were exhausted and no funds were available to purchase more.

Since then, the UN has granted permission to the British Government to purchase and issue the medal. Arrangements to identify a suitable source of supply are in hand. Following the necessary procurement action, eligible claimants will be issued with their medal.

Some 180 eligible British veterans of the Korean war are awaiting their UN medal at this time.

Royal Naval College, Greenwich

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the estimated costs of the conversion of the Royal Naval college at Greenwich to accommodate the joint service command and staff college (a) as set out in the consultation document published by his Department in January 1995 and (b) as subsequently revised, in each case taken over a 25-year period at net present value. [18471]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 3 March 1997]: The 1995 consultative document considered two Greenwich-based options, the difference lying in the number of students on the advanced course. The most relevant of these is the option with 312 students on the advanced course, which had a 25-year net present value of £256 million at September 1993 prices. As the Greenwich option was effectively ruled out at this point, for a variety of reasons including the fact that its costs were 25 per cent. higher than the then preferred Camberley option, no revised costs have been produced. Uplifting the figure by standard defence indices gives an NPV of approximately £290 million at April 1997 prices. Broadly comparable NPV figures for the recently announced preferred Serco/Laing proposal, albeit over a 30-year period and with an advanced course of 327 students, are around £195 million.

ENVIRONMENT

City Challenge

12. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for redeveloping Stockton high street under the city challenge initiative. [17013]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: As my hon. Friend is aware, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport issued our decisions on the planning and associated transport matters relating to Stockton town centre development on 20 February. Those decisions should effectively allow city challenge to proceed with its redevelopment plans.

Recycling Facility (Warndon)

16. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about (a) planning permission for and (b) the licensing of the proposed chemical transfer and oil recycling facility at Warndon, Worcester. [17017]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received some 210 representations on these issues. These are in addition to the petition from the residents of Worcestershire which the hon. Gentleman submitted to the House on 26 November 1996 and on which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State submitted observations on 22 January 1997.

Local Government Finance

17. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the level of local government funding. [17018]

Mr. Curry: The level of local government funding is set at a level which allows efficient local authorities to provide a full range of services, and is in line with overall Government policy on public spending.

19. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he plans to make to the formulae for the standard spending assessment. [17020]

Sir Paul Beresford: None, at present. We shall consider the formulae for 1998–99 later in the year.

Global Warming

18. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representation he has received relating to the impact of Government policies on global warming. [17019]

Mr. Gummer: The hon. Member will be as pleased as I am at the successful outcome of Sunday and Monday's Environment Council. The UK played a central part in that success and we are determined to ensure that the world signs up in Kyoto to substantial reductions in polluting gases.

Litter

20. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to discourage litter. [17021]

Mr. Clappison: The Tidy Britain Group, which is largely funded by my Department, acts as the national litter abatement agency. The group promotes a wide range of campaigns to discourage litter and we have highlighted its role in the Department's current national publicity campaign "Helping your Environment".

Earth Summit

21. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reports the Government will submit to the UN special session in New York in June to review progress on implementing the decisions of the Rio de Janeiro Earth summit. [17022]

Mr. Gummer: A report setting out the United Kingdom's overall progress in implementing Agenda 21 will be presented to the special session. The report will also set out some of the Government's objectives for future action towards achieving sustainable development, and cross-refer to other relevant sources of information about the UK's approach.

Rents-to-mortgages Schemes

22. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the rents-to-mortgages schemes. [17023]

Mr. Clappison: None. Rent-to-mortgage is an option under the highly successful right-to-buy scheme, which has enabled over 1.3 million council tenants in England to buy their home since 1980.

Opencast Mining

23. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will change planning procedures to make it more difficult for opencast coal operators to obtain planning consent. [17024]

Sir Paul Beresford: No. The mineral planning guidance note on opencast coal was fully reviewed and revised in July 1994. There are currently no plans to revise it again.

Council Tax (Essex)

24. Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the level of council tax likely to be levied in Essex in 1997–98. [17025]

Sir Paul Beresford: No such assessment has been made, as it is for local authorities to set their own levels of council tax in their area in the light of local needs and priorities.

Local Authority Housing

25. Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his plans for the transfer of local authority housing. [17026]

Mr. Curry: Transfer is an excellent way of increasing investment in the local authority stock and the Government have therefore recently introduced a package of measures aimed at encouraging local authorities to transfer more of their stock to registered social landlords. We have also announced our intention to use the housing investment programme to encourage local authorities to consider how they can best use transfer to meet the need for investment in their stock and thus also make best use of the limited public funds available for housing.

28. Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his current estimate of the numbers of dwellings in local authority ownership which could be transferred to different ownership through large-scale voluntary transfer. [17029]

Mr. Curry: With the new package of measures announced by the Government last autumn to encourage stock transfer, we expect the level of transfer to increase significantly. Taken together with sales to individuals, we currently anticipate a reduction in local authority stock of just over 1 million homes or around 30 per cent. in the next 10 years.

Air Pollution

26. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about air pollution. [17027]

Mr. Clappison: The Environment Act 1995 set up the legislative framework for a national strategy for air quality and for action by local authorities to assess and manage air quality. The strategy, which will be published shortly, will set out air quality standards and objectives, and will outline the measures which will be taken at international, national and local level in order to meet those objectives.

27. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding air pollution. [17028]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has received 420 representations, from members of the public, business, local authorities and other bodies, in response to consultation on the draft national strategy for air quality, which the Government are preparing in accordance with the Environment Act 1995.

Council House Sales

29. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants since May 1979. [17030]

Mr. Clappison: Over 1.48 million tenants purchased their homes from English local authorities and new towns between April 1979 and September 1996.

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16796]

Sir Paul Beresford: A list of the number of written and oral PQs answered by my Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, is given. This information is also available in the House Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available.

Year	Written	Oral
1982–83	1,457	367
1983–84	4,181	626
1984–85	3,328	370
1985–86	3,624	415
1986–87	2,355	290
1987–88	5,214	554
1988–89	4,911	423
1989–90	5,947	369
1990–91	3,233	367
1991–92	1,513	182
1992–93	5,029	541
1993–94	3,301	377
1994–95	2,970	405
1995–96	2,481	317

Providing the number of instances in each year that questions have been given a reply of disproportionate cost or that the information was not held centrally would themselves involve disproportionate cost.

Household Waste-derived Compost

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the report on the potential markets for household waste-derived compost to be published; and to whom he plans to circulate it. [17714]

Mr. Gummer: The report, entitled "Markets and Quality Requirements for composts and Digestates from the Organic Fraction of Household Wastes", has been prepared under a research contract now managed by the Environment Agency. It was made public in January; and priced copies will be available in March, reference number CWM 147/96, from the Waste Management Information Bureau, AEA Technology plc, F6 Culham, Oxfordshire OX14 3DB, telephone number 01235 463162. Complimentary copies are due to be sent to the Environment Select Committee, the British library, the Composting Association, the National Composting Development Association, the Institute of Waste Management, the Environmental Services Association, the Chartered Institute of Water and Environmental Management and the specialist press. My Department promoted the report at the Composting Association's annual conference in November 1996 and will be doing so again at a National Composting Development Association conference in March 1997.

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the legislation for which his Department has been responsible which affects (a) local government finance and (b) local government responsibilities since June 1979. [18149]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department has been responsible for the primary legislation listed in the years since 1979. Only Acts affecting the general responsibilities of local government are shown. Some of the Acts are private Members' legislation.

(a) local government finance

Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980

Local Government Finance Act 1982

Rates Act 1984

Rates Support Grant Act 1986

Local Government Finance Act 1987

Local Government Act 1987

Rates Support Grant Act 1987

Local Government Finance Act 1988

Rates Support Grant Act 1988

Local Government and Housing Act 1989

Caravans (Standard Community Charge and Rating) Act 1991

Community Charges (Substitute Setting) Act 1991

Community Charges (General Reduction) Act 1991

Local Government Finance and Valuation Act 1991

Local Government Finance Act 1992

Non-Domestic Rating Act 1992

Non-Domestic Rating Act 1993

Non-Domestic Rating Act 1994

Non-Domestic Rating (Information) Act 1996

Rating (Caravans and Boats) Act 1996.

(b) local government

Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980

Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982

Local Authorities (Expenditure Powers) Act 1983

Local Government (Interim Provisions) Act 1984

Local Government (Access to Information) Act 1985

Local Government Act 1985

Local Government Act 1986

Local Government Act 1988

Local Government and Housing Act 1989

Local Government Finance (Publicity for Auditors Reports) Act 1991

Local Government Act 1992

Local Government (Overseas Assistance) Act 1993

Audit (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1996

Rivers (Water Abstraction)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many rivers in England and Wales have been identified as suffering from low flow due to over-abstraction; what percentage of those identified have had (a) short-term and (b) long-term solutions implemented to restore their natural flow; and if he will make a statement. [18015]

Mr. Clappison: In 1990–91 the National Rivers Authority identified in England and Wales a total of 335 km of reaches in 40 rivers as having low flows and affected by water abstraction. Of those 40, nine have fully implemented solutions, nine have solutions in progress, eight have solutions identified, six continue to be investigated and eight have been found not to have problems due to abstraction. By March 1996, the total length of the affected reaches had been reduced by 207 km. The Environment Agency has targets to reduce this by a further 106 km by March 1999.

Waltham Forest

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what bids into the single regeneration budget from the London borough of Waltham Forest have been successful in each year since the SRB was established. [18081]

Sir Paul Beresford: Since the single regeneration budget was introduced the London borough of Waltham Forest has attracted funding for the following bids:

1995–96: South Leytonstone Community Partnership Lea Bridge - A Gateway to Opportunity.

1996–97: Towards Employability - A Strategy for Schools in Waltham Forest.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the expenditure of the Waltham Forest housing action trust in each year since it was set up; and what is its expected final total spending. [18080]

Sir Paul Beresford: Waltham Forest housing action trust has received grant in aid as follows:

1991–92: £0.5 million

1992–93: £11.8 million

1993–94: £25.0 million

1994–95: £36.7 million

1995–96: £34.0 million

1996–97: £20.9 million (Estimate)

Waltham Forest HAT has been asked to base its future plans on a total lifetime grant in aid figure not exceeding £227 million.

Landfill Applications

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he issues on the requirement of a planning authority to consider (a) the risk of water pollution and (b) the impact from increased traffic on surrounding communities, before granting permission to a planning application for a landfill facility. [18094]

Sir Paul Beresford: Planning guidance in respect of waste disposal, including landfill, is contained in planning policy guidance note 23 "Planning and Pollution Control". This guidance is being revised in stages and the first part, to be published later this year, will deal with waste management. Attention is drawn to the need to consider the risks of water pollution and the effects of traffic in both the original PPG and the revision.

Local Authority Employees

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in rank order the number of employees for each local authority per 1,000 of the resident population for the most recent three years for which figures are available. [18097]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have today placed the information for 1995 and 1996 in the Library of the House.

The figures are taken from the "Joint Staffing Watch". The survey was reviewed in 1994 and from 1995 onwards a revised survey form was introduced which included a different service analysis, introduced figures for whole-time equivalent employment, and introduced new guidelines on the recording of part time staff. As a result of these changes, it is not possible to provide comparable figures for 1994.

The levels of employment in individual authorities are not directly comparable because of variations in population structure, social characteristics and the extent to which they use private firms and contractors or act as agents for other authorities.

Nitrogen Oxide Emissions

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the change in nitrogen oxide emission levels over the last 20 years; and if he will make a statement. [18016]

Mr. Clappison: Emissions for nitrogen oxides were 2,206 kilotonnes and 2,218 kilotonnes for 1974 and 1994 respectively. Emissions of nitrogen oxide peaked in 1989 at 2,728 kilotonnes. The 1994 figure represents a 19 per cent. reduction on the 1989 peak. Further information can be found in the Department of the Environment's "Digest of Environmental Statistics 1996", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Timber

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of timber used in the United Kingdom came from certified sustainable sources in each year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [18018]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not available.

The Government are exploring ways in which voluntary certification of timber could both reflect and encourage sustainable forest management, and support the recently agreed proposals for action on this set out in the final report of the UN Commission on Sustainable Development's intergovernmental panel on forests. The Government will now be pressing for effective international action to implement the IPF's proposals.

Single Regeneration Budget (Lancashire)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what bids into the single regeneration budget from local authorities and others within the county of Lancashire have (a) been submitted and (b) been approved in each year of the budget's existence. [18435]

Sir Paul Beresford: Over the three annual rounds of the single regeneration budget, the following number of bids have been received from local authorities and others in Lancashire:

	Outline	Encouraged	Approved
Round I	34	9	5
Round II	32	8	4
Round III	12	7	6

First Aid Staff (Schools)

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the statutory requirements regarding the number of qualified first aid staff in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools. [18392]

Sir Paul Beresford: Schools, like all workplaces, are required by the Health and Safety (First-Aid) Regulations 1981 to make first aid provision for their employees.

Although school pupils as non-employees are not covered by these requirements, the guidance covering the regulations recognises that employers will wish to make provision for them.

Additionally, guidance from the Department for Education and Employment and the Welsh Office describes the common law responsibilities of schools "in loco parentis". The guidance suggests that combined provision for both employees and students is sensible when employers are making their assessment of the number of first-aiders required.

Noise Pollution

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department is currently undertaking into noise pollution; and if he will make a statement. [17371]

Mr. Clappison: My Department is currently funding the following noise research work:

Domestic noise complaints as seen by local authorities and those complained of.

Noise climate assessment: a review of national and European practices.

Clay target shooting: establishment of noise measurement methodology.

Review of the take-up of the new night noise offence in the Noise Act 1996—phase 1: survey of local authority practice in dealing with domestic night noise complaints as at October 1996 to provide a baseline for studying the take-up and workings of the new offence.

Technical advice to the Department on acoustic issues.

Housing (Disabled People)

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the Government's proposals of 12 January 1995 to bring house building regulations into line with those for public and commercial buildings in respect of access for disabled people. [17898]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Given the large number of replies to the consultation, work on analysing them has only just been completed. Further work is being undertaken on the cost of complying with the proposals. The results from this will then be considered by the Building Regulations Advisory Committee, along with the analysis of the responses to the consultation, prior to officials making recommendations to Ministers. Given the uncertainty of the timing of the outstanding work, it is difficult to give a firm commitment, but I hope that it will be possible to take a statement in the early summer.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes have been built since the Government's proposals for access for disabled people to new housing were published on 12 January 1995; how many of them are accessible to disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [17897]

Mr. Jones: Estimates of housebuilding for chronically sick and disabled persons are shown in the publication "Housing and Construction Statistics". Figures for January 1995 to September 1996 can be found in the September quarter 1996 part 1 edition. Copies of this publication are in the Library.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations his Department has received from organisations of and for disabled people on access for disabled people to new housing; what replies he has made; what action he is taking in response to the representations; and if he will make a statement. [17899]

Mr. Jones: There have been 64 letters received since the beginning of this year regarding the extension of part M of the building regulations to dwellings. The letters have come from five individuals and 42 disability organisations, some of which have written more than once. Ministers have replied to 31 of the letters, and officials in my Department have responded to the rest on our behalf. All the replies have indicated the progress that has been made with the analysis of the consultation that was issued concerning this matter, and have indicated that further work is in hand examining the costs of implementing the proposals.

Water Companies

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total indicative value of the water and sewerage companies calculated by his Department at the time of privatisation. [18581]

Mr. Clappison: The total indicative value of the 10 water and sewerage companies calculated at the time of privatisation was £15.2 billion.

Refuse Collection (Barnet)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the response of the council of the London borough of Barnet to the notice served on it on 21 November 1996 in respect of its decision to assign refuse collection work to its direct service organisation. [18865]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has considered the response made by the authority on 18 December. He has today given a direction to the authority because it still appears to him that the authority acted in an anti-competitive manner in assigning work to its direct service organisation. He took this view because of the way in which the authority had reached its decision to assign the work. The effect of the direction is that the authority must retender the work immediately and seek consent if it wishes to continue to carry out the work in-house.

Hedgerows

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the result of the Government's consultation on the draft hedgerows regulations. [18921]

Mr. Clappison: The Government yesterday laid in both Houses draft hedgerows regulations, revised in the light of responses to the public consultation.

Copies of the report on the analysis of the responses to the consultation have been placed in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hunger Strikers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what independent medical assessment (a) is allowed and (b) has been made of the condition of the hunger strikers at Rochester prison or moved from Rochester prison; [18473]

(2) if he will make a statement on the medical condition of (a) Mr. Naser Lechibi and (b) the other hunger strikers at Rochester prison or moved from Rochester prison. [18472]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 4 March 1997]: No immigration detainees at Rochester are currently refusing food. Those who do so are taken to an outside hospital if their condition gives cause for concern. Detainees who persist in food refusal clearly take risks with their health: medical records are confidential, but none of those who took part in the recent protest is currently assessed as giving cause for medical concern.

Taylor Inquiry

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if evidence from Dr. Ed Walker was offered to the Taylor inquiry into the Hillsborough disaster; for what reasons he was not called to give oral evidence; and if he will make a statement. [18500]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 4 March 1997]: Dr. Walker did not give evidence to the Taylor inquiry into the Hillsborough disaster. The inquiry was concerned with the events at the Hillsborough stadium. The precise circumstances in which the victims died were matters for the coroner's inquest. A statement given by Dr. Walker to police on 20 July 1989 was made available to the coroner's inquest.

Child Prostitution

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the penalties for those who entice children into prostitution. [18492]

Mr. Maclean: The Government announced on 16 January that it had decided to carry out a review of existing maximum penalties for sex offences. This will include the offence of causing or encouraging the prostitution of a girl under 16. The purpose of the review will be to identify any anomalies in existing penalties, and to ensure that penalties properly reflect the comparative gravity of existing offences.

Telephone Interceptions

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received calling for interceptions of telephone conversations involving alleged criminals to be usable as evidence in criminal trials; and if he will make a statement. [18448]

Mr. Howard: The right hon. Lord Lloyd of Berwick has raised the issue on a number of occasions, including at chapter 7 of the report of his inquiry into legislation against terrorism, where he recommended that section 9 of the Interception of Communications Act 1985 be amended so as to allow the prosecution to adduce intercepted material in cases affecting national security. That recommendation is under consideration. The views of the law enforcement, security and intelligence agencies have been sought by my Department. Otherwise, I am aware of no recent representations on the subject.

Knives

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people (a) aged under 18 years and (b) in total were (i) arrested for, (ii) cautioned for, (iii) charged with and convicted of offences relating to knives in north Yorkshire in each of the last five years; [18261]

(2) how many people (a) from York, (b) from north Yorkshire and (c) nationally were convicted of offences relating to knives carried out by (i) persons of all ages and (ii) persons aged under 18 years at the time of the offence in each of the last three years. [18262]

Mr. Maclean: Detailed data of the number of people arrested and charged are not collected centrally.

Information available on the number of people cautioned, prosecuted and convicted from 1991 to 1995 is given in the tables. 1996 data will not be available until the autumn.

Mrs. Ganiat Lasoye (Deportation Order)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will review the deportation order served on Mrs. Ganiat Lasoye; [18223]

(2) if he will reverse the deportation order on Mrs. Ganiat Lasoye; what professional advice and from which (a) bodies and (b) individuals he assessed prior to the decision to deport her; what assessment he has made of the adequacy of procedures followed in taking the decision to deport her; and if he will make a statement. [18245]

Mr. Kirkhope: I am satisfied that the original deportation decision was properly based. However, in view of the exceptional compassionate circumstances, we have concluded that deportation action should not now be taken.

Prison Staff Ratios

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current average staff to prisoner ratio in category C prisons. [17973]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 5 March 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the current staff to prisoner ratio in category C prisons.

There are 12,840 prisoners held in dedicated category C training prisons, including Buckley Hall prison which is managed by Group 4.

The requested provisional information is shown below.

Prisoners	Staff	Ratio
12,840	9,842	1:1.3

Inquest Proceedings (Oxford)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the inquest, about which the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden has written to the Oxford coroner, Nicholas Gardiner, to be reconvened; and if he will make a statement. [18103]

Mr. Sackville: The date for the resumption of the inquest is a matter for the Oxfordshire coroner to decide. I understand that he hopes to list the case for hearing in early April.

American Prison Ship (Purchase)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a contract has been agreed to purchase the American prison ship Resolution. [17974]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. George Howarth, dated 5 March 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the prison ship "Resolution".

The Prison Service has bought a floating prison, the "Resolution" (now renamed the "Weare"). The contract for the purchase of the vessel was ratified on 31 January.

TRANSPORT

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish by region the residual life remaining in those parts of the trunk road network in England, including bridges, classified as condition orange and condition red for traffic congestion according to the maps produced by the national roads network assessment system for (a) 1995, (b) 2005 and (c) 2015. [17704]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 26 February 1997]: Residual life provides a measure of the remaining strength of a road in terms of the number of years of forecast traffic loading it is estimated to be able to carry before strengthening should be considered. Even at the stage of zero residual life, the road will perform quite satisfactorily for an indeterminate period—generally some years—but with the expectation of increasing levels of minor repair works.

The condition of the trunk road network is good, the percentage of the motorway network having less than zero residual life being only 3.9 per cent. and for all-purpose trunk roads only 7.3 per cent. These percentages are within the target of 7 to 8 per cent. set by the PAC in 1991 to be achieved by the year 2000 and demonstrate the success of recent investment in the national network.

The same concept of defining residual life cannot be applied to bridges or other structures. They have much longer nominal lives before strengthening may be required and the deterioration process is quite different.

The following six tables indicate the residual life by region in 1995 of those parts of the road network classified as orange or red based on high growth forecasts for traffic levels.

Annex A: Residual life of those parts of the trunk road network classified as condition orange in 1995

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish by region the maintenance planned by the Highways Agency for those parts of the trunk road network in England, including bridges, classified as condition orange and condition red for traffic congestion according to the maps produced by the national roads network assessment system for (a) 1995, (b) 2005 and (c) 2015. [17705]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 26 February 1997]: The Highways Agency's plans for future maintenance of the trunk road network have not yet been finalised.

M45 (Litter)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which body is responsible for collecting litter on the M45; and when it was last collected. [17313]

Mr. Watts: Responsibility for litter clearance on the M45 lies with the Highways Agency, which has instructed its maintenance agents to clear litter as necessary to meet the obligations imposed by the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The last general litter clearance on the M45 was carried out in March 1996.

Ferry Safety

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the regulations which apply to roll-on roll-off ferries with regard to the ration of (a) lifeboats and (b) lifejackets required to the number of passengers aboard. [18685]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 4 March 1997]: For vessels built before 1 July 1986, the relevant regulations are regulations 4 and 5 of the Merchant Shipping (Life-Saving Appliances) Regulations 1980, SI No. 1980/538.

For vessels built on or after 1 July 1986, the relevant regulation is regulation 5 of the Merchant Shipping (Life-Saving Appliances) Regulations 1986, SI No. 1986/1066.

Overloaded Aircraft

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 70, if he will estimate the cost of answering the question of how many aircraft have been found to be overloaded in each of the past two years. [18651]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The Civil Aviation Authority audits UK airlines to ensure that their aircraft are operated within the limitations of their performance, including those limitations associated with aircraft weight. Reports of these audits are placed on the file of the relevant air operator's certificate holder.

The number of incidents of overloading can therefore be obtained only by manual examination of the individual reports of each inspection carried out in the last 24 months on aircraft operated by the 230 UK holders of air operators' certificates. In this case, the hon. Member's question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Coastguard Service

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are his plans for staff levels at the Liverpool Coastguard station; [18635]

(2) what are his plans for the future of the Oban (Scotland) Coastguard station; [18630]

(3) what are his plans for the future of the Pentland (Orkney) Coastguard station; [18632]

(4) what are his plans for the future of Tyne Tees (Tynemouth) Coastguard station; [18636]

(5) for what reason the Oban Coastguard station (Scotland) was left out from that part of the "Focus for Change" review which will exclude the station from officers with enhanced grading; [18631]

(6) if he will make a statement on the treatment of (a) Pentland (Orkney) (b) Liverpool and (c) Tyne Tees (Tynemouth) Coastguard stations under the "Focus for Change review with particular reference to the issue of officers with enhanced grading. [18633]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 4 March 1997]: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer that I gave on 4 February, Official Report, column 574. The strategy for HM Coastguard is still under development and its effect on the future staffing levels of any rescue centre cannot yet be assessed. Meanwhile, under present arrangements for the implementation of "Focus for Change", 17 rescue centres will have watches headed by the new higher grade watch managers. Pentland, Tyne Tees, Liverpool and Oban will be considered at a later date.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the 1995–96 annual report of the Coastguard agency; and if he will make a statement. [18560]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 5 March 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about The Coastguard Agency 1995–96 Annual Report.

The report is with the printers and will be published shortly. Copies will then be placed in the House Library.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of (a) sector stations and (b) sector station officers in the Coastguard agency for each of the last seven years; and what are his projections for the number of sector stations in each of the next five years. [18634]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 4 March 1997]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 5 March 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of sector stations and sector officers in the Coastguard Agency for each of the last five years and projected figures for number of sector stations in the next five years.

	(a) Sector Bases	(b) Sector Officers

31 December 1994	85	92
31 December 1995	81	92
31 December 1996	79	81

Projections for the number of sector bases for each of the next five years: 64.

Railtrack Debts

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures his Department took to write off the debts of Railtrack; and if he will indicate the amounts involved. [18679]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The outstanding capital debt of Railtrack owed to the national loans fund, amounting to £1,229 million, was extinguished by the Railways Act 1993 (Extinguishment of Loans) (Railtrack plc) Order 1996 on 29 March 1996. On that day, £585 million of new debt owed to HM Treasury was created. Part of the £585 million was repaid immediately; the remainder was sold on as bonds in July 1996, after Railtrack was privatised. The company's capital structure was determined with the objective of maximising the overall value of the flotation.

Marine Pollution

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many illegal discharges from ships were reported in each year since 1990, indicating in each case the location; how many resulted in a successful prosecution; and what was the fine imposed. [18559]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Chris Harris to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 5 March 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about illegal discharges from ships which have been reported since 1990.

Details of illegal discharges are published by the Advisory Committee on Protection of the Sea (ACOPS) in their annual survey of oil pollution around the coasts of the United Kingdom. The information includes an overall summary of prosecutions together with the level of fines imposed.

Copies of ACOPS reports are available in the House of Commons library up to and including 1995. The report for 1996 is still being compiled.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 64, on what date he received the submission of the Association of District Councils for his consultations on the introduction of 44-tonne lorries; and for what reason the Association of District Councils was not included in his original answer. [18599]

Mr. Watts: The hon. Member's question to which my answer appeared in the Official Report on 10 February was originally due for answer on 31 January and the information in the answer included the responses received by that date. The response from the Association of District Councils was not received until 3 February. I regret that the answer was not fully up to date when published.

Regional Railways

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his current estimate of the annual subsidy which will be paid to each of the regional railway franchisees for 1997–98. [16617]

Mr. Watts: The Office of Passenger Rail Franchise's latest estimates of the grant support to be paid in 1997–98 to the franchisees that make up the previous regional railways sector British Rail are given in the table, together with the comparative British Rail grant claim for 1996–97. Both sets of figures comprise the annual support for passenger rail services grant paid by the franchising director and the financial support provided to train operators by passenger transport executives.

	1996–97 grant claim £ million	1997–98 estimated payments £ million
South Wales and West	84.8	70.9
Merseyrail	84.1	80.7
North West Regional Railways	191.9	184.9

ScotRail	292.3	280.1

TREASURY

Price Indices

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the main price indices used in each EU member state; and what assessment he has made of their (a) basis, (b) data collection procedures and (c) methods of calculation relative to those used in the United Kingdom. [17356]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Shaw, dated 5 March 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the main price indices used in each EU Member State; and what assessment has been made on their basis, data collection procedures and methods of calculation relative to those used in the United Kingdom.

All EU Member States produce a consumer price index (CPI) based on the expenditure patterns of consumers in their country for national purposes. The last study of EU national prices indices was carried out by Rudolf Teekens of the Institute of Social Studies in the 1989 Eurostat, the Statistical Office of the European Communities, publication Consumer Price Indices in the EC—Similarities, Differences and Proposals for Harmonisation, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library. A table from the report listing the main prices indices for each country is attached. This is the latest information available but it is possible that the situation has changed since the report was produced.

In addition to nation price indices the EU Member States have been working with Eurostat for over three years to produce harmonised measures of inflation expressly for the purposes of comparisons across Member States. This has involved assessment of the basis of the indices, the data collection procedures and the method of calculation in each country.

These harmonised inflation figures will be used to inform decisions on which Member States meet the conditions to participate in EMU under Article 109j of the Treaty on European Union. However, they are not intended to replace existing national CPIs. The RPI remains the best indicator of UK consumer price inflation.

This programme of harmonisation has lead to the production of Harmonised indices of consumer prices (HICP) by each Member State, Norway and Iceland. The first figures for all 15 Member States will be published by the EC on 7 March 1997. The figures for the UK were published by ONS on 26 February 1997.

Income Tax

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage to total Government revenue is accounted for by income tax. [18145]

Mr. Jack: Income tax accounted for 25¼ per cent. of all general Government receipts in 1995–96. The Budget forecast this percentage falling to 24 per cent. in 1997–98, reflecting the 1995 and 1996 Budget reductions in income tax.

Employee Share Ownership Schemes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many statutory employee share ownership trusts have been notified to the Inland Revenue in each year since 1990; [17979]

(2) how many (a) firms and (b) employees participate in the employee share ownership plans currently known to the Inland Revenue. [17978]

Mr. Jack: Statutory employee share ownership trusts—ESOTs—do not require formal advanced approval from, or registration by, the Inland Revenue. The Revenue is, however, prepared to say whether a particular draft or executed trust deed meets the statutory ESOT conditions. Not all companies will see a need to clear a trust deed in advance; and companies clearing deeds are not required to state the number of employees prospectively covered by them. The number of statutory ESOTs cleared by the Revenue since 1990 is in the table. Information about the number of firms and participating employees in all forms of employee share ownership plan is not available.

	Number of statutory ESOTs
1990–91	6
1991–92	5
1992–93	3
1993–94	2
1994–95	6
1995–96	2
1996–97[1]	27

[1] To end February 1997.

Europe Community (UK Contribution)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will express the United Kingdom's gross contribution to the EC in 1995–96 as a proportion of the revenue from the standard rate of income tax for the same period. [18084]

Mr. Oppenheim: In financial year 1995–96 the UK's total gross contribution to the European Community budget after abatement was £7,635 million. This was equivalent to 17.5 per cent. of revenue from the basic rate of income tax in that year of £43,600 million. However, the UK's contribution to the European Community is, of course, funded by total general Government receipts. In 1995–96 our gross contribution to the Community was equivalent to 2.8 per cent. of the total of £269,200 million.

Inflation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the reliability of the governor of the Bank of England's forecasts of the rate of inflation. [18398]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Bank published in its February 1996 inflation report an assessment of its forecasting record since it began publishing the inflation report in February 1993.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account he took of the potential impact of increases in costs outside the UK's control in setting his inflation target. [18397]

Mrs. Knight: The Chancellor took full account of this, and other factors, in setting the inflation target of 2½ per cent. or less. As he said in his 1995 Mansion house speech, events outside our control, such as sharp movements in commodity prices, could temporarily take us away from the objective. But setting interest rates consistently at the level judged necessary to achieve the inflation target should ensure that inflation will remain in the range 1 to 4 per cent. Since the Government started setting an explicit target for inflation, underlying inflation has averaged 2.6 per cent.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has taken to monitor the accuracy and reliability of his method of calculating inflation. [18399]

Mrs. Knight: The Government's target for inflation is set in terms of underlying inflation—the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments. The RPI, which is compiled from a total of 120,000 prices collected each month from 146 locations throughout the UK is determined by recommendations of the Retail Prices Index Advisory Committee. The Office for National Statistics, which compiles and publishes the RPI, has in place a number of checks to ensure the accuracy and reliability of the index including auditing of monthly price collection, and regular updating of its coverage.

Pneumonia Deaths

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of recorded deaths from pneumonia in each region for the month of January in each year since 1990 to date. [18284]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 5 March 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to reply to your recent question asking what was the number of recorded deaths from pneumonia in each region for the month of January in each year since 1990 to date.

The following tables show the number of deaths certified as due to pneumonia (ICD[1] 480–486) that occurred in January to (a) residents of each regional health authority from 1990 to 1995 and (b) residents of each regional office area from 1996 to 1997. Please note that the figures for 1996 and 1997 are provisional

[2] New procedures for coding cause of death from 1993 mean that figures for pneumonia from 1993 onwards are not comparable with those in earlier years. The increase due to the new coding practice is about 50 per cent. More details can be found in ONS Series DH2, no.21, Mortality statistics: cause, 1993 (revised) and 1994 (published in 1996), copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

Crude Oil Prices

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each of the last five years for which figures are available the (a) average (b) highest and (c) lowest prices of crude oil during each year. [18512]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The information requested is available in the "International Financial Statistics" publication of the International Monetary Fund. Oil prices can be found in the "Commodity Prices" tables, which is on page 84 of the February edition of the monthly report, with annual data also available in the yearbook.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the (a) number and (b) value of PFI contracts which have been agreed in the last financial year for which figures are available; what were the total annual payments to be made in respect of those contracts; and what will be the total value of the payments made over the life of the contracts. [18582]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, annual PFI data showing historic and forecast capital investment is published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report, tables 5.4 and 5.5. This was supplemented by my answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East (Mr. Timms) on 10 December 1996, Official Report, columns 125–26. Table 5.6 shows aggregated estimates of revenue commitments for signed projects, up to the year 2024–25. A list of major agreed projects as of 26 November 1996, and their capital value, was placed in the House of Commons Library in response to a further parliamentary question from the hon. Member for Newham, North-East on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 510–11. This will be updated on a quarterly basis, with the next list due to be placed in the library at the end of March. The total number of PFI deals is not held centrally.

Local Authority Borrowing

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the quotas for lending to local authorities by the Public Works Loan Board. [19201]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Public Works Loan Commissioners have issued a circular today notifying local authorities that there will be no change in the formula for calculating quotas for 1997–98.

Copies of the circular have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Anglo-French Peacekeeping Missions

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions, since Britain joined the European Community, British and French forces have been on active service jointly in a conflict or peacekeeping role; and in which countries these actions took place. [18434]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Since 1973, UK and French armed forces have served jointly in one conflict—the Gulf war—and in the following peacekeeping operations: UNAVEM III, UN Angola verification mission; MINURSO, UN mission for the referendum in Western Sahara; UNAMIC, UN advanced mission in Cambodia; UNTAC, UN transitional authority in Cambodia; UNPROFOR, UN protection force in former Yugoslavia; UNCRO, UN confidence restoration mission in Croatia; UNPREDEP, UN preventive deployment force, Macedonia; UNTAES, UN transitional administration for Eastern Slavonia, Baranja and Western Sirmium, Croatia; UNMOP, UN mission of observers in Prevlaka, Croatia; UNOMIG, UN Observers mission in Georgia; and UNIKOM, UN Iraq/Kuwait observation mission.

Earth Summit II

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what preparations his Department is making for Earth summit II and for the preparatory conferences leading up to the summit. [18498]

Dr. Liam Fox: This Department will play its full part, with other Government Departments, at the intersessional meeting of the Commission on Sustainable Development being held in New York between 24 February and 7 March, at the fifth meeting of the CSD in New York between 7 and 25 April, and at the UN General Assembly special session in New York between 23 and 27 June. The UK aim is to ensure a successful review of progress since Rio and the setting of priorities for the years ahead. FCO officials from both the diplomatic and aid wings will form part of the UK delegations to these meetings. Our missions overseas, including the UK missions to the UN, will continue to promote UK objectives and priorities for sustainable development. The aid wing has also provided some financial support to help non-governmental organisations in developing countries to prepare for and attend these meetings.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16795]

Mr. Freeman: A list of the number of written and oral questions answered by the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service, in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the parliamentary on-line information service unit, has been placed in the House Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available.

The other information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Breakfast Tours

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who has been responsible for organising the business breakfast to be held in Carlisle on 10 March; at whose request the meeting was arranged; what is the estimated cost; and which Government Department will bear the costs. [18421]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 March 1997]: The Carlisle business breakfast has been cancelled.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) of 24 February, Official Report, column 64, if he will list for each event the organisation responsible for organising the business breakfast; and at whose request it was arranged. [18422]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 March 1997]: I have asked the relevant Government office to arrange each of the business breakfasts.

European Union Funding

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what EU regional aid has been secured for (a) Blyth Valley and (b) the north-east of England in each of the last two years. [18575]

Mr. Greg Knight: Funding to the value of £4,143,902 has been secured from EU structural funds specifically for the Blyth Valley area in the last two years. In addition, a further £3,990,327 has been gained for projects covering the wider south-east Northumberland area; mostly in the form of business support measures funded from European regional development fund and training activities funded through the European social fund. Other region-wide projects will also provide benefits for the Blyth Valley area.

The total amount of EU structural funds secured for the north-east of England in the last two years is approximately £235 million. This includes the objective 2 and 5b programmes as well as various Community initiatives which operate in specified parts of the region. The north-east also benefits from a share of the national objective 3 programme which provides training and counselling for the unemployed. In addition, the north-east of England will continue to benefit from objective 2 funding until 2001, and a programme worth approximately £290 million received in principle agreement from the European Commission on 27 February 1997.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make representations to the European Union to ensure that on all occasions it promptly pays United Kingdom companies which are involved in EU-financed projects. [18612]

Mr. Nelson: The Government take the late payment of commercial debts very seriously and is prepared to make representations to the European Commission about individual cases. The Department is ready to follow up the case which my hon. Friend previously brought to my attention as soon as the company concerned provides the further information that my officials requested from it.

Airbus

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Woking (Sir C. Onslow) of 18 February, Official Report, column 483, what is the expected level of repayments in 1998 and in subsequent years in respect of the launch aid support given to the Airbus A330/340 aircraft. [17372]

Mr. Greg Knight: Forecast repayments are calculated on the basis of expected sales. These underlying assumptions are considered to be commercially confidential.

Timber Exports

Mr Pawsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the value of timber exports from the United Kingdom. [17338]

Mr. Nelson: UK exports of timber amounted to £38 million in 1995, and £45 million in January to November 1996.

Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Institute of Food Research by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18191]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Data on numbers of scientists employed on Government-funded projects at the Institute of Food Research is not readily available. However, in 1995–96, a total of 316 scientist—staff in post—were employed at IFR, and Government-funded projects accounted for approximately 79 per cent. of IFR funding: 46 per cent. from the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, 28 per cent. from MAFF and 5 per cent. from other Government users. Comparable funding data is not available for the earlier years.

Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total research and development expenditure by the Office of Science and Technology for each year from 1980 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [18665]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The Office of Science and Technology was established in 1992. The total annual expenditure by OST on research and development since that time is as follows:

£ million

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Cash	1,008.8	1,134.9	1,173.5	1,249.9	1,261.8
1996–97 prices	1,109.2	1,212.8	1,232.1	1,281.1	1,261.8

[1] Estimated outturn.

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total research and development expenditure by the Office of Science and Technology on food and agricultural science for each year from 1980 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [18667]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1997]: Science budget expenditure on research is managed by the research councils. Research in food and agricultural science is funded principally by the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council—formerly the Agriculture and Food Research Council. The Medical Research Council also funds some relevant research, figures for which are readily available only for 1994–95 and 1995–96. The figures for spending are in the table.

Year	Cash	Constant prices (1995–96=100)
1980–81	34,477	81,265
1981–82	41,934	82,910
1982–83	43,624	80,517
1983–84	45,840	80,856
1984–85	46,680	78,398
1985–86	52,725	83,950
1986–87	57,149	88,329
1987–88	54,896	80,558
1988–89	61,112	84,055
1989–90	74,311	95,536
1990–91	85,905	102,275
1991–92	96,271	107,717
1992–93	107,294	115,196
1993–94	109,359	114,113
1994–95	126,477	129,446
1995–96	135,715	135,715

In addition, the Natural Environment Research Council and the Economic and Social Research Council are involved in joint funding of some relevant research; NERC-funded research in the areas of terrestrial and freshwater sciences and the impact of agriculture on the environment includes research relevant to the agricultural sciences.

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total Government research and development expenditure by each Department for each year from 1980 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [18666]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1997]: Reliable information is not available before 1984–85. For the years from 1985–86, I refer the hon. Member to tables D.3 and D.4 in "Forward Look of Government Funded Science, Engineering and Technology 1996", for years 1985–86 to 1998–99, and for 1984–85 to tables 1.3.1 and 1.3.2 of the "Forward Look of Government Funded SET 1994". Copies of both documents are available in the Library of the House.

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research and development facilities have been privatised since 1980; and if he will list for each year since 1980 the changes in the number of (a) employees and (b) scientists employed in those establishments. [18668]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The following research and development facilities have been privatised since 1980 in order to increase their scope and ability to offer services to a wider user community:

The Hydraulic Research Station was converted to an independent company limited by guarantee in 1982.

The National Maritime Institute, formerly part of the National Physical Laboratory, was privatised as a company limited by guarantee in October 1982.

The plant breeding activities of the Agricultural and Food Research Council's plant breeding institute were privatised by trade sale in October 1987, but the establishment itself remained in the public sector as part of the AFRC's institute of plant science research.

The National Measurement Accreditation Service, formerly part of the National Physical Laboratory, was merged with the National Accreditation Council for Certification Bodies, formerly part of the British Standards Institution, in August 1995 to form the United Kingdom Accreditation Service, which was established as a non-profit distribution company limited by guarantee.

The National Engineering Laboratory was privatised by trade sale in October 1995.

The operation of the National Physical Laboratory was contracted out in October 1995.

The Laboratory of the Government Chemist was sold to a management-led consortium in March 1996.

The Transport Research Laboratory was sold to the Transport Research Foundation in April 1996.

The Natural Resources Institute was privatised in May 1996.

AEA Technology, the former commercial arm of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority which absorbed the rationalised activities of the Warren Spring Laboratory in spring 1994, was privatised in September 1996.

Records of the number of (a) employees and (b) scientists employed in those establishments since 1980 are not kept centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

British Agrochemicals Association Ltd.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what representations he has received from the British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months; what was the subject of those representations; and if he will make a statement; [18453]

(2) what meetings he has had with the British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months; what was the subject of the meetings; and if he will make a statement. [18452]

Mr. Greg Knight: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Small Business, Industry and Energy attended the British Agrochemical Association's annual luncheon on 4 December 1996.

Neither my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade nor other DTI Ministers have otherwise met or received representations from the British Agrochemicals Association in the last 12 months.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much in total his Department has failed to recover from companies defaulting on the terms of awards of regional selective assistance for each of the last 10 financial years; and if he will list the number of companies which defaulted in each year. [18669]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The amount that the Department has failed to recover in the last 10 financial years is:

	Number of companies	£000
1987–88	3	841
1988–89	19	620
1989–90	40	704
1990–91	55	1,287
1991–92	152	5,988
1992–93	181	9,025
1993–94	89	2,747
1994–95	54	2,543
1995–96	57	1,659
1996 to February 97	99	2,593

In total, this amounts to less than 3 per cent. of the total spend over the same period.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Accountability

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Prime Minister what account is taken of the Crichel Down precedent when considering whether a Minister ought to tender their resignation. [18743]

The Prime Minister: A discussion of the relevance of the events surrounding the resignation of Sir Thomas Dagdale in 1954 to present-day circumstances is contained in the memorandum on "Ministerial accountability and the provision of information to Parliament" which the Government submitted to the Public Service Committee in March 1996. The memorandum was published in volume III of the Public Service Committee's second report, Session 1995–96.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the circumstances in respect of failure or errors by a Government Department in which he would require the appropriate Minister to resign. [18723]

The Prime Minister: This would necessarily depend on the particular circumstance of the case, including the nature of the failure or errors in the Department and the extent of the Minister's personal responsibility for those failures or errors.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sport (Students)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to encourage students to participate in sport and physical recreation. [17414]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 26 February 1997]: The sport policy statement, "Sport: Raising the Game", published in July 1995, set out the Government's strategy for rebuilding the strength of British sport at all levels, from sport in schools, through sports clubs and further and higher education institutions, to our top athletes.

In "Sport: Raising the Game", we emphasised the importance of students continuing to have the opportunity to develop a lifelong involvement in recreational or competitive sport at colleges and universities. We shall continue to emphasise this at every opportunity.

Following on from the policy statement, in June 1996, the Further Education Funding Council produced its first report on good practice in sports provision in the further education sector, which included audited information. The report also includes examples of good practice. The FEFC has agreed to update its database on sports provision annually, to continue to comment on sports provision and students achievements in sport in its inspection reports, and to monitor changes in provision indicated by statistical returns from colleges.

Also following on from the policy statement, in December 1996, the Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals and the Standing Conference of Principals jointly published "Sport in Higher Education", an important part of which is the first ever in-depth survey of the extent and nature of sports facilities and opportunities, including community use, in the higher education sector. The report makes a number of recommendations higher education institutions might pursue to raise the profile of sport, including ensuring that institutions' literature, particularly the prospectus, conveys the scope of available sports facilities and infrastructure, and records students' sporting achievements.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans her Department has to aid universities and colleges in implementing the recommendations of the Bannister committee's report into university sports scholarships. [17408]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 26 February 1997]: The Bannister committee's report highlights examples of best practice and sets out guidelines for the operation of university sports scholarship schemes. I fully back that guidance and hope further and higher education institutions will follow it. The results will undoubtedly benefit both the institutions and their sports scholars.

Over the post two years, further and higher education institutions across the United Kingdom have benefited substantially from lottery grants for upgrading existing sports facilities and for building new ones. Under the lottery-funded world class performance programme, applications for the funding of individual athletes must be made through the national governing bodies of sport. Where an eligible athlete is also a student, part of the grant awarded to that athlete may be used to offset all or part of the student's study costs. The first awards under the world class performance programme will be made shortly.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what analysis has been made to determine what proportion of students in secondary education who progress on to further or higher education continue to participate in sport and physical recreation while studying. [17409]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 26 February 1997]: The 1990 general household survey indicated that 91 per cent. of full-time students take part in sport or physical recreation on a regular basis.

British Academy of Sport

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has for visiting the proposed sites for the British Academy of Sport. [18335]

Mr. Sproat: I visited the site proposed by the Heyford Consortium on Tuesday 4 March. I will be visiting the sites proposed by the Sheffield Consortium and by the Central Consortium on Thursday 6 March.

National Lottery (Crewe and Nantwich)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many lottery tickets have been sold in the Crewe and Nantwich parliamentary constituency. [18638]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 4 March 1997]: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member and to place copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Sports Council Lottery Fund

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list by county and district and by amount the awards made in 1995, 1996 and 1997 by the Sports Council Lottery Fund to benefit (a) bowls, (b) athletics, (c) disability sports, (d) multi sports, (e) tennis and (f) mountaineering in Wales. [17300]

Mr. Sproat: Awards totalling more than £23.7 million have been made to 232 sports projects throughout Wales. I have arranged for the lists to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list by county and district the awards made in 1995, 1996 and 1997 by the Sports Council Lottery Fund to benefit the sports of (a) football, (b) rugby union and (c) swimming in the UK indicating the amount of each award. [17306]

Mr. Sproat: Awards totalling over £441 million have been made to 2,603 sports projects throughout the UK. I have arranged for the lists to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Earth Summit II

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what preparations her Department is making for the United Nations General Assembly special session, earth summit II; and for the meetings leading up to the summit. [18396]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of the Environment is taking the lead within Government on the preparations for the UN General Assembly special session in June.

I refer the hon. Lady to the reply that I have given today to my hon. Friend the Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo).

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Higher Education (Leeds)

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students from Leeds have entered higher education in each of the last five years. [17893]

Mr. Forth: The information requested is not available centrally.

Nursery Places

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many children are currently in nursery places in Lancashire; and what percentage this is of children of nursery school age. [17709]

(2) how many children are currently in nursery places in each local education authority in England; and what percentage that is of the children of nursery school age in each case. [18419]

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children are currently in nursery places in the London borough of Waltham Forest; and what percentage this is of children of nursery school age. [18079]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Members to statistical bulletin 2/97 which shows numbers and percentages of children aged under five in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools by local education authority area in England in January 1996. A copy of the bulletin is in the Library.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many nursery places for four-year-olds were provided by Leeds city council in the last year for which figures are available; what percentage this was of the number of four-year-olds in the Leeds city area; and what was the national average percentage of four-year-olds provided with a nursery place. [18338]

Mr. Squire: There were just under 3,000 four-year-olds in maintained nursery schools or nursery classes in maintained primary schools in the Leeds education authority area. The Department does not publish information on percentages or participation rates of four-year-olds by local education authority area. The percentage of four-year-olds in England who were in maintained nursery schools or nursery classes in maintained primary schools was 24 per cent. in January 1996.

Participation rates of children under five in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools by local education authority area in England in January 1996 were published in a statistical bulletin on 28 February, a copy of which is in the Library.

Student Loans

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students with student loans eligible for repayment are currently (a) in arrears and (b) in litigation in respect of their repayments. [17718]

Mr. Forth: These are matters for the Student Loans Company. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how often she has met representatives of the Student Loans Company in the last year. [17719]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, met the chairman and chief executive of the Student Loans Company on 9 September.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received in the last year about the student loans system; and if she will make a statement. [17720]

Mr. Forth: Since 1 March 1996, my right hon. Friend has received 202 letters from hon. Members and members of the public on the subject of student loans. In addition, my right hon. Friend has received a number of letters on student support generally. The breakdown of how many of those letters included student loans issues could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from bodies interested in winning a contract to take over the administration of the student loans system. [17721]

Mr. Forth: Contracting out of the administrative functions of the Student Loans Company will be by competitive tendering. The competition has not yet begun, but to date, there have been three such representations.

Graduate Employment

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the latest figures available for graduates gaining employment related to their degree within six months of graduation in (a) teaching, (b) engineering, (c) biotechnology and research sciences, (d) creative arts, (e) humanities, (f) computing and technology and (g) applied mathematics; and if she will make a statement. [17728]

Mr. Forth: The latest available information giving a complete list of occupations entered and other destinations by selected subject of first degree is given in the following table:

First degree home graduates from HE institutions in the UK in 1995 for whom destination is known

Local Education Authorities

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list in rank order local education authorities by GCSE A to C grade results together with the local education authority rank order place for expenditure per pupil. [18090]

Mrs. Gillan: The following table lists in rank order for each local authority the percentage of 15-year-old pupils obtaining five or more GCSEs at grades A* to C in 1995–96 together with the local education authority rank order place for expenditure per secondary pupil in 1994–95—the latest year for which information is available.

[1] The figures for GCSE achievements relate to LEA maintained and grant maintained schools in England.
[2] The ranking of unit costs relates to LEA maintained schools only and exclude grant maintained schools. The ranking is in ascending order, the lowest being at the top.

Student Numbers

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of the effects on student numbers of (a) reductions in grant levels paid to students and (b) the introduction of requirements on students to contribute to the cost of course fees. [18418]

Mr. Forth: The proportion of young people entering full-time higher education has almost doubled since 1989–90, the last year before student loans were introduced. Our policy is not to require full-time undergraduates to contribute to tuition costs. We believe that top-up fees are neither necessary nor desirable, particularly in the light of the additional £200 million funding for higher education announced in the 1996 Budget, but it is for individual universities to decide whether to introduce top-up fees and to estimate what their effect might be on student numbers.

Science A-levels

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of school pupils who were 16 years old in 1996 have gone on to study an A-level science subject, broken down by region and gender. [18339]

Mrs. Gillan: This information is not available.

Medical Training

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of the total cost of training a doctor. [18604]

Mr. Forth: The cost of training a doctor has various components at undergraduate and postgraduate level and figures are not available in consistent form for each of these components. Figures for the teaching and other costs for undergraduates are as follows.

Teaching costs are based on figures published annually by the Higher Education Funding Council for England for the average council grant for teaching allocated to each academic subject category as reported by higher education institutions. The figures for pre-clinical and clinical medicine are as follows together with figures for the average level of tuition fee for medical students.

Average Unit of Council Funding (AUCF) and tuition fees for medical students in 1995–96

	Average units of council funding £	Tuition fee £
Pre-clinical medicine	3,673	1,600
Clinical medicine	7,167	2,800

A medical student has two years of pre-clinical and three years of clinical tuition. The fees and AUCF for the undergraduate courses followed by a doctor in training, at 1995–96 rates, total £40,447 over five years.

Medical students also receive grants and loans from public funds but data collected on maintenance awards and student loans do not distinguish between types of study. The average level of maintenance grant and student loan for full-time students eligible for awards and loans was £2,595 in 1994–95.

In addition, the national health service supports teaching of medical undergraduates on practice placements through the service increment for teaching—SIFT—levy on health authorities. The total SIFT budget for medical students in England in 1996–97 is £412 million.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of the extent to which graduates entering medical school are more or less likely not to complete their training than non-graduate entrants. [18603]

Mr. Forth: Information on the respective rates of course completion by graduate and non-graduate entrants to medical schools is not compiled centrally.

Bradfield House School, Cullompton

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what measures her Department has taken to ensure that the Office for Standards in Education report of the inspection on 5 and 6 February 1997 of Bradfield House school, Cullompton has been circulated to those listed in section 20 (3) of the School Inspections Act 1996; [18483]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 19 February, Official Report, columns 564–65, on Bradfield House school, Cullompton what action she intends to take following the report of the Ofsted visit of February 1997 on the school; and if she will make a statement. [18506]

Mr. Robin Squire: I understand that the school received Ofsted's report on Bradfield House on 26 February 1997. The report states that Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools is of the opinion that the school requires special measures since it is failing to give pupils an acceptable standard of education.

The school must now circulate the report to all parents and placing authorities in accordance with section 20 of the School Inspections Act 1996. The school is also required, by section 21 of the Act, to prepare and submit to HMCI and the Secretary of State by Monday 19 May an action plan for the recovery of the school. Officials wrote to the school on 3 March warning it that, unless confirmation is received by 7 March that it will comply with both these statutory requirements, the matter will be passed to the Treasury Solicitor for legal action to secure compliance.

The school verbally indicated on 4 March that it intends to circulate the report.

The Secretary of State also has under consideration the withdrawal of the school's approval under section 347(1) of the Education Act 1996. Her decision whether to take such action is separate from her consideration of the action plan but, in making her decision, she will have regard to all relevant factors, including the adequacy of the action plan.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 462, how many people have been subject to benefit disqualification for refusing a job offer notified by the Employment Service in each quarter of the last year for which figures are available. [18688]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 5 March 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how many people have been subjected to benefit disqualification as a result of refusing a job offer notified by the Employment Service in each quarter for the last year for which figures are available. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The information you require is contained in the document entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions". Copies of this document, which is published quarterly, are held in the Library of the House. The latest published information relates to the quarter year ending 30 September 1996.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, (1) pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 462, how many people after claiming jobseeker's allowance for a period of 13 weeks have taken jobs advertised through the jobcentre that are (a) part-time and (b) temporary; [18689]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 462, how many people have taken jobs advertised through the jobcentre with weekly earnings of less than £105 per week, based on a 35 hour week after claiming the jobseeker's allowance for a period of 13 weeks. [18690]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 5 March 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question pursuant to the Answer of 18th February, Official Report, column 402, regarding the number of people who after claiming Jobseeker's Allowance of a period of 13 weeks have taken jobs advertised through the Jobcentre that are (a) part-time (b) temporary and

(c) with weekly earnings of less than £105 (based on a 35 hour week). This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Unfortunately, the Employment Service does not hold this information and I am therefore unable to supply the details as outlined in your request.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

ENVIRONMENT

Departmental Publications

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many copies of (a) "This Common Inheritance" annual report 1997 and (b) "Climate Change, the UK Programme", were produced; at what cost; and to whom they were distributed. [17726]

Mr. Gummer: Some 3,100 copies of this year's "This Common Inheritance" report was printed. One thousand five hundred were for official use at a cost of some £22,300. Of these, 150 copies were distributed to the UN Commission on Sustainable Development; 13 to Parliament; 800 to Government Departments—including Government office for the regions and UK missions overseas, 350 to interested organisations at home; and 120 to the EU, foreign Governments and other international organisations.

Some 3,500 copies of the climate change report were printed. A total of 1,025 were for official use at a cost of some £20,000. Of these, 500 were distributed to the UN climate change secretariat, as required under the convention; 13 to Parliament; 370 to Government Departments—including UK missions overseas; 111 to consultants, agencies, industries and environment campaign groups who had helped in the production of the report or otherwise have a close interest; and 31 to the EU and other international organisations.

A few copies of each document are held by the Department of the Environment and the remainder are on sale to the general public from the Stationery Office.

UN Earth Summit II

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department has taken to involve other Government Departments in preparations for the UN's earth summit II. [18394]

Mr. Clappison: "Agenda 21", the blueprint for sustainable development agreed at the Rio earth summit, covers the activities of most Government Departments. We are, therefore, ensuring that these Departments are involved in all aspects of the preparations for the special session of the UN General Assembly in June.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will support proposals for negotiations at the UN's earth summit II on a forest convention. [18395]

Mr. Clappison: It is the Government's view that the special session of the UN General Assembly in June should be used to review progress since the Rio earth summit, and to take a forward look, seeking to renew the political momentum for achieving sustainable development. The Government believe that negotiations on a forest convention should begin as soon as possible. We want the UN General Assembly special session to endorse this.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will support proposals for negotiations on (i) a freshwater convention and (ii) a forest convention at the Earth summit II. [18497]

Mr. Clappison: The Government believe that negotiations on a forest convention should begin as soon as possible. We want the special session of the UN General Assembly to endorse this.

Negotiations on a global convention on the non-navigational uses of transboundary watercourses commenced last autumn in the sixth committee of the UN General Assembly. The proposed convention, which is the result of long work in the International Law Commission, addresses most significant aspects of freshwater. The United Kingdom supports, and is making constructive contributions to these negotiations, which are planned to resume just before Easter.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what preparations his Department is making for Earth summit II; and for the preparatory conferences leading up to the summit. [18499]

Mr. Clappison: Preparations for the special session of the UN General Assembly began in June 1996 with a seminar involving Government, business, non-governmental organisations and local government. A consultation paper was issued in December 1996, setting out the Government's approach to the special session. Comments on this are now being considered, and a revised version will be published in due course. A report setting out the United Kingdom's progress since Rio, together with some of our objectives for future action, is also being prepared for presentation to the special session. The current intersessional meeting, and the main session in April, of the UN Commission on Sustainable Development will be used to prepare the ground for the special session.

Air Pollution

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the 1997–98 charging scheme for local air pollution control under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. [18920]

Mr. Clappison: Charges to cover the costs of local enforcing authorities in regulating processes which are subject to part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 were introduced in April 1991.

With the approval of the Treasury, and following consultation with local authority associations and industry, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales have made a revised scheme specifying the scale of fees and charges to take effect from 1 April 1997.

The main changes are that the standard application fee is increased by £25 to £1,040, the substantial charge fee is increased by £15 to £665, and the annual subsistence charge is increased by £15 to £640.

In addition, an adjustment has been made to the scheme this year to introduce variable payment arrangements for operators of mobile crushing and screening plant allowing for reduced payments for multiple plant.

The scheme has been laid before both Houses and a copy placed in the Libraries.

Domestic Heating

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much more fuel it takes to heat a typical semi-detached house with (a) gas central heating and (b) non-white meter electric heating in (i) Braemar, (ii) Lerwick, (iii) Aberdeen, (iv) Edinburgh, (v) Dundee and (vi) Glasgow than a similar house in Bristol using the data contained in the climatic severity index. [18687]

Mr. Clappison: The percentage of extra fuel required to heat a typical semi-detached house with (a) gas central heating is estimated to be as follows for each of the specified locations:

(i) Braemar +32 per cent.

(ii) Lerwick +48 per cent.

(iii) Aberdeen +32 per cent.

(iv) Edinburgh +25 per cent.

(v) Dundee +25 per cent.

(vi) Glasgow +23 per cent.

The percentage of extra fuel required to heat a typical semi-detached house with (b) non-white electric heating is estimated to be as follows for each of the specified locations:

(i) Braemar +32 per cent.

(ii) Lerwick +47 per cent.

(iii) Aberdeen +32 per cent.

(iv) Edinburgh +25 per cent.

(iv) Dundee +25 per cent.

(vi) Glasgow +23 per cent.

These figures have been calculated using the Building Research Establishment domestic energy model and taking Bristol as the base case.

Rough Sleeping

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what Government funding is going to be offered in the areas invited by his Department and the Department of Health on 31 October 1996 to develop strategies to tackle rough sleeping. [19079]

Mr. Curry: The Government's aim is to ensure that there is no necessity for people to sleep rough. On 31 October last year, I announced that, following detailed evaluations in 23 areas which were co-ordinated by Shelter on contract to the Department of the Environment, funding would be offered to support expansion of the rough sleepers initiative to the London boroughs of Hammersmith and Fulham and Kensington and Chelsea, and to Brighton; and that a new rough sleepers revenue fund would be made available to support local strategies drawn up jointly by local authorities and voluntary sector agencies to tackle rough sleeping in Bath, Bournemouth, Cambridge, Ealing, Exeter, Leicester, Manchester, Nottingham, Oxford and Richmond upon Thames. I have received and considered strategies from each of these areas and have reached decisions on the projects which the Government will support. My Department, in conjunction with the Department of Health, has today written to each of the local authorities explaining these decisions in detail, and invitations to bid for funding will be issued shortly to voluntary sector organisations and housing associations identified in the strategies as potential providers of the services that we have agreed to fund. The Department of Health will be writing separately to local authorities about funding arrangements under the homeless mentally ill initiative.

My announcement on 31 October last year also referred to expansion of the existing central London rough sleepers initiative zones to encompass the W1 and W2 postal districts of Westminster. My Department is discussing separately with Westminster city council and local voluntary sector agencies the arrangements for this expansion, which may result in some extra funding for outreach and resettlement work.

I am pleased that each of the strategies includes existing or new projects provided by statutory and voluntary sector organisations. This local input is particularly important as a demonstration of the partnership approach that underlies the success of the rough sleepers initiative. In some areas, Government funding will be subject to clarification of the local authority housing contribution to the strategy.

This national programme of Government help is being targeted on areas where the most significant rough sleeping problems have been identified. Local authorities have an obligation to consider the housing needs of everyone residing in their areas, including people sleeping rough, and to reflect those needs in their general housing strategies. My Department has produced comprehensive guidance to enable local authorities to conduct detailed evaluations of the extent of rough sleeping in their areas and to develop effective strategies to tackle any problems that exist. The Government will consider offering funding to support local rough sleeping strategies in other areas where a major problem is identified.

I am pleased to announce that Ian Brady, deputy chief executive of homelessness charity Centrepoint, will be joining my Department on secondment to promote the development of local rough sleeping strategies, in liaison with local authorities and other voluntary sector agencies. This combination of measures is designed to ensure that there is no necessity for anyone to sleep rough in England.

Copies of my Department's letters to each of the areas being offered funding, including summaries of the strategies and the Government's response, have been placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Cadets

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to encourage the military training of cadets. [17428]

Mr. Soames: My Department continues to support syllabuses predominantly geared to military training for the cadet forces. For the Army Cadet Force and the Air Training Corps, military training forms about 60 per cent. of the total training given to cadets. For the Sea Cadet Corps this figure is about 30 per cent. because the emphasis on sail-training and watermanship has a more civilian, rather than military application. The RN, Army and RAF sections of the combined cadet force follow similar training syllabuses to those of their respective single service cadet forces. The remaining time is devoted to adventurous and other activities. The syllabuses for military training covers the following subjects.

Sea Cadet Corps (SCC)

Bearing and self discipline, rank and rate structure of the Royal Navy, naval customs, basic seamanship and swimming, navigation and rules of the road, maritime affairs, squad drill, arms drill, firefighting, first aid, communications.

Army Cadet Force (ACF)

Drill, turnout, military knowledge, skill at arms, use of map and compass, fieldcraft, band, first aid, life saving, canoeing, competition shooting, and self reliance training.

Air Training Corps (ATC)

RAF history, airmanship, map reading, principles of flight, basic navigation, aircraft recognition, drill, skill at arms, first aid, lifesaving, air experience flying, gliding, visits to RAF stations.

Combined Cadet Force (CCF)

The CCF contingents which are formed in schools, undertake a similar military training syllabus as laid down for their respective single-service cadet organisation.

Schools

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the average cost to his Department of the school places provided for the children of service personnel in independent and private schools in each of the last five years; [17932]

(2) how many pupils have benefited from the boarding school allowance in each of the past five years. [17931]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 27 February 1997]: The average cost of places in independent and private schools provided by my Department through the boarding school allowance scheme and special educational needs allowance in each of the last five years was as follows:

1991–92: £7,116 per place

1992–93: £7,720 per place

1993–94: £9,040 per place

1994–95: £9,438 per place

1995–96: £10,337 per place

For figures of the number of service children who have benefited from boarding school allowance, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 26 November 1996, Official Report, columns 195–96.

Goose Bay

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the amounts paid to the Canadian Government in each financial year from 1993–94 onwards for Royal Air Force use of the facilities at Goose bay, Labrador; what are the estimated total payments for financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98; what was the breakdown for each year into (a) dedicated costs and (b) the United Kingdom share of common costs; and what exchange rate was applicable for each year. [17990]

Mr. Soames: For financial years 1993–94 to 1996–97 the breakdown is as follows:

	Financial year
	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	[1]1996–97
Dedicated costs (£ million)	6.885	5.049	4.578	4.402
Common costs (£ million)	7.517	7.022	6.632	4.137
Total contribution payable to Canada (£ million)	14.402	12.071	11.210	8.539
Exchange rate £ =	C$1.96	C$2.13	C$2.14	C$2.14

[1] Estimates.

Figures shown are based on bills and estimates presented by the Canadian Government. We expect our overall costs at Goose bay to reduce slightly in financial year 1997–98.

Regiments

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the current establishment and (b) the nominal strength of (i) The Duke of Wellington's Regiment, (ii) Green Howards, (iii) Prince of Wales's Own Regiment of Yorkshire, (iv) The Light Infantry, (v) The Royal Dragoon Guards, (vi) The Light Dragoons and (vii) 1 Royal Tank Regiment. [18265]

Mr. Soames: The establishments and strengths are as follows:

Unit	Establishment	Strength	Surplus/Deficit
1st Battalion The Duke of Wellingtons Regiment	554	585	+31
1st Battalion The Green Howards	625	654	+29
1st Battalion The Prince of Wales's Own Regiment of Yorkshire	539	548	+9
The Light Infantry
1st Battalion	581	553	–28
2nd Battalion	555	506	–49
The Royal Dragoon Guards	406	397	–9
The Light Dragoons	388	405	+17
1st Royal Tank Regiment	398	360	–38

Junior Leader Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 719, how many people were made redundant as a result of the decision to close the junior leader and apprentice training site at Harrogate; what was the total cost of redundancy payments; and if he will make a statement. [18117]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 28 February 1997]: Nine non-industrial and 17 industrial personnel were made redundant. The total cost to the Ministry of Defence is £354,513, which can be broken down into £261,925, the cost for this financial year, and £92,688, the cost of the future liability for annual compensation payments which will extend over the next nine years.

A30 Improvement (Eviction of Protesters)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the involvement of armed forces personnel in the eviction of protesters on or around the route of the A30 Honiton to Exeter road improvement between 1 December 1996 and 27 February 1997. [18749]

Mr. Soames: There was no armed forces involvement in the eviction of the protesters.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Waste Management

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16427]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department of Social Security has had an environmental strategy in place since 1992. Our environmental audits concentrate on auditing all new buildings and major refurbishment to obtain Building Research Establishment environmental assessment method accreditation.

The Department encourages use of the Environment Agency's DIY environmental performance checklist for premises management.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people are currently receiving invalidity benefit in England; [17810]

(2) how many people received sickness benefit in England in the latest week for which figures are available. [17811]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table:

	Number of incapacity benefit recipients in England at 31 August 1996
Incapacity benefit short term lower rate	94,000
Incapacity benefit short term higher rate	84,000
Incapacity benefit long term rate	1,190,000
Total	1,368,000

1. Figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of the incapacity benefit computer system and rounded to the nearest thousand. Does not include a small number of cases not on the system.

2. From April 1995 sickness benefit was replaced by incapacity benefit—short-term lower rate—and invalidity benefit was replaced by incapacity benefit—short-term higher and long term rate.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance and (c) income support where a disability premium is in payment have (i) been disallowed benefits and (ii) subsequently signed on as unemployed since April 1995; what was the average duration of unemployment benefit or jobseeker's allowance; and how many of those signing on have subsequently found work. [17096]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 25 February 1997]: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows:

From April 1995 to the end of December 1996, 173,000 incapacity benefit recipients were disallowed benefit. In the same period 75,000[1] people in receipt of national insurance credits because of incapacity, most of whom received income support, were disallowed benefit. From April 1995 to the end of December 1996, 92,400 people previously in receipt of incapacity benefit, severe disablement allowance and income support on the basis of incapacity for work claimed unemployment benefits.

Note:

[1] Some cases in receipt of national insurance credits only will not be included in this figure.

Social Fund

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money was lent on social fund loans at the last date for which figures are available; how many people have such loans; what is the average loan at the time of issue; what is the average repayment period; and what assessment has been made of the take-up of these loans over the past two years. [17730]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the tables:

April 1996–January 1997

	Budgeting loans	Crisis loans
Number of awards	767,000	644,000
Total amount awarded	£231 million	£43 million
Average payment[1]	£301	£66
Average length of repayment for loan repaid during this period	22.7 weeks	14.5 weeks

[1] Figures may not sum due to rounding.

1. The number of discretionary awards made after review is not included.

The overall performance of the social fund is constantly monitored and the results of this monitoring are used to inform the budget allocations each year.

Number of loans made over the last two years

Year	Budgeting loan	Crisis loan
1994–95	864,000	755,000
1995–96	921,000	832,000

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent review he has undertaken of the effects of the introduction of jobseeker's allowance; and if he will make a statement. [17854]

Mr. Roger Evans: In line with the Government's commitment to evaluating all new policies, we have set in place an extensive programme of monitoring and evaluation, to assess whether the jobseeker's allowance is achieving its policy objectives.

A wide-ranging evaluation is being undertaken which includes a national survey of unemployed claimants conducted before and after the introduction of the benefit.

Both the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service have an extensive monitoring programme in place to assess its implementation and performance.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received from MIND proposing changes to the housing benefit regulations; and what the proposed changes were. [18371]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has received one representation from the Coventry branch of MIND about the proposed changes to housing benefit which will restrict the amount of rent which will be used to calculate housing benefit for most single people under age 60 living in the deregulated private rented sector. This representation expressed concern that people with chronic enduring mental illness may be detrimentally affected by the proposed changes.

MIND has also made representations to the Social Security Advisory Committee on the proposed changes. The Government have just received the committee's report and will study it carefully before taking final decisions.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what analysis the Government have undertaken of the effect of (a) recent and (b) planned changes to housing benefit on people with mental health problems living within the community. [18426]

Mr. Evans: The Government are collecting data to monitor the impact of the housing benefit changes which were introduced last October. The monitoring exercise will be extended to cover future changes. The results will be analysed and will be placed in the Library. In addition, the Government are putting a series of research projects in place to evaluate the long-term effects of the changes and the use of discretionary funds to prevent exceptional hardship. The information collected will not focus specifically upon people with mental health problems. The results are expected next year.

The Government have also set up an inter-departmental review to look at the funding of supported accommodation, and as part of this exercise research is being undertaken to quantify the contribution made by housing benefit to the provision of supported accommodation for all client groups.

State Earnings-related Pensions Scheme

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of the net present value of (a) additional expenditure on SERPS pension and (b) savings made from reduced expenditure on national insurance rebates and incentives paid on contributions made to appropriate personal pensions payments in (i) 2025, (ii) 2030, (iii) 2040 and (iv) 2050, if (1) all and (2) half of those earning under £10,000 per annum currently opted out of SERPS into APPs were to rejoin SERPS. [15592]

Mr. Heald [holding Answer 14 February 1997]: We estimate that the net present value of additional SERPS expenditure if all holders of appropriate personal pensions—APPs—who earn under £10,000 were to join SERPS would be £110 million in 2025–26; £80 million in 2030–31; £10 million in 2040–41 and zero in 2050–51. The additional SERPS expenditure if half of those APP holders earning under £10,000 were to join SERPS is estimated at £50 million in 2025–26; £40 million in 2031–32; zero in 2040–41 and 2050–51.

We estimate that the net present value of reduced expenditure on national insurance rebates if all holders of APPs who earn under £10,000 were to join SERPS would be £170 million in 2025–26; £130 million in 2030–31; £10 million in 2040–41 and zero in 2050–51. The reduced expenditure if half of those APP holders earning under £10,000 were to join SERPS is estimated at £80 million in 2025–26; £60 million in 2031–32; £10 million in 2040–41 and zero in 2050–51.

The costings assume that those holding APPs in 1996–97 would otherwise continue as APP holders in the projected period. In addition, they are assumed to have the same real earnings in these future years as they did in the base year. All figures are expressed in 1996–97 prices, discounted.

Disability Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many medical examinations for the purpose of the all work test were carried out in November 1996 by doctors who were members of disability appeal tribunals. [13325]

Mr. Roger Evans [pursuant to his reply 30 January, Official Report, c 362-63]: In November 1996, 2,399 all work test examinations were conducted doctors undertaking work for Benefits Agency medical services on a fee-paid sessional basis who are also members of disability appeal tribunals.

SCOTLAND

Water and Sewerage Services

15. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the future management of the water and sewerage services in Scotland. [17327]

Mr. Kynoch: The new structure for water and sewerage services which we have put in place is designed to be durable and efficient.

Scottish Grand Committee

16. Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what role he plans for the Secretary of State for Scotland at future meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee. [17328]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I will ensure that the Scottish Grand Committee continues to bring government closer to the Scottish people and make it more accountable to them.

21. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the work of the Scottish Grand Committee over the last year. [17334]

Mr. Forsyth: In the last year the Scottish Grand Committee has assumed a pivotal role in making government more accountable to the Scottish people and strengthening the Union.

30. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the contribution of the Scottish Grand Committee to the accountability of his Department. [17344]

Mr. Forsyth: The Scottish Grand Committee is a powerful Committee of this House. Its enhanced role has ensured closer scrutiny and accountability of the work of my Department.

Unemployment

17. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the unemployment situation in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [17329]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets representatives of the Scottish Trades Union Congress from time to time to discuss a range of issues. There are no current plans for a meeting.

29. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the level of unemployment in Scotland. [17343]

Mr. Kynoch: The seasonally adjusted level of unemployment in Scotland has fallen by more than 24,100 since April 1996 and is well below the European Union average.

Shipbuilding

18. Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure the future of commercial shipbuilding in (a) Scotland and (b) Govan. [17330]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has taken a close interest in the commercial success of the shipbuilding industry in every part of Scotland. This has included promoting the interests of the industry and, where appropriate, drawing attention to the continued excellence of these shipyards and the great progress in their productivity, working practices and labour relations.

Employment Trends

19. Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish trades Union Congress to discuss employment trends in the public sector in Scotland. [17332]

Mr. Kynoch: I met STUC representatives on 11 February this year to discuss local government employment issues. I meet the general secretary of the STUC regularly.

Economy (North Ayrshire)

20. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current economic prospects in north Ayrshire. [17333]

Mr. Kynoch: The economic prospects in North Ayrshire remain good. Unemployment in the North Ayrshire council area fell by 6.7 per cent. in the year to January 1997.

Islands Needs Allowance

22. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the second stage of the special islands needs allowance review. [17335]

Mr. Kynoch: We are committed to beginning a review of the special islands needs allowance later this year once expenditure data from all of the new councils is available.

Glenmore

23. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received regarding plans for (a) a gondola and (b) a funicular railway at Glenmore in the Cairngorms. [17336]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received seven letters about the Cairngorm funicular railway since 1 January. Four opposed the development while one was dismissive of a gondola as an alternative.

Local Government Finance

24. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the impact on the manpower of Scottish local authorities of the revenue support grant settlement for 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [17337]

Mr. Kynoch: Provided councils maximise the benefits from the reorganisation and efficiency savings, and budget in line with the priorities my right hon. Friend set in determining the settlement, it should lead to a continued improvement in front-line services.

26. Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest assessment of the economic consequences of his policy towards non-domestic rates in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [17340]

Mr. Kynoch: Ratepayers have saved more than £1.4 billion in the past 5 years. If the Government had not harmonised rating, next year's bills would be at least double their current levels. We are further freezing the business rates for all small businesses in 1997–98; direct support in that year alone will total over £170 million.

The success of the policy is clear. In the last decade the number of companies registered in Scotland has increased by almost 14,000. Business births in Scotland continue to exceed business deaths.

This is good news for Scottish business.

33. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received on the projected level of local government expenditure in the highlands. [17347]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about this matter.

34. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received on local government finance. [17348]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on this matter.

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the recent Coopers and Lybrand report on local government spending in Scotland. [17321]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The report confirms that after adjustments for non-comparability Scottish councils are spending £285 more each year for every man, woman and child than English councils are spending and £181 more than Welsh councils are spending.

I now intend to start the next stage of the study to find out whether there is any justification for this excess.

Teaching Posts

25. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the change in the number of teaching posts in (a) Glasgow and (b) Scotland in 1997–98. [17339]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Any change in the number of teaching posts will reflect local authority decisions.

Flood Prevention

27. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce the successful bids for challenge funding to aid flood prevention projects. [17341]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has today announced details of successful central challenge fund bids, including those dealing with flood prevention. East Ayrshire council will receive £1.9 million for early action works to alleviate flooding risk in the Kilmarnock area and Perth and Kinross council will receive a total of £18.3 million over the next five years, subject to the Perth flood prevention scheme being confirmed.

28. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for introducing a flood management scheme for the whole of the River Tay catchment area. [17342]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has no such proposals. Local councils have powers under the Flood Prevention (Scotland) Act 1961 to prevent or mitigate flooding of non-agricultural land in their areas. The Flood Prevention and Land Drainage (Scotland) Bill currently going through Parliament will, if enacted, ensure that local authorities address their responsibilities for flood prevention.

Dumfries and Galloway Health Board

31. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the amount of money made available to the Dumfries and Galloway health board in each of the last three years. [17345]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The amount of money made available to Dumfries and Galloway health board was £121.306 million in 1994–95, £127.695 million and £131.803 million in 1996–97.

Scottish Enterprise

32. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Scottish Enterprise to discuss trends in the Scottish economy. [17346]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend and I have regular contact with Scottish Enterprise.

Clinical Services

35. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Government's policy regarding the privatisation of national health service clinical services in Scotland. [17349]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are committed to a national health service delivered on the basis of clinical need, largely free at the point of delivery, and funded from taxation. The private finance initiative enables modern facilities to be provided sooner than would otherwise be possible.

The Government have consistently made it clear that they will not approve any project under the private finance initiative that includes clinical services unless it has the support of local clinicians and management.

Income Tax

36. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the mechanisms required for the introduction of a separate system of income taxation in Scotland. [17350]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Dover. (Mr. Shaw).

Electronic Tagging

37. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the outcome of the electronic tagging of persistent offenders in a pilot project in Norfolk; and if he will make a statement on the implications for Scotland. [17352]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The pilot project in Norfolk and those in Manchester and Berkshire have been evaluated by the Home Office. The findings seem to confirm that the technology is reliable and that this form of sentence can be a worthwhile addition to the range of community penalties available to sentencers. There is no reason to believe that the same will not be true in Scotland.

Felling Licence (Balblair)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what advice the Forestry Commission received from the local authority and Scottish Natural Heritage prior to approving a felling licence for woodland at Balblair; and if he will publish the advice; [17487]

(2) when he was consulted by the Forestry Commission prior to the issue of a licence to fell woodlands at Balblair. [17488]

Mr. Kynoch: The Forestry Commission has not approved any felling at Balblair and so it has not issued a felling licence. The commission did receive an application for the woodland grant scheme which included proposals for felling, but this was withdrawn by the applicant before the commission had concluded its consultations with Scottish Natural Heritage and the local authority.

Prison Population

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Scottish prison population by type of offence numerically and in percentage terms. [17696]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of this question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mrs. Ray Michie, dated 5 March 1997:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about providing information on the Scottish prison population by type of offence.

Information by offence type is not currently available in relation to the average daily prison population. However, the table attached provides reception information by main offence for the year 1995.

Community Councils

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) for what reasons the community councils abolished on 31 March 1997 will not re-convene until July; [18006]

(2) what arrangements he is making for the discharge of the functions of the community councils in Scotland in the period between 31 March and July 1997; [18007]

(3) what guidance has been given to community councils about their (i) planning functions, (ii) representation on external bodies, (iii) financial and other contractual commitments and (iv) funding for local projects during the period between 31 March and July 1997; [18008]

(4) what notice was given to existing community councils about their period of non-existence; and what legal advice has been given about continuing duties and responsibilities of existing members while the community councils are disbanded. [18009]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 3 March 1997]: The operation of community council schemes is entirely the responsibility of the relevant local authority. I understand that Scottish Borders council has decided to revoke the existing community council schemes within its area on 31 March and subsequently to adopt a new scheme. It is for Scottish Borders council to justify to the people it serves the length of any period of interregnum between the dissolution of community councils under its existing schemes and the election of new community councils under its proposed new scheme. It is also for the council to consider any interim arrangements for seeking the views of the community.

I hope that Scottish Borders council will very carefully re-examine whether the length of interregnum that it proposes is really necessary.

Nutritional Standards

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those health boards and local authorities which have agreed nutritional specifications and standards of quality for contracts. [17373]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which food provided in child care facilities for under-fives meets his Department's dietary targets; [17374]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which food provided in (a) schools and (b) hospitals (i) provides adequate nutrition and (ii) takes account of cultural and religious requirements. [17416]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Responsibility for the provision of food in schools and in child care facilities for the under-fives rests with local authorities. It is for these authorities to determine and review the nature of the food to be provided and its nutritional value.

Scottish health service trusts are responsible for the provision of food in hospitals. Each trust is required to have in place food and dietary policies which offer patients a choice of food of a high quality and nutritional value and which meets, as appropriate, the specific cultural and religious requirements of patients.

The Scottish diet action plan, "Eating for Health", which was published by the Government in July 1996, contains a set of model nutritional guidelines for catering specifications for the public sector in Scotland. The plan recommends that the guidelines should be taken into account by all public sector bodies in determining the specification and standards in their catering contracts. The action plan and the guidelines have been distributed widely, and all directors of education and Scottish health service boards and trust hospitals received copies.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will estimate the minimum weekly cost of the good required for a healthy diet for (a) an adult male and (b) an adult female; [17375]

(2) what steps his Department takes to encourage local initiatives to improve access to a range of healthy food at reasonable prices in low income areas; [17417]

(3) if he will make a statement on the (a) role of and (b) resources allocated to the national project officer charged with implementing the diet action plan for Scotland. [17418]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: "Eating for Health - A Diet Action Plan for Scotland", which I launched in July 1996, set a framework for action to improve the Scottish diet over the next 10 years.

Among its 71 recommendations was the appointment of a national project officer to facilitate a strategic approach to dietary improvement in low income communities, including the development of new initiatives in both urban and rural areas to aid access to healthy foods. The officer was appointed last October, under the auspices of the Scottish Consumer Council, with funding from the Scottish Office. Resources totalling more than £1 million are being made available over this and the next two financial years to take forward initiatives flowing from the action plan. Of this amount, £115,000 has been specifically earmarked in the current year to find the national project officer post and initiatives associated with it.

The Scottish Office is also continuing to support local initiatives through the urban programme, and three projects promoting healthy eating in urban areas are currently being funded. Dietary issues in low-income communities are also being addressed under programmes for partnership, the current urban regeneration policy framework. This work is complemented by the activities of health alliances, now established in every health board area, for which the action plan envisaged an expanding role in stimulating and supporting community activity.

The weekly cost of a healthy diet will vary according to individual choice and circumstance; but healthy eating does not necessarily mean a more expensive food bill. The action plan recommends that supermarkets should examine, in consultation with the national project officer, the feasibility of measures to improve the availability of healthy products to low income communities. This is a point my right hon. Friend and I will be discussing with senior representatives of the major retailers at a meeting later this month.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action his Department has taken, since the publication of a diet action plan for Scotland, to stimulate consumer demand for fruit and vegetables; and what progress has been made towards the targets for consumption of fruit and vegetables. [17376]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As recommended in the Scottish diet action plan, "Eating for Health", the Health Education Board for Scotland is currently distributing a maildrop on healthy eating to every household in Scotland. This stresses the positive benefits of fruit and vegetables in protecting against a number of serious diseases, and encourages increased consumption in line with the dietary targets.

The Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Environment Department has also recently adjusted the criteria pertinent to its food processing and marketing grant schemes so that preference is given to initiatives which produce healthy foods, including fruit and vegetables.

Progress towards the dietary targets set in 1994 will be measured primarily through the recently introduced Scottish health survey. The first data from the survey will be available in the spring and will provide a baseline against which changes in the populations's dietary behaviour, including consumption of fruit and vegetables, can be measured.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the health boards and local authorities who have indicated their commitment to implement the recommendations contained in the diet action plan for Scotland and nutrition targets. [17377]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: "Eating for Health—A Diet Action Plan for Scotland" was issued to all health boards and local authorities on publication last July. It has been widely welcomed by the Scottish health service. A conference organised jointly by The Scottish Office, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and the Health Education Board for Scotland on public health in September 1996 indicated a high degree of commitment and support among local authorities for the recommendations in the plan.

Meat Hygiene Inspectors

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many meat hygiene inspectors were employed by (a) his Department and (b) the Meat Hygiene Service (i) on the most recent date available and (ii) for each year since 1979. [18164]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: No meat hygiene inspectors were employed by the Department. The chief executive of the Meat Hygiene Service has been asked to write to the hon. Member regarding their staffing numbers.

Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at ADAS establishments by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18179]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: On 1 March 1997, there were no food and agriculture scientists employed on Scottish Office-funded projects in ADAS establishments. On 31 March 1995, one part-time scientist was employed on a Scottish Office-funded project at ADAS.

Data in respect of earlier years is no longer held centrally.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Agriculture and Food Research Council and the Biotechnology and Biological Science Research Council establishments by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18180]

Mr. Robertson: On 1 March 1997, 2.05 full-time equivalent food and agricultural scientists were employed on Scottish Office-funded projects in BBSRC establishments. On 31 March 1995, two full-time equivalent food and agriculture scientists were employed on Scottish Office-funded projects in BBSRC establishments.

Data in respect of earlier years are no longer held centrally.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Central Science Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18169]

Mr. Robertson: On 1 March 1997, 0.7 full-time equivalent food and agriculture scientists at the Central Science Laboratory were employed on a Scottish Office-funded project. There were no food and agriculture scientists employed at CSL on Scottish Office-funded projects on 31 March 1995.

Data in respect of earlier years is no longer held centrally.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Institute of Food Research by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18171]

Mr. Robertson: Since 31 March 1995, there have been no scientists working on Scottish Office-funded projects at the Institute of Food Research.

Data in respect of earlier years is no longer held centrally.

Research and Development Expenditure

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the Department's total research and development expenditure for each year from 1980 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices on projects funded by his Department equivalent to those covered by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. [18176]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Office funding of agricultural and fisheries research complements the agricultural and fisheries research funded by MAFF and the Biotechnology and Biological Science Research Council. There are a number of co-ordination mechanisms in place to ensure that research is not duplicated.

Total Scottish Office research and development expenditure on agricultural and fisheries is set out in the table. Figures are only available from 1981–82 to 1995–96. Figures for 1981–82 to 1992–93 are taken from the "Annual Review of Government-funded Research and Development" for each year. Figures from 1993–94 to 1995–96 are taken from the "Forward Look of Government-funded Science, Engineering and Technology" for each year.

Veterinary Surgeons

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many veterinary surgeons were employed by his Department and on projects funded by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March for each year since 1979. [18163]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Office employs no veterinary surgeons. Veterinary advice is provided by MAFF vets, five of whom currently advise the Scottish Office. There were 12 veterinary surgeons employed on projects funded by the Scottish Office at 1 March 1997.

Data in respect of earlier years is no longer held centrally.

Veterinary Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many veterinary scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Central Veterinary Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18170]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: There have been no veterinary scientists employed at the Central Veterinary Laboratory on projects funded by the Scottish Office since 31 March 1995.

Data in respect of earlier years are no longer held centrally.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the income scale that will apply to the assisted places scheme in Scotland in school session 1997–98. [19078]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: For school session 1997–98, I propose to lay regulations before the House in due course providing for progressive parental contribution for one assisted pupil in relation to family income as follows:

Part of relevant income to which the specified percentage applies	Parental contribution (percentage)
That part, if any, which exceeds £9,969 but does not exceed £10,864	9
That part, if any, which exceeds £10,864 but does not exceed £11,725	12
That part, if any, which exceeds £11,725 but does not exceed £13,481	15
That part, if any which exceeds £13,481 but does not exceed £16,186	21
That part, if any, which exceeds £16,186 but does not exceed £19,712	24
That part, if any, which exceeds £19,712	33

The relevant income scale is open-ended, but the remission can, of course, be given only where the parental contribution is less than the school tuition fee. We do not expect the income scale adjustment to have a significant effect on the proportion of pupils who receive full remission of their fees, currently standing at 47.4 per cent. of the 3,539 pupils assisted in the 1996–97 school session.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has determined the level of fee remission grant which will be available to parents under the assisted places scheme in school session 1997–98. [19080]

Mr. Robertson: Independent schools offer a wider choice and diversity of education with strong traditions of academic attainment, good examination results, sound discipline and a commitment to a wide range of sport and extra curricular activities.

The assisted places scheme provides financial assistance towards tuition fees and certain other costs for children from low income families who would otherwise have not been able to afford the cost of an independent school education for their children. In the current 1996–97 school session, 48 per cent. of the 3,500 pupils being assisted under the scheme come from families whose gross income is less than £9,873 per annum; with 75 per cent. of those pupils coming from families earning £16,000 or less per annum. The assisted places scheme has, since it was introduced in 1981, enabled over 11,000 children from families with low incomes to attend Scottish independent schools.

My right hon. Friend is making £14,131,000 available for fee remission in the 1997–98 school session in response to applications for funds from the 53 schools across Scotland which will participate in the scheme. The table sets out the allocation of fee remission grants to individual schools for the 1997–98 school session. It will be for each participating school to fund as many assisted places as can be afforded from within these allocated amounts, but we estimate that this total should be sufficient to fund around 3,800 places in the 1997–98 school session, maintaining our commitment to the expansion of the scheme.

HEALTH

Emergency Beds

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of emergency beds in NHS hospitals during (a) the current winter and (b) the winter of 1995–96; and what measures he is taking, or has taken, to ensure availability when required. [18458]

Mr. Horam: In the national health service, use of beds is not necessarily limited to either emergency or elective patients and therefore the number of "emergency beds" is not recorded centrally.

The most recent information on acute bed availability can be found in "Bed Availability for England 1995–96", copies of which can be found in the Library.

Admissions

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) medical emergency admissions and (b) elective surgical admissions there were for each month since April 1995. [18608]

Mr. Horam: Information for 1995–96 will be available later this year.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS elective admissions have been cancelled because of emergency demand for NHS hospital facilities in the last 12 months; and how many private patient admissions to NHS pay beds have been cancelled in the same period for the same reason. [18611]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Cancelled operations

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients had their operations cancelled and were not re-admitted within 30 days for each month since April 1995. [18607]

Mr. Horam: The information available is provided in quarterly returns which are available in the Library.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS theatre sessions were cancelled in each month since April 1995. [18606]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Doctors

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors ceased practice in each of the last five years. [18605]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not held centrally.

Cancer Patients

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of terminally ill patients with cancer in acute hospital beds in the latest period for which figures are available.[18730]

Mr. Horam: None.

Accident and Emergency Services

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of private hospitals provide full accident and emergency services. [18713]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Breast Screening

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of women aged 50 years have had breast screening, broken down by (a) district health authority and (b) regional health authority. [18731]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Cryptosporidium

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department was first notified of the outbreak of cryptosporidium in the area of Thames Water; and by whom. [18908]

Mr. Horam: The local consultant in communicable disease control for Brent and Harrow health authority informed officials of an increase in the number of reported cases of cryptosporidiosis in the area on the afternoon of Friday 28 February. Later the same afternoon, the regional epidemiologist reported an outbreak of the infection in West Hertfordshire.

Operation Waiting List

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women are waiting for (a) a hysterectomy operation, (b) a mastectomy operation and (c) a hip replacement operation in each health authority area; and how many have been waiting longer than (i) three, (ii) six, (iii) nine and (iv) 12 months. [18788]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available. Information collected centrally is at specialty level and does not distinguish between male and female patients.

Mental Health

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations the Government have received regarding the effects of the provisions of the Finance Bill on people with mental health problems living within the community; and if he will make a statement on those effects. [18370]

Mr. Burns: The Government receive numerous representations from a wide range of interested parties on the provisions of the Finance Bill. Improving the care of mentally ill people is a high priority for the Government and considerable resources have been spent in recent years in pursuit of this aim. We recently announced the allocation of an extra £50 million to help health and local authorities improve further the quality and range of services they provide to mentally ill people.

Unlicensed Medicines

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the medicines currently available that are not licensed for human administration. [18593]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Unlicensed medicines may be manufactured or imported for supply to the order of a doctor or dentist for their individual patients.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what medicines currently given to children are administered by a route, in a formulation or in a dosage which has not been approved by the Medicines Control Agency. [18594]

Mr. Malone: When medicines are administered to children by a route, in a formulation or in a dosage which has not been approved for that age group by the Medicines Control Agency, this occurs outside the terms and conditions of the medicinal product licence and is the responsibility of the prescribing physician. Such usage is not reported to the Medicines Control Agency.

Broadmoor Special Hospital

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the powers and responsibilities of the patients council at Broadmoor; and if he will make a statement. [18691]

(2) what plans he has to investigate allegations of (a) child abuse, (b) access to pornographic materials and (c) sexual assault in Broadmoor hospital. [18693]

Mr. Burns: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health gave the hon. Member for Stockport (Ms Coffey) on 3 March 1997, Official Report, column 451.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to improve staff morale at Broadmoor hospital; and if he will make a statement. [18692]

Mr. Burns: Staffing issues at Broadmoor hospital are a matter for the hospital authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Broadmoor hospital, Mrs. Sheila Drew-Smith.

Recombinant Factor 8

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish funding provision for recombinant factor 8 on an equivalent basis to that provided in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [18720]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) on 23 July 1996, Official Report, columns 216–17.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, for what reasons the vaccination of poultry against Newcastle disease is normally prohibited in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [17242]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 24 February 1997]: Vaccination against Newcastle disease has been prohibited in Northern Ireland until recently because the Province's status as a non-vaccinating area has permitted the prohibition of poultry—other than eggs and day-old chicks—from vaccinating countries. That has helped to prevent the introduction of other poultry diseases from which Northern Ireland has been free. Vaccination also makes it technically difficult to detect and diagnose Newcastle disease if it does occur.

Action for Community Employment (Staff Reductions)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he plans to take to protect the continuing services of (a) youth clubs, (b) pre-school playgroups, (c) organisations working with the elderly, (d) environmental groups, (e) disabled organisations and (f) other voluntary or community groups, affected by the reduction in the number of ACE employees. [17706]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Seamus Mallon, dated 5 March 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about continuing services to groups in the community affected by the reduction in the Action for Community Employment (ACE) scheme.

The essential purpose of ACE is to enable long-term unemployed participants to compete more effectively for available permanent jobs. The community benefit of ACE to a secondary aim. However, Baroness Denton wishes to minimise the effect of the reductions on the community and has asked the Agency to give priority to protecting services to needy and vulnerable people. Accordingly, we wrote on 7 February to ACE projects giving guidance on preserving priority services to the elderly, under 5's, the disabled and ill. Services to youth clubs and environmental groups are not included as priorities.

The management committees of ACE schemes have been asked to take particular care when reducing places to try and ensure that needy people are not suddenly deprived of essential services on which they have come to depend. The Agency is also encouraging ACE schemes, wherever possible, to work with neighbouring schemes to preserve services.

I can assure you that the Agency will continue to work with schemes to minimise the impact of the reduction.

Punishment Shootings

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many assaults described as punishment shootings have taken place in Northern Ireland in each year since 1991 and in 1997 to date; and how many were believed in each year to have been carried out by the (a) Provisional IRA, (b) other terrorist groups, (c) the Ulster Defence Association, (d) the Ulster Volunteer Force and (e) other loyalist paramilitary organisations. [18686]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 4 March 1997]: Casualties as a result of terrorist assaults (shootings) are as follows:

Year	By loyalist groups	By republican groups	Total
1991	40	36	76
1992	72	61	133
1993	60	25	85
1994	68	54	122
1995	3	0	3
1996	21	3	24
1997 (to 2 March)	11	1	12

It is not possible to specify which individual group carried out an offence.

Meat Hygiene Inspectors

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hygiene inspectors were employed by (a) his Department and (b) the Meat Hygiene Service (i) on the most recent date available and (ii) in each year since 1979. [18167]

Mr. Ancram: It is possible to provide only details of the numbers of staff employed by the Department of Agriculture from each year since 1990. To provide details for earlier years would incur disproportionate costs.

(a) Meat inspectors employed by the Department of Agriculture

February 1997: 132

March 1996: 118

March 1995: 118

March 1994: 129

March 1993: 133

March 1992: 136

March 1991: 134

March 1990: 143

(b) There is not a separate meat hygiene service in Northern Ireland.

Food and Agriculture Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many food and agriculture scientists were employed in Government-funded food and science establishments by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18182]

Mr. Ancram: In addition to the number of food and agriculture scientists employed by the Department, details of which were given to him in a response earlier today, the following food and agriculture scientists are employed by ARINI—the Agricultural Research Institute of Northern Ireland:

February 1997: 46

March 1995: 51

March 1990: 39

The information was provided by ARINI who have advised that in the time available it was not possible to provide information for earlier years. They have further advised that up to 1990 the food and agriculture scientists employed by ARINI would have worked solely on projects funded by the Department. However, since then there has been an increase in commercial research which required a commensurate increase in scientific staff. In the time available it has not been possible to sub-divide the number of staff into those working on projects funded by the Department and those working on commercially funded projects.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Agriculture and Food Research Council and the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council establishments by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18184]

Mr. Ancram: The Department does not employ staff at either establishment.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at ADAS establishments by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18183]

Mr. Ancram: The Department does not employ staff at ADAS establishments.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Central Science Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18185]

Mr. Ancram: The Department does not employ staff at the Central Science Laboratory.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Institute of Food Research by his Department on (a) the most recent date available, and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18187]

Mr. Ancram: The Department does not employ staff at the Institute of Food Research.

Veterinary Surgeons

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many veterinary surgeons were employed by his Department on projects funded by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March in each year since 1979. [18166]

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Agriculture employs veterinary surgeons for a variety of tasks including disease prevention, control and eradication, meat hygiene and veterinary research. The figure in the table indicates the breakdown between veterinary research and other duties.

It is possible to provide details only of the numbers of veterinary surgeons employed in each year since 1990. To provide details for earlier years would incur disproportionate costs.

Veterinary Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many veterinary scientists were employed on Government funded projects at the Central Veterinary Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18186]

Mr. Ancram: The Department does not employ any veterinary scientists at the Central Veterinary Laboratory.

Scientific Establishments

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those scientific establishments other than the Central Science Laboratory, Central Veterinary Laboratory and the Institute of Food Research receiving funding from his Department indicating the number of scientists employed at each on projects funded by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18188]

Mr. Ancram: The only scientific establishment outside of the Department which receives funding from the Department is the Agriculture Research Institute of Northern Ireland. For details of the number of scientists employed by that institute, I refer the hon. Member to answer to him on that subject today.

Research and Development Expenditure

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the Department's total research and development expenditure for each year from 1980 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices on projects funded by his Department on matters equivalent to those covered by MAFF. [18181]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Northern Ireland Department of Agriculture, research and development expenditure:

Year	Cash	Constant prices (1995–96 financial year) £ million
1979–80	3.59	9.11

Local Government Finance

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each council in Northern Ireland (i) the electorate, (ii) the population and (iii) the council debt (a) in total, (b) per head of electorate, (c) per head of the total population and (d) as a percentage of annual income at the latest date for which figures are available. [18516]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is set out in the table.

WALES

Cold-related Illnesses

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people in Wales received treatment by NHS doctors for cold-related illnesses for the period December 1996 and January 1997; and what was the average figure for similar periods in the past 10 years; [17220]

(2) what have been the excess winter treatment rates for cold-related illnesses in hospitals in Wales for (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients for each of the last 10 years; [17213]

(3) how many people in Wales received hospital treatment as (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients, for cold-related illnesses for the periods December 1996 and January 1997; and what was the average figure for similar periods in the past 10 years. [17217]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information concerning the illnesses for which people are treated by general medical practitioners or as out-patients in NHS hospitals is not available centrally. Information on the number of in-patients treated in NHS hospitals during December 1996 and January 1997 is not yet available. However, information relating to the number of in-patient admissions with cold related illnesses in each of the last 10 years for which data are available is given in the following table:

Winter Mortality Rates

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what have been the excess winter mortality rates in Wales for each of the past 10 years in terms of (a) excess numbers and (b) percentages for (i) people over the age of 65 years, (ii) single parent families, (iii) people in receipt of income support, (iv) people with disabilities and (v) others. [17473]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on parental status, income or physical impairment is not collected at death registration and it is therefore not possible to provide data in terms of these characteristics. The available information, provided by the Office for National Statistics, is in the following table:

	Number[1]	Percentage[2]
1986–87	1,642	19.8
1987–88	1,430	16.7
1988–89	761	8.6
1989–90	2,771	32.0
1990–91	2,159	24.9
1991–92	1,753	20.3
1992–93	1,410	15.8
1993–94	963	10.2
1994–95	1,445	16.1
1995–96	2,256	24.8

[1] The number by which deaths occurring in December to March exceed the average of those occurring in the previous and following four month periods.

[2] The number defined above as a percentage of the average of the autumn and summer deaths.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what have been the excess mortality rates in Wales for the past 10 years expressed (a) in excess numbers and (b) as percentages. [17443]

Mr. Jones: There is no generally accepted definition of excess mortality. The annual and quarterly numbers of deaths and rates per 1,000 population for Wales, Great Britain and the United Kingdom are shown in the Office for National Statistics quarterly publication, "Population Trends", copies of which are held in the Library.

Welsh Language Electoral Forms

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions his Office has had with (a) the Home Office and (b) the Welsh Language Board on the provision of bilingual forms for use by candidates and agents in elections; if the forms supplied to candidates and agents in Wales in the forthcoming general election will be bilingual; and if he will make a statement. [17892]

Mr. Hague: Electoral matters are the responsibility of the Home Office. The only prescribed form for use by candidates or their agents which acting returning officers are required to supply is the nomination paper which is available in a Welsh language version.

Candidates must also complete a consent to nomination, which is not supplied by the acting returning officer in a pre-printed form, and both the candidate and election agent must complete a declaration on election expenses, the form of which is prescribed but which is not currently available in a Welsh language version.

The Home Office proposes to review arrangements for the provision of all electoral forms following the general election. It will consider the use of the Welsh language in that review, consulting the Welsh Language Board as necessary.

BSE

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of concealment over BSE infection are (a) currently under investigation and (b) have been reported in each of the last two years in Wales; how many and what percentage of those investigated have resulted in (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction; and if he will make a statement. [18105]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No cases of concealment of BSE infection are currently under investigation or have been reported in the past two years.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new cases of BSE infection have been reported in Wales in each of the last 48 months; and if he will make a statement. [18106]

Mr. Evans: The distribution of confirmed cases in Wales by month of clinical onset is as follows:

	1993	1994	1995	1996
January	324	304	130	78
February	332	229	120	71

Greenmeadow Inn (Demolition)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set up a public inquiry into the manner in which decisions were taken within the Cadw organisation to facilitate the demolition of the Greenmeadow inn. [18570]

Mr. Hague: The case for listing the Greenmeadow inn, Rudry was carefully considered in the light of available evidence and with reference to policy guidance on listing. Criteria for the selection of listed buildings have been set out in Welsh Office circular 61/96, and before that in circular 61/81. My decision not to list the Greenmeadow inn was taken because it did not meet these criteria.

Gastroschisis

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the incidence of gastroschisis per 1,000 births for each health authority for the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [17279]

(2) how many cases of gastroschisis per 1,000 births there were in each year since 1970. [17280]

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 24 February 1997]: The available information is given in the following table. Data refer to anomalies of abdominal wall which include exomphalos, gastroschisis and prune belly (syndrome). Data for gastroschisis alone are available only at disproportionate cost. Data are shown from 1979, as before this date they were not available on a comparable basis. Rates are calculated per 10,000 live or still births. It should be noted that notification of congenital abnormalities is on a voluntary basis and, therefore, data may underestimate the true position. Terminations are not included.

Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the Welsh Office Agriculture Department's research and development expenditure in each year from 1980 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices; [18028]

(2) how many veterinary scientists were employed on Government funded projects at the Central Veterinary Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date for which figures are available, and (b) 31 March, (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980; [18160]

(3) how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government funded projects at the Central Science Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date for which figures are available, and (b) 31 March, (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980; [18159]

(4) how many scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Institute of Food Research by his Department (a) the most recent date for which figures are available, and (b) 31 March, (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18161]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the scientific establishments receiving funding from his Department other than the Central Science Laboratory, the Central Veterinary Laboratory and the Institute of Food Research; and the number of scientists employed at these establishments on projects funded by his Department on (a) the most rent date for which figures are available, and (b) 31 March, (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18162]

Mr. Evans: The number of scientists in each establishment working on research commissioned and funded specifically by the Welsh Office, at the end of March for the particular years, is as follows:

	1985	1990	1995	1997
Institute of Terrestrial Ecology	6	6	8	8
Institute of Hydrology	5	4	5	7
Institute of Arable Crop Research	0	0	3	3
National Radiological Protection Board	0	10	10	10

No comparable figures are available for 1980.

In addition, the Welsh Office contributes towards the cost of work relevant to Wales in these and other establishments where the lead is taken by other Government Departments.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many food and agriculture scientists were employed by his Department (a) in Government-funded food and science establishments, (b) on Government funded projects at ADAS establishments and (c) on Government-funded projects at Agriculture and Food Research Council and Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council establishments at the most recent date available; and how many were employed at 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18029]

Mr. Evans: None. Work by food and agriculture scientists on behalf of the Welsh Office is carried out under contract or memoranda of understanding.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many scientists were employed by his Department and each of his Department's agencies at the most recent date available; how many were in each year since 1979 on research on matters within the responsibility of the Agriculture Department; and if he will list each agency, service and central laboratory employing such scientists. [18032]

Mr. Evans: The Welsh Office employs a number of scientific experts. There are no staff working in scientific grades with Cadw, Welsh Historic Monuments, the only agency for which the Department has sole responsibility. The Department has not employed scientists to work on agricultural research matters since 1979.

Veterinary Surgeons

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many veterinary surgeons were employed by his Department and on projects funded by his Department at the most recent date available; and how many at 31 March in each year since 1979. [18030]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None. Veterinary surgeons working on behalf of the Welsh Office are employed by MAFF.

Meat Hygiene Inspectors

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meat hygiene inspectors were employed by his Department, at the most recent date available; and how many were employed in each year since 1979. [18031]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No meat inspectors have been employed by the Welsh Office.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Research and Development

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what his Department's research and development expenditure was for each year from 1980 to the present in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [18026]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 27 February 1997, Official Report, column 325.

BSE

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the full economic cost to the United Kingdom of the BSE crisis, excluding the cost to the Government. [18033]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry is commissioning an independent study to provide a comprehensive assessment of the economic impact of BSE across the whole UK economy and within particular regions. The study is expected to be completed during September 1997.

British Agrochemicals Association

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 636, regarding the British Agrochemicals Association, if the representations from the association included any relating to the taxation of (a) pesticides and (b) fertilisers; and if he will make a statement. [18449]

Mrs. Browning: The British Agrochemicals Association's representations to my Department have included the fees and levy which fund the control and monitoring of pesticides but they have not related to the taxation of pesticides. No representations have been received from the association on the taxation of fertilisers.

Drug-resistant Parasites

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has evaluated on the incidence of drug-resistant nematode worms in sheep. [17817]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 27 February 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 27 February 1997, Official Report, column 328. In addition, no veterinary medicine is authorised for use unless it meets stringent statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. Information submitted in support of applications for authorisation of products intended for the prevention or treatment of infectious diseases or parasitic infestations must include data on the emergence of resistant organisms. Information relating to the authorisation of specific products, however, is subject to the confidentiality requirements of section 118 of the Medicines Act 1968.

Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those scientific establishments other than the Central Science Laboratory, Central Veterinary Laboratory or Institute of Food Research receiving funding from the Department, indicating the number of scientists employed at each on projects funded by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18192]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The following is a list of establishments at which MAFF currently funds research. Information on previous years and on the number of scientists employed by each contractor is not available.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many scientists were employed by his Department and each of his Department's agencies at the most recent date available; how many were employed in each year since 1979; and if he will list each agency, service and central laboratory employing scientists on projects funded by his Department. [18025]

Mr. Hogg: The numbers of staff in scientific grades, excluding veterinary grades, employed by my Department and its agencies at the most recent date available in 1997, and at 1 April in each year since 1979 are shown in the following table. The Meat Hygiene Service does not employ any staff in scientific grades.

A list of establishments at which MAFF is currently funding research has already been supplied in a reply given to the hon. Gentleman today.

Figures for the agencies are given from the date of their establishment.
[1] The Central Science Laboratory Agency includes the MAFF food science laboratories from 1 April 1994.
[2] The Veterinary Laboratories Agency includes the MAFF veterinary investigation service from 1 April 1996.
[3] The Central Science Laboratory Agency co-located to a single site at Sand Hutton during 1996.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many food and agriculture scientists were employed by his Department (a) in Government-funded food and science establishments, (b) on Government-funded projects at ADAS establishments and (c) on Government-funded projects at the Agricultural and Food Research Council, and the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council on (a) the most recent date available; and (b) 31 March, (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18027]

Mr. Hogg: The information requested is either unavailable or could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and food how many food and agriculture scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Central Science Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18189]

Mr. Hogg: The latest forecast indicates that for the year to 31 March 1997 there will be 435 food and agriculture scientists employed at the Central Science Laboratory on projects funded by my Department. Comparable figures for 1995 were 492 and for 1993, 281. Information prior to establishment as an Agency on 1 April 1992 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Staff numbers rose in April 1994 as a result of the merger with MAFF food science laboratories and relaunch as an enlarged agency.

Meat Hygiene Inspectors

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many meat hygiene inspectors were employed by his Department and by the Meat Hygiene Service at the most recent date available; and in each year since 1979. [18024]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No meat hygiene inspectors are, or have been, employed by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

The Meat Hygiene Service was established as an executive agency of MAFF on 1 April 1995 and took over responsibility from local authorities for meat hygiene and inspection in licensed fresh meat premises.

Staffing matters are the responsibility of the Meat Hygiene Service and I have asked the chief executive, Mr. Johnston McNeill, to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from J. McNeill to Dr. Gavin Strang, dated 5 March 1997:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) your Parliamentary Questions to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Scotland concerning the number of Meat Hygiene Inspectors (MHIs) employed by the Meat Hygiene Service at the most recent date available and in each year since 1979 has been passed to me for reply.(18024)

The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) was established as an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) on 1 April 1995. It took over from some 300 local authorities responsibility for enforcing meat hygiene, inspection and animal welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed fresh meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales. Consequently, I am unable to supply details of staffing numbers prior to the Agency vesting date of 1 April 1995.

On a full time equivalent basis, the MHS currently employs 761 MHIs in England and 158 MHIs in Scotland.

The MHS employed a total of 803 MHIs as at 1 April 1995 and 850 MHIs as at 1 April 1996. The MHS is unable to provide a territorial breakdown of these previous years figures.

Vitamin B6 Supplements

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement about the safety of vitamin B6 supplements; [18267]

(2) if he will ask the Food Advisory Committee to review the safety of vitamin B6 supplements. [18386]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 20 January 1997, Official Report, column 480. Since then, the secretariat of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment—COT—has received further data relating to the safety of vitamin B6. This will be considered by the COT at its next meeting. The Food Advisory Committee will consider what, if any, action needs to be taken to ensure that consumers are not put at risk in the light of any further advice from the COT.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he requested the Food Advisory Committee to make an independent assessment of recommendations supplied to it by the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment in regard to the safety of vitamin B6 supplements before issuing its press release on 19 December in relation to nerve damage from the consumption of vitamin B6 supplements. [18382]

Mrs. Browning: The Food Advisory Committee relies upon the toxicological assessments made by the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment and other relevant expert committees in reaching its own independent judgment of any action which may be necessary to ensure the chemical safety of food. In the case of vitamin B6, the FAC was not asked to carry out its own toxicological assessment as this does not form part of its terms of reference.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports of peripheral neuropathy in association with the consumption of vitamin B6 supplements at doses of up to 200mg per day were evaluated in the recently completed study carried out by the medical toxicology unit to monitor the safety of dietary supplements and natural remedies. [18385]

Mrs. Browning: The medical toxicology unit study commissioned by this Department on toxicological problems resulting from exposure to traditional medicines and food supplements did not include any reported cases of peripheral neuropathy associated with the consumption of vitamin B6.

Food Safety Investigations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many food safety incidents his Department investigated in 1996. [18388]

Mrs. Browning: The investigation of food safety incidents is generally the responsibility of local authorities. In exceptional cases where a potential public health risk has regional or national implications or where there is a major local incident, local authorities notify the Department of Health, which will take action as appropriate through the food hazard warning system. There were 144 food safety incidents reported to the Department of Health during 1996.

Sustainability Indicators (Agrochemicals)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the validity of the level of pesticide and fertiliser use as an indicator of sustainability. [18451]

Mrs. Browning: The level of pesticide use in terms of tonnage applied or number of spray applications is not a good indicator of sustainability. Several hundred different chemicals are approved as pesticides. Each has a different environmental impact and the relative impact of different chemicals may not be closely related to the amount used.

Similarly the amount of fertiliser used is not a good indicator of environmental impact. The timing and method of application also affect the efficiency with which nutrients are taken up and hence the amounts released into the environment.

Plans to develop and improve the indicators already published in "Indicators of Sustainable Development for the United Kingdom", which include indicators on nutrients and pesticides, were published in "Rural England 1966".

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the potential of economic instruments for achieving sustainability with regard to pesticide and fertiliser use. [18450]

Mrs. Browning: The Government intend shortly to issue a discussion paper on the options for using economic instruments, including instruments for pesticides and fertilisers, to achieve water protection policy objectives.

Diseased Animals (Compensation)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much compensation has been paid to animals slaughtered to prevent the spread of animal diseases in 1996. [18389]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is as follows:

	£000
BSE	6,956
Newcastle disease	7
Salmonella	121
Brucellosis	13
TB	2,276
Total	9,373

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 24 February, Official Report, columns 77–78, on compensation for diseased animals, what infections the compensation was paid out for; and how much was paid for each infection in each year from 1985 to 1991. [18425]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested for the years 1985–86 to 1991–92 is as follows:

£000

	1985–86	1986–87	1987–88	1988–89	1989–90	1990–91	1991–92

Total	1,819	1,140	649	1,467	6,203	13,444	22,354

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount paid as compensation for (a) poultry, (b) cattle and (c) other animals as a result of the slaughter of diseased or suspected diseased animals in each year from 1985 to 1991; and if he will make a statement. [15713]

Mrs. Browning [pursuant to her answer, 24 February 1997, c. 77–78]: The information requested on slaughter compensation is as follows:

	1985–86	1986–87	1987–88	1988–89	1989–90	1990–91	1991–92

Intervention Storage

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the ecu prices per kilo achieved by meat plants for beef accepted for intervention storage in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland since 1996; and if he will make a statement on the reason for differential prices regionally for beef going into intervention storage. [18337]

Mr. Baldry: Differential regional prices for intervention purposes only occur in the areas of Northern Ireland and Great Britain. Northern Ireland is considered a separate region for intervention purchases in recognition of the particular importance of the beef sector there, and the effect of its proximity to the Republic of Ireland market.

Prices awarded since March 1996 are as follows:

Rendering Industry

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each rendering firm, the amounts paid to them by the Intervention Board for rendering cattle covered by the over-30-months scheme, as (a) pounds and (b) percentage of the total; and if he will list the (i) tonnage and (ii) number of such cattle rendered by each rendering firm. [18495]

Mr. Baldry: The provision of details of payments made to individual renderers, or other information from which such payments could be deduced, would breach commercial confidentiality. Information on a UK basis is as follows:

	UK total
Tonnage of material rendered on which payment made to 28 February 1997	449,590
Total payments, including VAT made to renderers to 28 February 1997 (£ million)	55.4
Estimated animals covered by above payments[1]	977,370

[1] Based on 460 kg of processed material per animal.

Veterinary Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinary scientists were employed on Government-funded projects at the Central Veterinary Laboratory by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18190]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have asked the chief executive of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency, Dr T. W. A. Little, to reply on my behalf.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Dr. Gavin Strang, dated 5 March 1997:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on the numbers of veterinary scientists employed on Government funded projects at CVL for various dates. [18190]

I should, perhaps, explain that we do not have a grade or job description that covers specifically "veterinary scientists". The table below relates to veterinary grades with an indication of the numbers of qualified vets in those posts.

	Figures at March 1997	Figures at March 1995
Permanent veterinary	23	20
Permanent non-veterinary	19	18
Total	42	38

The figures are only available for these dates since the others you indicated relate to our pre-Agency days and they will, therefore, have been included in the replies by the Minister to the other questions you tabled.

As I am sure you know, as a result of the merger with the Veterinary Investigation Service in October 1995, CVL has been part of the larger Veterinary Laboratories Agency. In addition to the figures shown above there are a further 63 staff at March 1997 within the Veterinary Investigation Division (old Veterinary Investigation Service) of the VLA. Again, for the pre-merger dates figures for the Veterinary Investigation Service will have been included in the Minister's reply.

The figures I have quoted are for all our veterinary grade staff in CVL and we cannot distinguish those employed solely on government-funded projects. However, over 80 per cent. of our business is for MAFF and therefore the majority of staff in the veterinary grade will be employed on Government-funded projects.

Research Establishments

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will make available further memorandums concerning the prior options reviews of his Department's public sector research establishment.[19202]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Memorandums on the Central Science Laboratory, Horticulture Research International and the Veterinary Laboratories Agency have now been placed in the Library of the House. These set out the rationale underlying the decisions taken concerning these establishments, which I announced on 9 December for the CSL and on 29 January for HRI and the VLA.

Veterinary Surgeons

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinary surgeons were employed by his Department and on projects funded by his Department on (a) the most recent date available, and (b) 31 March of each year since 1979. [18023]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The numbers of veterinary surgeons employed by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at 1 April each year since 1979 are as follows:

Year	Number of veterinary surgeons
	VFS and VIS	CVL	CSG	VMD	MHS	Total

Written Answers to Questions

SCOTLAND

Parliamentary Answers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many questions were tabled for reply by his Department in each Session since 1979–80; in how many instances in each year the reply has been that providing the information involved disproportionate cost; and in how many instances in each year questions have been given the reply that the information was not available centrally. [16799]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A list of the number of written and oral parliamentary questions answered by the Department in the Sessions 1982–83 to 1995–96, as supplied by the POLIS unit, has been placed in the House Library. Figures for 1979–80 to 1981–82 are not available. The rest of the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Glenfeshie and Rothiemurchus Estates

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what payments have been agreed under the management agreements with the (a) Glenfeshie and (b) Rothiemurchus estates. [17508]

Mr. Kynoch: These agreements were entered into before the formation of Scottish Natural Heritage and, unlike the present arrangements, details did not appear in a readily identifiable manner in its predecessor bodies' annual reports. If the hon. Member cares to write to Scottish Natural Heritage, it should be able to supply him with the information requested.

Animal and Poultry Research Establishments

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the proposed funding reductions to animal and poultry research establishments in Scotland; and what meetings he has had with the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerned to discuss the consequences. [17967]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The main animal and poultry research establishment in Scotland is the Roslin Institute in Midlothian, whose largest source of funding is the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. That funding is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, but I am advised that, while some reductions will take place as a result of existing projects coming to an end and of changes in MAFF's policy requirements, MAFF will continue to fund a substantial programme of research at the Roslin Institute in 1997–98 covering wide range of its programme.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no meetings with my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on this matter.

Local Authority Employees

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in rank order the number of employees for each local authority per 1,000 of population for the most recent three years for which figures are available. [18095]

Mr. Kynoch: As the information requested is lengthy, I have arranged for it to be placed in the House Library.

Homeless Households

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many households have been accepted as homeless by local authorities in rural areas in Scotland in each year since 1979; [18673]

(2) how many households have been accepted as homeless by local authorities in Scotland in each year since 1979. [18674]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information available centrally is set out in the table.

Number of households assessed as homeless or potentially homeless by local authorities following application under the current housing legislation, for whom accommodation has subsequently been secured

	All Scotland	Rural authorities
1978–79	9,078	1,987
1979–80	8,495	1,683
1980–81	7,929	1,488
1981–82	8,877	1,767
1982–83	9,127	1,754
1983–84	8,888	1,859
1984–85	10,469	1,910
1985–86	12,546	2,000
1986–87	12,860	2,192
1987–88	11,723	2,372
1988–89	12,201	2,555
1989–90	14,303	2,892
1990–91	16,875	3,318
1991–92	19,174	3,822
1992–93	20,943	4,573
1993–94	19,892	4,180
1994–95	18,440	4,125

1. The information above is based on case returns by local authorities which are available for around 95 per cent. of applications (though the proportion varies between local authorities). Accordingly the figures given understate the true position.

2. Districts with a population density of less than one person per hectare in 1981 are considered to be rural.

3. Statistics for 1995–96 will be published on 27 March 1997 in a statistical bulletin.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18812]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary on 17 December 1996, Official Report, column 506–7. Any additional information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Further Education

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish his report on the discharge of his duties for further education in Scotland, as required under section 1 of the Further and Higher Education (Scotland) Act 1992; and if he will make a statement. [19481]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am pleased that my report on further education in Scotland for 1996 has been published today and has been laid before each House of Parliament.

Copies are available in the Library of the House.

The report, entitled "Further Education in Scotland 1996: Report by the Secretary of State for Scotland", shows that further education colleges continue to improve their delivery of a quality service to students and employers. Incorporation has been a major success, which can be seen by the colleges' achievement of 6 per cent. efficiency gains and a 9 per cent. increase in student activity in 1995–96.

Nutritional Standards

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the extent to which Scottish schools will have complied with the recommendations contained in the diet action plan for Scotland by the end of 1997–98. [17378]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 5 March 1997]: Implementation of these recommendations in schools is a matter for local authorities.

Education, Health and Social Security Spending

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what current spending is per annum on education, health and social security in Scotland; how many people are involved in delivering these services; what the equivalent spending figures were in real terms (a) five and (b) seven years ago; and if he will make a statement. [17544]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 March 1997]: Figures on social security are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security. The latest information available on education and health is set out in the table:

	Service spending (£ million, 1995–96 prices)			Number of people involved in delivering services (full-time equivalents)
	1988–89	1990–91	1995–96	1995–96
Education[1]	3,174	3,357	4,056	[2]98,665
Health	3,437	3,538	4,092	114,114

[1] Figures make no adjustment to back years for transfers e.g. higher education from the Department for Education to the Scottish Office in 1993.

[2] Figures cover local authority education services (77,135), further education (11,695) and higher education (9,835). The higher education figures are provisional and do not include support staff.

Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those scientific establishments other than the Central Science Laboratory, Central Veterinary Laboratory and the Institute of Food Research receiving funding from the Department indicating the number of scientists employed at each on projects funded by his Department on (a) the most recent date available and (b) 31 March (i) 1995, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1985 and (iv) 1980. [18172]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 5 March 1997]: The Scottish Office funds agriculture and related research with a wide range of contractors. The main contractors which were funded by the Scottish Office on 1 March 1997 and 31 March 1995 are listed in the table. Details of contractors funded by the Scottish Office on the earlier dates are not held centrally.

Information on the number of scientists employed by each contractor on projects funded by the Scottish Office is not held centrally.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18816]

Mr. Bates: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 17 December 1996, Official Report columns 506–7.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid (Human Growth Hormone Treatments)

Ms Eagle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the cost to the legal aid budget to date of the litigation in respect of human growth hormone treatments. [18085]

Mr. Streeter: As at 28 February 1997, the Legal Aid Board has made payments on account totalling £940,355 to the solicitors conducting the case. The main action has been successful and the court made a costs order in favour of the successful plaintiffs. Depending on the final outcome of all litigation, the board will recover some or all of its costs from the defendants.

Legal Aid (Rochdale Court Closure)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate he has made of the impact on legal bills, with particular reference to the legal aid budget, of increased travelling by solicitors required by the closure of Rochdale county court. [17972]

Mr. Streeter: None. Consideration of the closure of Rochdale county court is at a very preliminary stage. A final decision, which will follow public consultation, will be taken only when the implications for court users, and the legal aid fund, have been fully assessed.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18814]

Mr. Streeter: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Economic Secretary on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 507–8. Any additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18931]

Mr. Streeter: A breakdown by project of the Lord Chancellor's Department's PFI schemes, as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book, is given in table 1. Current estimates are shown in table 2.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sport

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions her Department has had with (i) the Central Council for Physical Recreation, (ii) the British Universities Sports Association, (iii) the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and (iv) the National Union of Students regarding (a) the encouragement of sport among young people, (b) the availability of resources for sport and physical recreation within the further and higher education sector and (c) Britain's preparations for the 2000 Olympics. [17412]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 26 February 1997]: I had discussions with the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals, the Standing Conference of Principals and the Further Education Funding Council prior to publishing the sports policy statement, "Sport: Raising the Game", in July 1995. These discussions formed the basis of chapter 3 of the policy statement, which included undertakings by the three organisations to provide a more detailed picture of provision for sporting opportunities and sports facilities in the further and higher education sectors. The FEFC report was published in June 1996 and the CVCP/SCOP report was published in December 1996. These reports highlighted best practice and made proposals which, if pursued, will be in the interests of the institutions and their students.

The United Kingdom Sports Council is intending to explore greater associations with universities, especially in relation to the British Academy of Sport. The UKSC has not as yet had any specific discussions with the Central Council of Physical Recreation, the CVCP or the National Union of Students on the three issues raised, but recognises that they must count as possible partners in any joint approach to the future development of student sport.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Whitemoor Prison

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the staff present in the emergency control room at HMP Whitemoor on the evening of 9 September 1994 were interviewed by the Woodcock inquiry. [16865]

Miss Widdecombe: Sir John Woodcock's report records that more than 100 prison officers were interviewed by his inquiry. I understand that the identity of witnesses to the inquiry is covered by an undertaking of confidentiality given by the inquiry.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were present in the emergency control room at HMP Whitemoor on the evening of 9 September 1994. [16864]

Miss Widdecombe: Five.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who issued the instructions to desensitise the prison perimeter fence at HMP Whitemoor on 9 September 1994; [16862]

(2) at what time and for how long the prison perimeter fence at HMP Whitemoor was desensitised on 9 September 1994. [16861]

Miss Widdecombe: I understand that Sir John Woodcock found no reason to believe that the sensitivity of the perimeter fence alarm at Her Majesty's prison Whitemoor was below the required standard on 9 September 1994.

Prison Security

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures should occur in the event of an alarmed dispersal prison perimeter fence being activated; what safeguards are in place to ensure the effective implementation of these procedures; and in what circumstances these procedures or safeguards would not occur. [16860]

Miss Widdecombe: The procedures to be followed in the event of a perimeter fence alarm being activated in a dispersal prison are set out in local operational orders drawn up by the governor and in local contingency plans agreed with the director of dispersal prisons. Perimeter fence alarms are required to be tested daily, and the procedures should be regularly reviewed and tested by means of exercises based on the contingency plans. These arrangements are aimed at ensuring that effective procedures are in place and it is not possible to foresee the circumstances in which they would not be followed.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what safeguards are in place to ensure that desensitised alarms on dispersal prison perimeter fences remain sensitive enough to detect wires being cut. [16859]

Miss Widdecombe: The requirements for the operation and testing of perimeter fence alarm systems are set out in the Prison Service's security systems operation and testing manual. Such alarm systems are required to be tested daily with a spring-loaded instrument which imparts a pre-determined impact onto the wire mesh fence. This impact must be registered on the alarm monitoring system. The sensitivity of the alarm must not be reduced below this level.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he issues as to the circumstances which should cause dispersal prison (a) perimeter fences alarms to be turned off and (b) perimeter fences to be desensitised. [16857]

Miss Widdecombe: There should be no occasion when the perimeter fence alarm in a dispersal prison is turned off. A perimeter fence alarm can be modulated according to environmental conditions, for example, to prevent very high winds causing repeated false alarms.

Television Licence Fine Defaulters

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people served a prison sentence during 1996 for television licence fine default; and if he will make a statement. [17964]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 6 March 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of people who have served a prison sentence during 1996 for television licence fine default.

Provisional information for 1996 shows that 336 people—245 males and 91 females—were received into prison for defaulting on a fine after conviction for using a television without a licence.

Prison Establishments (Children)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prison establishments are currently holding children under 17 years of age; how many children are in each; and what arrangements are being made for their education. [17482]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Ms Diane Abbott, dated 6 March 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about prison establishments currently holding children under 17 years of age; how many children are in each; and what arrangements are being made for their education.

Details of the number of 15 and 16 year olds held in prison establishments on 31 January 1997 (the latest date for which figures are available) are given in the attached table.

Education in non-contracted out prisons in England and Wales is provided by contractors which were appointed by competitive tender in 1993. Statutory responsibility for prison education and training lies with the Home Secretary.

The Young Offender Institution Consolidated Rules (June 1995) state that for prisoners aged less than 17, at least 15 hours a week of "education or training courses" will be provided.

Prison governors are being encouraged to prioritise their education provision on specific areas which are included in the recently introduced core curriculum for prison education. Education provision will focus on core subjects, basic education (literacy and numeracy), information technology, life and social skills. Additionally, education contractors are being asked to consider linking their education provision for those under 17 years of age, to the National Curriculum for schools where appropriate.

Prisoner Admittance (Costs)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the average cost of admitting a prisoner into each prison type. [17496]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 6 March 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average cost of admitting a prisoner into each type of prison.

This information is not available centrally as the costs of the admission process are not recorded separately.

Prostitution

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new initiatives he is assessing to target those who exploit prostitutes and live on their earnings. [18490]

Mr. Maclean: We are not, at present, considering any fresh initiatives to target those who exploit prostitutes. The Government's position remains that those living off the sexual exploitation of others should be dealt with severely. My right hon. and learned Friend recently announced his intention to undertake a review of the current maximum penalties for sexual offence, which includes offences relating to those who exploit and live on the earnings of prostitutes.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the strategy adopted by the chief constable of Nottingham to deal with those who exploit prostitutes. [18491]

Mr. Maclean: We welcome the recent agreement between Nottinghamshire constabulary and Nottinghamshire social services on how best to tackle the problem of child prostitution. It is too early to assess how successful the agreement has been, but the Government firmly support a multi-agency approach as the best way of addressing child prostitution and ensuring that children and youngsters receive the care and protection they deserve. The need for co-operation between the agencies working in this area is reflected in the joint Home Office and Department of Health guidance, "Working together under the Children Act 1989".

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussion he has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers regarding street prostitution. [18489]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has not discussed street prostitution in his regular meetings with the Association of Chief Police Officers, but officials have been discussing a multi-agency approach to child prostitution with ACPO and discuss other issues with the police as matters arise.

Handguns

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if those owners of prohibited high calibre handguns who wish to retain their weapons as mementos, having first arranged for de-activation and having obtained de-activation certificates, will be able to obtain compensation based on individual valuation of the weapon in its original state. [18615]

Miss Widdecombe: No. Under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997, payments in respect of high calibre handguns may be made only where such items are surrendered to the police.

Convicted Murderers

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average sentence served by convicted murderers released in the last five years. [18477]

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is as follows:

Average time served under sentence by murderers first released on life licence from Prison Service establishments, 1992 to 1996.

	Sentence
1992	12.4 years
1993	14.4 years
1994	15.4 years
1995	14.0 years
1996	[1]13.4 years
1992 to 1996	14.0 years

[1] Provisional.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted murderers have killed again after release from prison in the last 10 years; and what is the average sentence that they serve as a result. [18478]

Mr. Maclean: In England and Wales, during the years 1986 to 1995, nine persons released from prison after having served a sentence following conviction for murder are known to have killed again.

One of these persons subsequently committed suicide. The other eight were sentenced to life imprisonment.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to (a) review the sentencing policy for those convicted of murder and (b) introduce different categories of murder. [18479]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have no plans to review either the sentence for, or the offence of, murder.

Special Constabulary

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average of recruitment for regular police force officers recruited from the special constabulary; [18486]

(2) if he will list the percentage of regular (a) male and (b) female police officers recruited from the special constabulary for each year since 1990 for each police force; [18485]

(3) what is the average length of service for (a) regular police force officers and (b) the special constabulary. [18487]

Mr. Maclean: Recruitment of regular police officers and officers to the special constabulary in England and Wales is a matter for the chief officer of each police force. The information requested is not collated centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by contacting each force.

Bridgewater Three

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Government assistance is being offered to Michael Hickey, Vincent Hickey and James Robinson to help them overcome the psychological traumas typically associated with the experience they have undergone. [18564]

Mr. Kirkhope: If the convictions in this case are quashed, it will be open to the men concerned to apply to my right hon. and learned Friend for compensation from public funds. In the meantime, we are in touch with the Department of Health and the men's solicitor to ensure that any health care needs can be assessed without delay.

Prison Ship, Portland Harbour

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the costs incurred to date by Dorset police authority as a consequence of proposals to moor a prison ship in Portland harbour. [18745]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the chief constable that the Dorset police have incurred expenditure totalling £2,646 on police contingency planning on this matter.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18932]

Mr. Howard: Table 5.5 of the Red Book shows capital investment by the private sector. The breakdown of Home Office private finance initiative schemes as identified in that table is:

Police Officers

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in 1979; and how many there are at the present time. [18940]

Mr. Maclean: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given to our hon. Friend the Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) on 23 January, Official Report, column 731.

Charities (Criminal Record Checks)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 463, in respect of charges for criminal records checks on those volunteering to assist charities, when he intends to make money available to cover the costs. [18919]

Mr. Maclean: We will consider granting free checks to specific groups, such as volunteers, when resources permit.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18805]

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–7.

Belmarsh Prison

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list his reasons for refusing to release a prisoner form Her Majesty's prison Belmarsh, ref. KF 3842, on compassionate grounds. [18922]

Miss Widdecombe: I will write to the hon. Member.

Fire Service College

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take to assist the Fire Service College in improving its financial performance. [19480]

Mr. Howard: The Fire Service College, as the central training establishment for the fire service, makes a very important contribution to promoting effective and efficient firefighting and fire safety arrangements in the United Kingdom, and thus maintaining public safety. Its financial regime and targets need to assist it to continue to discharge this role effectively and to secure value for money, but the present arrangements are not achieving this. Despite the considerable efforts of the present management team, the college has not yet been able to realise the benefits which its position as a trading fund ought to offer.

The college's corporate aim is to remain the pre-eminent higher education college for fire-related training and for promoting fire safety awareness. To help secure the future of the college and to assist it in achieving its corporate and business objectives, I have therefore decided to make changes to its present financial structure. I propose to seek parliamentary approval for the payment of a grant of £13.5 million to the college. This will enable it immediately to pay off the deemed loan part of the originating capital debt when it was established as a trading fund in 1992. It will save the college £1.3 million in annual interest payments. I also propose in 1997–98 to pay to the college a separate grant of £1.3 million so that it can continue to provide essential training courses for the fire service.

These measures will make a step change in the college's finances. They demonstrate the Government's firm commitment to securing an effective and well trained fire service, but the future success of the college should not—and cannot—be dependent on the Government alone. It is crucially dependent on the support of its fire service customers and the college's own efforts. Fire authorities must continue to be willing to make a proper investment in the training of their brigades and to take advantage of the facilities, skills and high-quality training opportunities the college is able to offer. The college has to give priority to ensuring the training needs of the fire service are clearly identified and effectively met. It should exploit innovative training developments. It must also continue its programme of improvements in business efficiency, to ensure high quality management and financial control and so that any on-going requirement for assistance through Home Office grant can progressively be reduced.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

UN Security Council Resolutions

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs upon how many occasions since Britain joined the European Community (a) Britain and France and (b) Britain and the United States have voted differently on proposed UN Security Council resolutions; and on which of those occasions the resolution referred to a country in which British forces were on active service or were about to undertake such service. [18433]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: According to records kept by this Department, the United Kingdom and France have voted differently on UN Security Council resolutions on 35 occasions since 1973. The United Kingdom and the United States have voted differently on 74 occasions within the same period. The only occasions on which the resolution referred to, or where British forces were involved in or were about to be involved in, active military operations were:

June 1982: Falklands (draft S/15156:Rev 2).

November 1984: N Cyprus (SCR 550).

The resolution on the Falkland Islands was subsequently vetoed and therefore never adopted.

Gulf War

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the compensation for victims of the Gulf war, decided on by the United Nations Compensation Commission's governing council in December 1996, will be paid. [18728]

Dr. Liam Fox: Interim payments of US $2,500 will be made after similar amounts have been paid for claims approved in 1994, 1995 and earlier in 1996. Successful claimants in the first instalments are due to be paid in the near future.

Subsequent payments will depend on a regular flow of money into the compensation fund from the sale of Iraqi oil under UN Security Council resolution 986.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Nations' announcement on the use of seized Iraqi assets to pay for the environmental effects of the Gulf war and its implications for the United Kingdom. [18727]

Dr. Liam Fox: The UN Compensation Commission recently announced that claims for environmental damage totalling US $32 billion have been received from 10 Governments by the deadline of 1 February 1997. Compensation will in due courses be paid from revenue derived from the sale of Iraqi oil, not from seized assets. The UK has claimed £1.4 million.

Albania

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 578–79, if he will list the (a) British and (b) Albanian organisations, individuals or firms in receipt of know-how fund money covering (i) advice on setting up investment funds and (ii) pre-investment feasibility studies. [18986]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The know-how fund contracted the British firm GMA Capital Markets Ltd. to advise on setting up and regulating the Tirana stock exchange and investment funds in Albania. The KHF gave no money to any Albanian organisation, individual or firm, support being provided through funding the cost of technical assistance for specific projects.

The British companies who have received money under the pre-investment feasibility studies scheme for prospective investment in Albania are:

Anglo Albanian Mining (Heritage House)

Hugh MacRae and Co. (Builders) Ltd.

Peter Streatfield

Eng-Alb Trading Company.

In each of these cases, following the receipt of a grant under the PIFS scheme, the investment by the British company has proceeded. No money was paid to any Albanian organisation, individual or firm through this scheme.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18803]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the information given by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–7.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18924]

Mr. Hanley: This Department, including the Overseas Development Administration, has agreed two PFI projects: Minerva, a small information technology system to archive electronic documents, and a vehicle services project initially for a small number of overseas posts. Projects have been advertised for the new Berlin embassy and accommodation in Beirut, Colombo, Lagos, Kiev and Sofia. Table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" reflects this Department's estimate of likely capital investment under these projects. In addition, this Department has invited interest in a project to provide a new global telecommunications system. A breakdown by project would be commercially sensitive at this stage.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Chancery Bank

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the procedures followed by the DTI, the Treasury and the Bank of England, in respect of the voluntary liquidation of Chancery bank; and if he will make a statement. [18704]

Mr. John M. Taylor: On 5 August 1993, my predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Tatton (Mr. Hamilton), announced the appointment of inspectors under section 432(2) of the Companies Act 1985 to investigate and report on the affairs of Chancery plc.

The appointment followed the appointment of administrators on 18 February 1991 and a subsequent voluntary arrangement approved by creditors.

The inspectors have not completed the report of their investigation, and I am unable to comment further until they have done so.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18936]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The figures in table 5.5 of the Red Book are the combined estimates of the level of private sector investment for the following planned projects: the Teddington site re-development, housing the National Physical Laboratory; resource accounting and budgeting; the Radiocommunications Agency's IS-IT strategic partnership; the Coal Authority's IT system for mining and surface damage reports—contract now signed; and three small IT projects in the DTI. Disaggregated figures are commercially sensitive at this stage.

Undischarged Bankrupts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many undischarged bankrupts there are in each county in England. [19298]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested is not held in this form. The Insolvency Act 1986 provides for the majority of bankrupts to be discharged automatically after three years or after two years in smaller, summary cases. The number of individuals against whom bankruptcy orders were made in the last three years for which figures are available were:

1993: 31,016

1994: 25,634

1995: 21,993.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures were available. [18807]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Mr. Spring) on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–7. Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Birmingham (Ministerial Visit)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of his visit to Birmingham on 17 February. [18423]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 March 1997]: The cost of the Birmingham business breakfast was approximately £14,000. More than 700 business men and women attended it.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Medical Training

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the total number of entrants to medical school in each of the last five years, indicating the number of graduates. [18602]

Mr. Forth: The information available is as follows:

Number of full-time home-domiciled[1] entrants to first degree medicine/dentistry courses

	Total number of entrants	Graduate entrants[3]	Non-graduate entrants[3]	Qualification not known[3]
1991–92	4,733	—	—	—
1992–93	4,883	—	—	—
1993–94	4,957	—	—	—
1994–95[2]	5,924	253	4,701	970
1995–96[2]	6,496	362	4,854	1,280

[1] Based on students who were in their first year of study.

[2] Figures collected on a new basis and not directly comparable with earlier years' figures.

[3] Figures prior to 1994–95 cannot be split between graduate and non-graduate entrants.

In addition, there were 474 full-time overseas entrants to first degree medicine and dentistry courses in the UK in 1994–95, of whom 18 were known graduates, and 634 in 1995–96, of whom 47 were known graduates.

National Curriculum (Drug Awareness)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has made, or is considering, to the Schools Curriculum and Assessment Authority on the drug awareness component of the life skills part of the national curriculum. [18955]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend has made no such representations. She will consider any recommendations from SCAA on the spiritual, moral, social and cultural dimensions of the curriculum in due course.

Drug Education

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has made to the other Departments since 26 February on the drug abuse resistance education scheme. [18956]

Mrs. Gillan: I wrote on Monday 3 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department to bring his attention to the debate on DARE of 26 February, Official Report, column 397–410. I copied my letter to my right hon. Friend the Lord President.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will study the evaluation of DARE by North Nottinghamshire Health Promotion. [18957]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend would welcome the opportunity to do so.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will call for a report from the Nottinghamshire county council on its secondary school booster scheme for DARE. [18959]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. Any information Nottinghamshire county council chooses to offer the Department will be received with interest.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she has taken to extend the DARE scheme. [18954]

Mrs. Gillan: Decisions on approaches to drug education remain a matter for individual schools.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the oral statement of the Lord President of the Council on 26 February, Official Report, columns 401–2, what is her response to the questions raised by the hon. Member for Nottingham, North regarding the DARE scheme. [18960]

Mrs. Gillan: I sought to set out my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's response to those questions during the debate. Broadly, while my right hon. Friend remains interested in the progress of the DARE programme in Nottinghamshire, she does not intend to promote or endorse one particular approach to drug education in schools above the many others that are serving our teachers and young people well in their particular circumstances.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will write to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North giving her view on the Office for Standards in Education report on drug education. [18958]

Mrs. Gillan: Yes.

Office for Standards in Education

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment who is responsible for inspecting those appointed by Ofsted; and what proposals she has to improve the supervision of Ofsted appointees. [18820]

Mr. Robin Squire: Ofsted is a Government department headed by the chief inspector of schools, who is responsible for appointing and registering inspectors. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which her Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18926]

Mr. Robin Squire: Table 5.5 shows the estimated capital spending through the private finance initiative in the Department's and Employment Service's own estates and infrastructure. As the estimate is based on the aggregate potential for PFI in these areas, it is not yet directly attributable to specific projects, other than those which have already been concluded. So far, these are two Employment Service computer projects: Employment Service communications and guidance system and windows integrated system for personnel.

PRIME MINISTER

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 28 February, Official Report, columns 419–20, if he will put forward proposals for a bilateral extradition agreement between the United Kingdom and Libya. [18735]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 5 March 1997]: No. The United Nations Security Council decided that Libya must surrender the accused for trial in Scotland or the USA.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his engagements for Thursday 6 March. [17885]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 6 March. [17886]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Organophosphates

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister from what date information was available to any Government Department about the dangers to health from the use of organophosphates; what action was then taken to ensure that all Departments considering their use were made conversant with the dangers; and if he will make a statement. [18824]

The Prime Minister: Organophosphates were first investigated for use as insecticides in the 1930s in Germany. Since then, information on the health effects of OPs has accumulated over time. Much of the information is in peer-reviewed scientific journals, books or World Health Organisation publications and is therefore available to all Government Departments as well as to the general public.

Government Departments receive advice and information on a regular and on-going basis about OPs and their possible effects on human health from a number of sources both external and internal. OP compounds have been reviewed on many occasions, including the independent expert committees which advise the Government on pesticides and veterinary products. They have not recommended a ban or suspension of the use of this class of compounds.

Governor-General Visits

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will recommend that an invitation be issued to (a) the Governor-General of Australia, (b) the Governor-General of Canada and (c) the Governor-General of New Zealand to make a visit to the United Kingdom of equivalent status to a state visit. [18013]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 4 March 1997]: No.

TREASURY

Earth Summit II

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what preparations his Department is making for earth summit II, and for the preparatory conferences leading up to the summit. [18496]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Department of the Environment is taking the lead within Government on the preparations for the UN General Assembly special session in June and I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that the Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Minister for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison), gave him on 5 March 1997, Official Report, column 634.

Pension Plans

Mr. Olner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the net present value of savings made from reduced expenditure on tax relief paid on contributions made to appropriate personal pensions in (a) 2025, (b) 2030, (c) 2040 and (d) 2050, if (i) all and (ii) half of those earning under £10,000 per annum who are currently opted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme into APPs were to rejoin SERPS. [15591]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The yield from reduced expenditure on tax relief for minimum contributions from the national insurance fund to appropriate personal pensions is tentatively estimated at about £10 million for 2025–26 and 2030–31, and negligible by 2040–41, if all holders of APPs with earnings of under £10,000 per annum were to rejoin SERPS, and about half these amounts if half of those were to rejoin SERPS. The figures are at 1996–97 prices and have been discounted.

The costing assumes that these APP holders in 1996–97 would otherwise continue as APP holders over the projected period. In addition, they are assumed to have the same earnings in these future years in real terms as they did in the base year.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mr. David Kyle

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what role Mr. David Kyle played in preparing the Crown case in (a) the 1989 appeal of the men convicted of killing Carl Bridgewater and (b) the 1987 and 1991 appeals of the six people convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings. [18255]

The Attorney-General: Mr. David Kyle played no part in preparing the Crown case in the 1989 appeal of the men convicted of killing Carl Bridgewater. He also played no such part in relation to the 1987 appeal by the six people convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings. In relation to the 1991 appeal by these persons, the preparation of the Crown case was undertaken within the special casework division of what was then Crown Prosecution Service headquarters casework. Mr. Kyle was head of division at that time and in that capacity had supervisory responsibility for all cases dealt with on his division.

Ms Fiona King

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what role Ms Fiona King played in preparing the Crown case in (a) the 1989 appeal of the three men convicted of killing Carl Bridgewater and (b) the 1987 and 1991 appeals of the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings. [18257]

The Attorney-General: Miss Fiona King is away, but examination of her postings indicate that she has at no time been assigned to any part of the Crown Prosecution Service which had responsibility for preparing the Crown case in the 1989 appeal of the men convicted of killing Carl Bridgewater or in the 1987 and 1991 appeals of the six people convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney-General what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18818]

The Attorney-General: I refer to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–07. Additional or more recent information is as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service: 97.3 per cent. of bills were paid within agreed terms or 30 days during June to November 1996.

Serious Fraud Office: 91.3 per cent. of bills were paid within agreed terms or 30 days from April 1996 to date'.

Treasury Solicitor's Department: 93.7 per cent. of bills were paid within agreed terms or 30 days during June 1996 to January 1997.

Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers: 95.7 per cent. of bills were paid within 30 days during June 1996 to February 1997.

Government Property Lawyers: 99.5 per cent. of bills were paid within 30 days during April 1996 to January 1997.

' Provisional figure.

DEFENCE

Psychological Operations Units

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many psychological operations units are established in the field army; how many personnel are assigned to these units; and what are his plans to expand or establish additional units for this role. [17987]

Mr. Soames: We have one psychological operations unit, to which two personnel are assigned permanently to provide instruction in the psychological operations role. This unit can be expanded when required. These arrangements are currently under review.

Military Provost Guard Service

Mr. George: To ask the secretary of State for Defence how many applications have been received to date for posts in the Military Provost Guard Service; how many individuals have been recruited to the Military Provost Guard Service; how many individuals have completed their training satisfactorily; what is the proposed Military Provost Guard Service complement, broken down by rank, for (a) Chicksands, (b) Chilwell, (c) Donnington and (d) Wilton; what is the rent which the Military Provost Guard Service staff will pay for their accommodation; and what services are provided for this rent. [18104]

Mr. Soames: Recruitment to the Military Provost Guard Service is proceeding satisfactorily. Some 507 statements of interest in the 118 MPGS pilot scheme posts have been received; 47 candidates have been attested to date and there are firm candidates for all but a few of the remaining posts. There have been no training failures. I have decided to withhold the details of the complements at individual sites under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to government information, relating to defence, security and industrial relations. MPGS soldiers recruited to the pilot scheme will pay the same charges for service married and single quarters as general service personnel and will receive the same services.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date it was decided that the British forces involved in the liberation of Kuwait would take supplies of organophosphates to the Gulf for use as pesticides; when they were first used there; what additional supplies were purchased locally; when these additional supplies were used; and what checks were made about the safety of these additional pesticides before they were used. [18823]

Mr. Soames: Full details of what is now known about the use of organophosphate pesticides by British Service personnel during the Gulf war are contained in the organophosphate pesticide investigation team report which was published on 10 December 1996. A copy of this report was also placed in the Library of the House.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the extent of the outbreak and the period that MRSA was present at the Cambridge military hospital, Aldershot, the numbers of patients involved and whether it contributed to or caused death. [18992]

Mr. Soames: During the period from 1 to 25 May 1994, the Cambridge military hospital experienced a widespread infection of methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus. The strain of MRSA was unusual in that it was characterised by a rapid rate of spread but with low virulence. No patient at the hospital developed symptoms of MRSA infection, although a number became colonised with the organism.

The outbreak was rapidly and aggressively controlled. There were no admissions to the hospital between 16 and 24 May 1994. All hospital staff were screened for MRSA and, as the outbreak was widespread, were treated with an antibiotic. A thorough disinfection programme was carried out in the hospital. No evidence of MRSA was found in the hospital after 25 May 1994.

There are no indications that this outbreak of MRSA contributed to, or caused, death among patients at the hospital.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18927]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The figures in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" represent my Department's estimates of capital spending by the private sector under private finance initiative projects that had been agreed by October 1996. The projects include:

White vehicles in Germany

Army logistic information systems agency

RAF white vehicles

Training administration and financial management information systems

Naval recruiting and training agency

HMS Nelson facilities management

Mechanical handling equipment vehicles.

For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it would be inappropriate to reveal details of these estimates against individual projects. I am, therefore, withholding this information under exemption 13 of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18819]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 December 1996, columns 506–7 by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmonds (Mr. Spring). Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Joint Services Command and Staff College

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at the time Ministers took decisions on the future of command and staff training what contribution that reorganisation was expected to make to the overall annual savings from 1996–97 arising from the defence costs study; what is the total cost in 1996–97 of those parts of single service command and staff training which will eventually be replaced by the joint services command and staff college; and what is his estimate of the costs of the JSCSC in 1997–98 and 1999–2000. [17057]

Mr. Soames: The proposals to form a joint services command and staff college was initially put forward in the "Front Line First" studies. These constituted internal departmental advice to Ministers, the details of which I am withholding under exemption 2 of the code of practice on access to Government information. Financial information at this stage was indicative only.

The decision to implement the JSCSC was based primarily on the operational need for enhanced joint training. Some savings were initially suggested but were on the basis of considerably reduced student numbers, which subsequent analysis found to be unrealistic.

The JSCSC came into being on 1 January 1997—part way through the financial year 1996–97—which also makes the year a typical in course programme terms. Accurate costs for the three single service colleges and the joint service defence college at Greenwich, even for the previous year, 1995–96, are not available because the MOD's cash accounting system does not enable a wide range of support costs to be disaggregated from larger sums covering more than one establishment, such as Camberley and Sandhurst, or from sums covering more than one function at the same location, as was the case at Greenwich. This should be addressed by the introduction of resource accounting and budgeting.

The estimated cost of the JSCSC in 1997–98 is £30 million. This applies to the JSCSC at its interim sites, mainly Bracknell, and for reasons similar to those given above is likely still to be slightly underestimated; 1999–00 is also atypical because the move from the interim to the permanent site is due to take place during the summer of 1999. The first full year of operation at the permanent site will be 2000–01 for which estimated costs, for the facilities and services provided by the contractor as well as MOD-provided teaching and directing staff, are also approximately £30 million.

DERA (Support Services Division)

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to complete the sale of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's support services division; what are the reasons behind the delay in completion of the sale; if APAX Partners has agreed bulk transfer terms for staff pensions with the Government Actuary's Department; and what bulk transfer terms for staff pensions were agreed in previous privatisations of Ministry of Defence services or agencies. [18107]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have not yet been able to reach agreement on acceptable terms with APAX and have, therefore, decided to open negotiations with CinVen, the other financial institution that was on the original shortlist. We will conclude a deal only if and when mutually satisfactory terms have been agreed. I expect to have come to a decision within a matter of days rather than weeks.

Regarding staff pensions, there will now have to be further negotiations with CinVen over bulk transfer terms. Previous MOD organisations have generally involved an agreement on this issue and I hope that the offer of similar terms will prove acceptable.

NATO Strategic Concept

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans NATO has to revise and update its strategic concept. [18722]

Mr. Soames: NATO's strategic concept was adopted by Alliance Heads of Government at their meeting in Rome in November 1991. NATO's strategy has evolved since then in the light of changes in the European security situation, and this process will continue. Whether the strategic concept itself should be updated to take account of those changes is under consideration within NATO. Any decision to update the strategic concept would be a matter for NATO Ministers.

TRANSPORT

Salisbury Bypass

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his proposals for the Salisbury bypass. [18902]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport announced on 29 October 1996 that they were minded to confirm the orders to authorise construction of the bypass. However, before reaching a final decision, they have afforded interested parties an opportunity to make representations on the effects of induced traffic and alteration of a section of the proposed route to take it away from housing at Harnham, as recommended by the inspector who held the year-long public inquiry. They also instructed the Highways Agency to review three matters: the possibility of realigning the section of the route across the River Avon floodplain, south of Salisbury, to avoid the newly designated east Harnham meadows SSSI; the scope for further mitigating the landscape impact of the bypass in this sensitive area; and the need for any measures in addition to those already proposed to mitigate the potential impact of the bypass on the proposed River Avon special area of conservation. The Highways Agency report on the reviews has just been received and will now be considered by my right hon. Friends.

Rail Employment

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the total number of people employed by British Rail before the start of the privatisation process; and if he will estimate the number employed on the railways at the current time. [19004]

Mr. Watts: On 31 March 1994, the British Railways Board employed 121,052 people. The latest available estimate of the total number employed in the railway industry is 94,600 people employed in September 1996.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in Table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18937]

Mr. Watts: The figures underlying table 5.5 relate to expected expenditure on the following PFI projects.

Italicised entries denote projects not yet signed.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

CAA New Scottish Centre

CAA Oceanic Flight Data Processing System

Croydon Tramlink

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

DBFO roads (first eight schemes)

DBFO roads (tranche 2)

Highways Agency pavement management system

Heathrow Express

LT "connect" (Communications)

LT Power

LT "Prestige" (Ticketing)

Midland Metro

Northern Line trains.

Details of individual projects are commercially sensitive.

Railfreight Distribution

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the total amount payable to Her Majesty's Government for the sale of Railfreight Distribution. [19003]

Mr. Watts: The British Railways Board has yet to finalise the sale of Railfreight Distribution.

Ferry Safety

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to stage a trial evacuation of 1,000 passengers from a roll-on/roll-off ferry in realistic conditions. [18771]

Mr. Bowis: None, since "realistic conditions" would imply damage to the ship and potential injury to the participants.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18808]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Economic Secretary on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–7. Any additional information can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Channel Tunnel

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is (a) the fastest time the channel tunnel has been evacuated; (b) how many doors in the tunnel were open during that exercise; and (c) if the air fell to the point where it equalised between the central tunnel and the running tunnels. [19009]

Mr. Watts: (a) 85 minutes timed from the train coming to a stop until passengers reached the open air. (b) A maximum of three cross passage doors were open on this occasion. (c) No.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the present normal working pressure of the central service tunnel in the channel tunnel; and how many doors can be opened before the pressure equalises between all three tunnels. [19007]

Mr. Watts: The pressure in the service tunnel is maintained within a range from 2,000 pascals near the ventilation shafts to 500 pascals at the midpoint. No more than three cross passage doors should be open if overpressure is to be maintained in the service tunnel.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new semi-open wagons have been purchased for use in the channel tunnel since 1 January; and what evaluation has been made of their safety case. [19010]

Mr. Watts: No semi-open wagons have been purchased since 1 January.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if there was smoke in either of the two tunnels not affected by fire during the channel tunnel fire of November 1996. [19008]

Mr. Watts: Details of the behaviour of smoke in the channel tunnel fire in November 1996 are being investigated by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority and will be contained in the authority's report on the fire. I understand that this will be completed shortly.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the French Government about the channel tunnel fire of November 1996. [18653]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 4 March 1997]: The intergovernmental commission meets on a regular basis to discuss the operation of the channel tunnel on behalf of the Governments. The Channel Tunnel Safety Authority also meets regularly.

The heavy goods vehicle shuttle fire on the 18 November has been discussed at each of the meetings held by these bodies since November 1996.

In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has corresponded with the French Transport Minister, Bernard Pons, about the fire.

Departmental Revenue Hypothecation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding the hypothecation of revenue from his Department. [19002]

Mr. Bowis: Proceeds of asset sales do sometimes go to the Department concerned. The proposed privatisation of London Underground is, however, the first time this approach has been adopted in a privatisation. This is in recognition of the particular needs and circumstances of London Underground.

British Railways Board

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has set the British Railways Board an external finance limit consistent with his latest estimate of its outturn for 1996–97. [19413]

Mr. Watts: I have today set the British Railways Board an external finance limit of £10 million for 1996–97. This limit is consistent with the estimate of 1996–97 outturn provision for the railway industry of £780 million announced by my right hon. Friend in his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw) of 26 November 1996, Official Report, column 160.

Lorry Weights

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has reached a decision on maximum lorry weights following the closure of the period for responses to the Government's consultation document on lorry weights. [19539]

Mr. Watts: We have received some 250 responses to the document; these are being considered very carefully and the issues involved will be analysed extensively. Until that work is complete, there can be no decision on altering the present general maximum lorry weight, but the separate proposal put forward in the consultation document to allow lorries engaged in piggyback road-rail operations to operate at up to 44 tonnes, if they have six axles and road-friendly suspension, has been generally welcomed as a measure to get more long-distance freight onto rail. I have therefore asked officials to proceed with the necessary consultation on draft regulations to put this into effect. Subject to the outcome of that consultation, I expect the regulations to be laid shortly. This decision is independent of the outcome of the Government's consideration of the general maximum lorry weight.

Light Dues

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on light dues. [19540]

Sir George Young: I am pleased to announce that light dues for 1997–98 will be reduced by about 4.6 per cent. from 43p to 41p net ton with consequential reductions to other changes. This reduction, coming after four years of stability, takes rates back to below those established in 1992. It is a clear demonstration of the increasing efficiency of the three general lighthouse authorities.

I am announcing changes to the light dues regulations which are designed to simplify some aspects of collection and will remove the liability to pay light dues in certain cases. I shall be consulting the industries concerned on other possible changes in the distribution of light dues.

Train Track Fences

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving trains have occurred in each of the past five years as a result of people gaining access to the track through damaged fences. [18239]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 4 March 1997]: This information is not available in the form requested. However, appendix 8B of "Railway Safety—HM Chief Inspector of Railways' Annual Report on the safety record of the railways in Great Britain for 1995–96", gives statistics on the number of trespassers killed and injured for the past five years. The figures are included in the table:

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Trespassers	150 (7)	132 (5)	121 (7)	119 (6)	109 (7)
Suicides	150 (1)	132 (0)	141 (1)	135 (0)	137 (0)
Total	300 (8)	264 (5)	262 (8)	254 (6)	246 (7)

1. Figures in brackets denote the number of children under the age of 16 years included in the total.

2. Figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96 have been revised following notification of coroners' verdicts for inquests that have been outstanding at the time the previous statistics had been prepared. Figures for 1995–96 are provisional.

The report also highlights accidents to trespassers and measures the inspectorate, the industry and the British transport police are adopting to combat these accidents. Copies of the report are available in both Libraries of the House.

The state of fencing is not recorded as a contributory factor on the Health and Safety Executive's accident database. In addition, the state of the fencing is not always mentioned on the written notifications of incidents received by the HSE from railway operators. However, during any HSE investigations of incidents involving trespassers, and in particular incidents involving children, the condition of the fencing will be scrutinised closely and enforcement action taken should HSE consider the fencing to be inadequate.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from his Department and its agencies during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17060]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Financial year	Number of individual items (including information technology)	Total value
1995–96	409	£375,354

1. For the purposes of departmental accounting, centralised information is collected for complete financial years and in a single category covering losses arising from theft, fraud, arson, sabotage or other causes.

2. The figures in the table are for the Department and all its agencies.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many former service personnel who participated in the nuclear tests programmes in Australia and the south Pacific have been awarded war pensions after they developed (a) leukaemia, excluding chronic lymphatic or (b) multiple myeloma; when was the first time that former service personnel were awarded war pensions after developing these illnesses; and if he will make a statement. [17952]

Mr. Heald: The information is as follows:

Awards made in respect of leukaemia (excluding chronic lymphatic leukaemia)

Four war disablement pensions and seven war widows' pensions.

Awards made in respect of multiple myeloma

Ten war disablement pensions and three war widows' pensions.

The first awards were made in 1988 following publication of the National Radiological Protection Board's first report on the subsequent health of nuclear test participants. The report did not causally relate multiple myeloma or leukaemia to participation, but its evidence was regarded as raising a reasonable doubt—the standard of proof required for the award of war pension in such cases—that those conditions excluding chronic lymphatic leukaemia, may have resulted from participation in the tests.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many jobseeker's allowance cases have gone to appeal; and what percentage of these have been successful. [17855]

Mr. Roger Evans: Some 4,460 jobseeker's allowance appeals have been received by the Independent Tribunal Service and, of those appeals cleared at hearing, 36.5 per cent. have been successful.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the locations of the meteorological stations on the basis of whose readings eligibility for cold weather payments are determined for each part of Wales, and if each case its (a) height above sea level and (b) proximity to the coast. [18508]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Weather station	Height above mean sea level (metres)	Proximity to coastline (kilometres)
Aberporth	133	less than 5
Capel Curig	216	[1]40
Crosby	9	less than 5
Great Malvern	44	[1]60
Mumbles Head	32	less than 5
Rhoose	65	less than 5
Rhyl	77	less than 5
Sennybridge	307	[1]30
Shawbury	72	[1]60
Valley	10	less than 5

[1] Rounded to the nearest 10 kilometres.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect the Social Security (Adjudication) and Child Support Amendment (No. 2) Regulations 1996 on the number of oral hearings held by social security appeal tribunals, disability appeal tribunals and child support appeal tribunals; and what information he has collated on the effect they have already had. [18373]

Mr. Roger Evans: An evaluation of the impact of the Social Security (Adjudication) and Child Support Amendment (No. 2) Regulations which came in to force on 21 October 1996 will be carried out over the first year of operation. Information is being collected and we expect to have interim results approximately six months after implementation.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list how many men made contributions to (a) contracted-out pension schemes by scheme type and (b) the state earnings-related pension scheme in the latest year for which figures are available. [18721]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

It is estimated that in 1991, the latest date for which information is available, there were approximately 5.9 million men in contributory contracted-out occupational pension schemes.

The number of men with appropriate personal pensions is estimated to be 3.4 million in 1991–92 and 3.6 million in 1994–95.

The total number of men accruing unabated SERPS entitlement is estimated to be 3.5 million in 1991–92 and 3.4 million in 1993–94, the latest date for which information is available.

War Pensions (Gulf War)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make arrangements for an urgent review of war pension claims made by ex-service men and women who were exposed to the effects of the use of organophosphates during service in the Gulf war. [18825]

Mr. Heald: No. Under the war pensions scheme, the initial onus is on the claimant to show disablement. Where disablement has been shown to exist, present medical evidence does not support a causal relation to exposure to organophosphates. Present medical understanding is that exposure would result in symptoms arising in close time relation. Many claims made as a result of service in the Gulf, however, are made in respect of symptoms which arose several years after service ended.

Nevertheless, where disablement has been shown and where the claim is made within seven years of termination of service, because the onus is on the Secretary of State to show beyond reasonable doubt that disablement is not attributable to service, unless there is a clear non-service cause of disablement, war pensions have been, and will continue to be awarded.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18806]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–7 by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Mr. Spring).

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18935]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 13 January, Official Report, column 149.

The private finance initiative schemes in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" include the national insurance recording system 2, Newcastle estate development, the Benefits Agency—Post Office Counters Ltd.), access to corporate data and private sector resource initiative for management of the estate projects.

State Pensions

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the additional cost of linking state pensions to average earnings in Wales during the last five years. [17876]

Mr. Heald [holding answer Thursday 27 February]: The information is in the table.

£ million

Year	Gross additional cost of uprating basic retirement pensions by average earnings in Wales	Net additional cost of uprating basic retirement pensions by average earnings in Wales
1992–93	49	36
1993–94	85	61
1994–95	87	62
1995–96	119	86
1996–97	109	80

Sources:

1. The numbers in receipt of basic retirement pension and the average amount received have been estimated based on a 5 per cent. sample of live cases—10 per cent. in 1992–93 and 1993–94.

2. Earnings growth in Wales has been estimated by the Office for National Statistics, using the new earnings survey.

Notes:

1. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £1 million.

2. The NES is calculated in April each year and the figures have been adjusted to provide figures for September allowing a comparison with the September retail prices index that is used for uprating RP. The NES figures have been adjusted by taking the ratio of the NES increase from April to April and the average earnings index April to April increases and multiplying this by the AEI increases from April to September. The headline AEI whole economy figure is used.

3. The gross expenditure is estimated by calculating the percentage increase in standard basic RP and then applying this percentage increase to the actual total expenditure on RP in Wales.

4. The net expenditure takes account of income related benefits that would otherwise have been paid. The offset ratios have been calculated using the policy simulation model which is based on information from the family expenditure survey. For 1992–93, the 1993–94 offset ratio has been applied.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Anglo-Irish Secretariat

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the religious breakdown of those public appointments made each year since 1986 on the proposal of the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish Secretariat. [17703]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not available.

Water Cannon

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times water cannons have been used by the security forces in Northern Ireland since 1967; for what reasons they were used; on what dates they were used; in what places they were used; and if the security forces are currently authorised to use water cannons. [17951]

Sir John Wheeler: It is not possible to provide details of the use of water cannons in Northern Ireland as no separate statistical records of their use were kept at the time. It is believed they were last used around 1970.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary is authorised to use "reasonable force" in situations of public disorder, which could include the use of water cannons. The force does not, however, hold any water cannons and has not done so for some years.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18929]

Sir John Wheeler: The following table gives a breakdown of the Northern Ireland figures, which are the best estimate of what NI Departments expect to be agreed. The list is subject to variation as project time scales may change, new projects may arise and some of those listed may not be taken forward if they fail the value for money test.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18813]

Sir John Wheeler: Since the implementation of a revised rigorous and consistent method of calculating payment performance from 1 June 1996 by HM Treasury, the Northern Ireland Departments and Northern Ireland Office payment performance in percentage terms are:

	Percentage of invoices paid within 30 days or contract payment terms
1 June 1996 to 31 August 1996	94.0
1 September 1996 to 30 November 1996	94.3

The figures for the quarter ending February 1997 are not yet available.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, Official Report, column 408, if he will make a statement on the possible link between the recent outbreak and spread of Newcastle disease and the normal prohibition of the Newcastle disease vaccination. [17241]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 24 February 1997]: Vaccination against Newcastle disease has been prohibited in Northern Ireland until recently because of the Province's status as a non-vaccinating area has effectively prohibited the importation of poultry—other than eggs and day-old chicks—from vaccinating countries. That has helped to prevent the introduction of Newcastle disease and other poultry diseases from which Northern Ireland has been free. Vaccination also makes it technically more difficult to detect and diagnose Newcastle disease if it does occur. Moreover, Newcastle disease occurs even in countries which pursue a policy of vaccination. In such countries it is generally only the breeding flocks and laying flocks which are vaccinated; broiler flocks, which represent the majority of birds in any national flock are normally not vaccinated. The industry relies on maternal immunity to give a degree of protection. In such circumstances, broiler flocks are those most at risk and worldwide experience shows that a disease challenge can override the maternal immunity especially in the final two to three weeks of a broiler's life when the maternal immunity is waning. It is therefore very unlikely that a vaccination policy would have prevented the present outbreaks in broiler flocks which have occurred in Northern Ireland. Where vaccination, especially spray vaccination, is useful, however, is as a means of damping down the spread of Newcastle disease once it appears, and that is the policy which is currently being applied in Northern Ireland.

Scientists

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many scientists were employed by his Department and each of his Department's agencies on (a) the most recent date available and (b) for each year since 1979 on matters equivalent to those covered by MAFF; and if he will list each agency, service or central laboratory employing scientists on such projects. [18168]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 5 March 1997]: It is possible to provide only details of the numbers of staff employed in each year since 1990. To provide details for earlier years would involve an expensive and time-consuming exercise to extract the information. I am advising therefore that disproportionate costs apply other than where the information is provided.

	Number
February 1997	446
March 1996	449
March 1995	460
March 1994	483
March 1993	483
March 1992	465
March 1991	476
March 1990	448

The Department employs the staff at two main centres—Veterinary sciences division, Stoney road, Belfast, and the Agricultural and Food science centre, Newforge lane, Belfast.

WALES

Winter Mortality Rates

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what have been the excess weekly mortality rates in Wales for (a) December 1996 and (b) January 1997 in terms of numbers; and how these compare with the weekly death rates for the same period in each of the previous five years. [17203]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The data for Wales, provided by the Office for National Statistics, on deaths occurring each week—Monday to Sunday—and the annual weekly average are shown in the following tables:

Week beginning	1996–97	1995–96[1]	1994–95[2]	1993–94[3]	1992–93[4]	1991–92[5]

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the total revenue of local authorities in Wales for the current financial year from (a) council tax, domestic rates and community charge and (b) non-domestic rates; and what were the equivalent figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96. [18579]

Mr. Hague: Local authorities have budgeted to collect £449 million by way of council tax and will receive £459 million in respect of redistributed non-domestic rates for the current financial year. The equivalent figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96 are £342 million and £381 million for council tax and community charge arrears and £464 million and £520 million for non-domestic rates. The figures for council tax income are gross of council tax benefit grant.

Public Bodies (Freemasonry)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it a requirement for senior executives in non-departmental bodies in Wales to enter membership of masonic organisations in a register available for public inspection; and if he will make a statement. [18578]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to require the establishment of such registers.

Child Labour (Consultation Exercise)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales to which organisations (i) working in Wales and based in Wales and (ii) working in Wales although based elsewhere he has sent a copy of the document, "Employment of Children: Results of Consultation Exercise"; on what date the document was circulated; and what plans he has to implement the changes necessary to implement the document's proposals. [18724]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The document "Employment of Children: Results of Consultation Exercise" was sent on 13 December 1996 to:

Chief executives and directors of education, local authorities in Wales;

The Secretary, Welsh Local Government Association;

Welsh Group of Education Welfare Officers;

British Medical Association, Wales

Children in Wales;

Health Promotion, Wales

National Farmers' Union, Wales;

National Federation of Women's Institutes, Wales;

National Union of Teachers, Wales;

Royal College of Nursing, Welsh Board;

Sports Council for Wales.

Regulations are being prepared to begin the process of implementing in England, Scotland and Wales changes affecting employment of children below minimum school leaving age, to conform with the European directive on the protection of young people at work.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18938]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The figures in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" show estimated capital spending by the private sector under the PFI. The £70 million estimated for 1997–98 includes one contract that has already been signed, for the Osiris information technology project. The remainder of the £70 million is made up of projects for which contracts have not yet been signed. Among these are projects for a new general hospital at Baglan; A55 improvements across Anglesey; Bute Avenue, Cardiff and provision of a new community hospital at Chepstow.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18810]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Economic Secretary, on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 507-8. Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Primary Class Sizes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local education authority the number of classes in primary schools with (a) 31 to 35, (b) 36 to 40, (c) 41 to 45 and (d) 46 or more pupils for each of the last three years for which information is available. [18941]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 6 November 1996, column 514.

Inward Investment

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the target area for the new Welsh Development Agency inward investment programme extends to cover the St. Asaph business park. [18987]

Mr. Hague: The St. Asaph business park is within the area which has been defined as the eastern A55 corridor.

Homeless Households

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many households have been accepted as homeless by local authorities in rural areas in Wales in each year since 1979; [18671]

(2) how many households have been accepted as homeless by local authorities in Wales in each year since 1979. [18672]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information on the number of households accepted by local authorities as homeless is provided in the following table.

Health Authority Funding

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his plans with regard to the current resource allocation formula for distributing resources to health authorities in Wales. [19566]

Mr. Hague: I intend to review the formula that is used to distribute resources between health authorities. Its aim will be to test, and, where possible, improve on, the existing approach and to ensure that resources are distributed to health authorities in the most effective and equitable way.

The review will examine the current weighted capitation formula, and, in doing so, will cover a number of issues including the incorporation of new resources of data that may improve our understanding of the relative health need of authorities, whether the current formula adequately reflects the geographical differences between areas, and whether it would be appropriate to take account of new factors.

The review will be led by a resource allocation working group consisting of members of the Welsh Office Health Department, health professional group and health statistics and analysis unit. Health authorities, trusts and GPs will be invited to play a full part in the review through membership of the working group. The group will also seek expert opinions and advice from across the service and other UK health departments as necessary. I expect the working group to report in November this year and to feed its results into the allocation process for 1998–99.

Housing for Wales

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made with the sale of Housing for Wales's loan portfolio. [19567]

Mr. Hague: Contracts were exchanged with NatWest Markets yesterday which establish the terms on which the portfolio will be sold.

I cannot yet provide a final figure for the receipt because the purchase price is subject to changes in the portfolio itself and to movements in the gilt rate between now and completion at the end of March. A receipt exceeding the book value of £58 million was anticipated in spending plans to the current financial year, and will be realised.

The receipt will be subject to subsequent adjustment should any of the loan characteristics differ from those described in the contract in any way that results in a financial loss for either party. This was anticipated in the minute which was laid before Parliament on 10 February. No other warranty apart from the basic undertaking about the ownership of the loans has been given.

ENVIRONMENT

Social Housing (Waltham Forest)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new units of social housing have been provided in the London borough of Waltham Forest in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [18109]

Mr. Clappison: Housing associations are currently the main providers of new social housing. Local authorities' primary housing tasks are to act locally as strategic and enabling bodies and to manage their own stock efficiently.

The publication "Local Housing Statistics" shows estimates of housebuilding completions for each local authority area in England, as reported to the Department. This covers all the London boroughs, including Waltham Forest. It shows completions by sector, including activity by local authorities and housing associations.

"Local Housing Statistics" issue number 103 shows figures for 1986 to 1990; number 105 shows figures for 1991: number 109 covers 1992; number 110 covers 1993; number 117 covers 1994; and number 118 covers 1995. Figures for 1996 as a whole for individual authorities are not yet published.

Copies of this publication are in the Library.

Rock Characterisation Facility, Sellafield

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of the proposed rock characterisation facility near Sellafield on the baseline hydrogeology at the site. [17976]

Mr. Gummer: This is one of the issues which parties to the planning appeal have raised, at the public inquiry and in subsequent correspondence, which I am considering.

Environmental Trusts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that the environmental trusts have sufficient resources to carry out their work effectively; [18572]

(2) when he expects the environmental trusts to announce their first contributions to environmental projects; [18573]

(3) what steps he is taking to ensure the speedy development of projects arising from the work of the environmental trusts. [18574]

Mr. Clappison: Entrust is the regulatory body—appointed by Customs and Excise—for the environmental bodies scheme. There is an agreed formula to provide it with sufficient funding to carry out its work effectively.

The individual environmental trusts will, of course, be funded via the landfill tax rebate and a contribution from the landfill operator—the rebate is worth up to 90 per cent. of the amount donated subject to a ceiling of 20 per cent. of the companies total tax liability.

Responsibility for the environmental bodies scheme lies with Entrust. As of February 1997, Entrust has sent out 800 application forms and enrolled around 135 bodies. Entrust is aware of approximately £330,000 of donations and a further £1,500,000 of pledges that have been made to date.

Entrust is responsible for promoting the scheme and I understand that it is seeking marketing advice as to how it can best achieve this. Representatives of Entrust have spoken at numerous conferences held to promote the speedy development of projects.

Employers' Insurance Policies

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make a statement on his review of the Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969; [18614]

(2) if he will introduce measures to facilitate the tracing of an employer's insurance policy documents and insurer's details when that employer has ceased trading. [18613]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department is currently reviewing the Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969, including the problem of identifying the insurers of companies who have ceased to trade. I will announce the outcome of the review in due course.

Hedgerows

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if the Government will publish in full the ERM consultants' analysis report of the responses to the draft hedgerow regulations; [19006]

(2) how many responses were received to the Government's consultation paper on the draft hedgerow regulations; and how many responses were in favour of incorporating landscape as one of the criteria for defining an important hedgerow. [19005]

Mr. Clappison: Copies of the full report on the analysis of the responses to the Government's consultation have been placed in the Library of the House, and are available, price £10, from Environmental Resources Management. In addition, the executive summary of the report is available free from my Department and arrangements have been made for individual responses to be placed on deposit in the library of my Department.

Some 465 responses were received by 23 December 1996. A total of 100 comments related to the landscape and amenity value of hedgerows, most of which were in favour of incorporating landscape and amenity importance as explicit criteria in the draft Regulations.

The Government have responded positively to these criticisms by providing a new criterion, which recognises the particular landscape and amenity value of hedgerows that run alongside public rights of way. In addition, landscape importance is an inherent feature in almost all the criteria. For example, historic field patterns are fundamental landscape features, and the diversity of plant species and features—such as trees and hedge banks—that attract a range of wildlife may also give a hedge its significance in the landscape.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many non-metropolitan counties will exist in England when the outcome of the recent review is fully implemented; and by how many the number will have changed since 1 April 1992. [18885]

Sir Paul Beresford: There will be 75 non-metropolitan county areas in England when the recent review is fully implemented, compared to 39 at 1 April 1992. However, only 36 will have county councils. The remaining 39 will be served by unitary councils and 36 of these will be part of historic counties for ceremonial purposes, the exceptions being Bristol, Herefordshire and Rutland.

Energy Efficiency Grants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many house energy efficiency scheme grants were paid in the periods (a) 1 April 1995–31 December 1995, (b) 1 April 1996–31 December 1996 and (c) 1 April 1995–31 March 1996; [18887]

(2) how many home energy efficiency scheme grants he expects to be made during 1996–97; and how many will be paid at the lower rate. [18888]

Mr. Clappison: The numbers of grants paid under the home energy efficiency scheme in the specified periods are as follows:

1 April 1995 to 31 December 1995: 451,063

1 April 1996 to 31 December 1996: 310,992

1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996; 627,383.

During 1996–97, I expect well over 400,000 grants to be paid; some 4,000 are likely to be at the 25 per cent. grant rate. Already, more than 2 million grants worth around £350 million have been paid since this highly regarded scheme began, helping the most vulnerable people to keep warm and use less fuel.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18925]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Within the Department of Environment's area of responsibility PFI contracts have been signed for:

(a) Docklands light railway Lewisham extension (capital investment of £150 million);

(b) Waltham Forest housing action trust (£15 million); and

(c) Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre (£4 million).

Capital investment in the survey period will be £103 million.

Further capital investment of £123 million is anticipated during the survey years on contracts under negotiation for:

(i) Health and Safety Laboratory (estate rationalisation);

(ii) Countryside Commission (information technology);

(iii) Docklands exhibition centre; and

(iv) DOE (pay and personnel system).

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18804]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Mr. Spring) on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–7. Any additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Water Pollution

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last (a) commissioned and (b) published a report on the prevention of cryptosporidium contamination of drinking water supplies. [18886]

Mr. Clappison: Following a waterborne outbreak of cryptosporidiosis in 1989, my Department jointly with the Department of Health set up an expert group under the late Sir John Badenoch which made a study and published its first report in 1990. The recommended research was put in hand and the group published its final report in 1995. These reports made a number of recommendations on good practice, particularly on monitoring and the operation of treatment works. Both reports were widely circulated to water companies, local authorities and health authorities.

Cancer Studies

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for which cancer-causing organism the Health and Safety Executive in 1994 temporarily banned the research which was being conducted by Birmingham university department of caner studies; and if he will place papers relating to the experimentation in the Library. [18996]

Sir Paul Beresford: The work at Birmingham university involved the expression of oncogenes—genes implicated in the cancer process—in adenovirus vectors and oncogenes in retroviral vectors. Following an HSE inspection, two prohibition notices were issued, which required the university to undertake full risk assessments and also to improve the standard of containment. The university subsequently compiled with these notices.

I will shortly place in the Library papers relating to the above work at the university, which are in HSE's possession.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Health and Safety Executive approved and subsequently monitored the experiments conducted by the Oxford university institute of virology at Wytham Woods in 1994; and if he will make a statement. [18991]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State for the Environment, acting jointly with the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, issued a consent on 12 April 1994 to the institute of virology and environmental microbiology to carry out experiments at the university farm, Wytham, Oxfordshire. The consent was issued in accordance with part VI of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 which require the agreement of the Health and Safety Executive. A copy of the consent was placed on the public register in accordance with the legislation.

The experimental site was inspected by one of Her Majesty's specialist inspectors of biosafety from the Health and Safety Executive in June 1994 and again in September 1995. The inspections covered both human health and safety issues and environmental issues as specified in the consent.

Housing Corporation Loan Portfolio

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 84, what further progress has been made with the sale of the Housing Corporation's loan portfolio. [19568]

Mr. Curry: Contracts were exchanged with NatWest Markets on Wednesday 5 March, which establish the terms on which the portfolio will be sold.

Because the purchase price is subject to changes in the underlying portfolio and to movements in the gilt rate between now and when completion takes place at the end of March, I cannot yet provide a precise figure for the final receipt. However, at today's rate, a substantial premium over book value will be paid. Some £500 million will be received before the end of this financial year, as anticipated in spending plans, and I confidently expect that the further £500 million anticipated in next year's plans will be exceeded when the balance is received on 1 April.

The receipt will be subject to subsequent adjustment should any of the loan characteristics differ from those described in the contract, in any way that results in a financial loss for either party. This was anticipated in the minute I laid before Parliament on 10 February. No other warranty, apart from the undertaking about the ownership of the loans, has been given.

Three Valleys Water

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to combat the threat to health from water in those parts of London and the south-east supplied by Three Valleys Water; and if he will make a statement. [18782]

Mr. Gummer: Cryptosporidium is a parasite found in man and animals which has been recognised relatively recently as a cause of diarrhoea. It can be transmitted in many ways, including by contact with animals and people, and by food and water. Cryptosporidiosis, the illness arising from exposure to cryptosporidium, is a self-limiting condition in most adults, but it can last for several weeks. Infants, the elderly and people with weakened immune systems are at greater risk than the general population.

Following a waterborne outbreak in 1989, an expert group was set up under the late Sir John Badenoch and produced a report. The research they recommended was put in hand and the expert group published a further report on the results in 1995. The group made a number of recommendations on good practice, particularly on monitoring and the operation of water treatment. They stressed the importance of co-ordination between water companies, local authorities and health authorities and the formation of outbreak control teams. This has become standard practice. Both reports by the expert group were widely circulated to water companies, local authorities and health authorities. They concluded that properly operated water treatment processes are usually very effective in removing cryptosporidium from water.

The management of the threat to health of consumers affected by this incident is a matter for Three Valleys Water in consultation with the relevant health authorities and local authorities. Boiling the water will kill cryptosporidium. Three Valleys Water has issued precautionary advice to boil water and this advice will remain in force until Three Valleys Water and the relevant health and local authorities are satisfied that the water is safe to drink without boiling.

The drinking water inspectorate has commenced a full investigation to establish whether the recent outbreak of cryptosporidiosis is linked to the water supply. If so, the inspectorate will consider whether a prosecution should be brought against Three Valleys Water for supplying water unfit for human consumption.

Finally, I have agreed with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health that we should convene an expert group under a new chairman to establish what lessons can be learnt from recent incidents involving cryptosporidium.

Homelessness

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many households have been accepted as homeless by local authorities in rural areas in England in each year since 1979; [18694]

(2) how many households have been accepted as homeless by local authorities in England in each year since 1979. [18695]

Mr. Clappison: The data collected from local authorities on households accepted as homeless under the homelessness legislation does not differentiate between households from rural and non-rural areas. Summary prints showing the reported acceptances in each local authority area in England, and the total for England as a whole, for the years 1979 to 1995 are in the Library. The figures for the years 1979 to 1982 are not strictly comparable with those for the later years because of changes to reporting arrangement made in 1980, for non-metropolitan districts, and 1982, for London boroughs and metropolitan districts.

Noise Maps

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to fund the development of noise maps. [18701]

Mr. Gummer: The Government remain to be convinced that national noise mapping would be a cost-effective use of resources.

My Department has, however, recently commissioned research to study local authority practice in noise assessment and mapping, and the costs involved.

Ringway Parliamentary Support Group

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the meetings which Ministers have held in an official capacity with the Ringway parliamentary support group. [18401]

Mr. Gummer: No meetings have been held in the past 12 months with the Ringway parliamentary support group.

HEALTH

Nurses and Doctors

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses and (b) doctors there were in the NHS in England (i) at the latest available date and (ii) in 1990. [18457]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is shown in the table.

NHS hospital and community health services medical, nursing and midwifery staff and general medical services general medical practitioners and practice nurses

England 1990 and 1995

	1990	1995
HCHS medical staff and GMS general medical practitioners[1] (headcount)	73,720	80,820
HCHS nursing and midwifery staff and GMS practice nurses[2] (whole-time equivalents)	344,260	346,670
Not included in the above:
HCHS learners[3]	58,840	6,900
Project 2000 students[3]	3,000	33,000

Notes:

[1] Figures exclude hospital practitioners and clinical assistants to avoid double counting.

[2] Excluding agency staff.

[3] Learners are nurses on traditional nurse training courses, and are directly employed by the NHS HCHS. Project 2000 training was introduced in 1989 and has gradually replaced traditional pre-registration nurse training. Project 2000 students are funded by bursaries, they are supernumerary not employees, and are thus excluded from the count of NHS HCHS nursing staff. Figures for Project 2000 students are headcounts and should not be added to other nursing figures in the table which are whole-time equivalents.

HCHS figures are as at 30 September each year.

GMS figures are as at 1 October each year.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS (a) doctors and (b) nurses there were in 1979; and how many there are at the present time. [18939]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is given in the tables.

(a) National Health Service Hospital and Community Health Services doctors and General Medical Services doctors (headcounts), 1979: 61,550

1995: 80,820

All figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Table B: NHS Hospital and Community Health Services nursing and midwifery staff and General Medical Services practice nurses England 1979 and 1995

HCHS nursing and midwifery staff and GMS practice nurses[2]	278,750	346,670
Qualified	192,010	240,160
Unqualified	85,750	92,380
Others	—	4,390
GMS Practice Nurses	990	9,740
Not included in the above:
HCHS learners[3]	76,650	6,900
Project 2000 students[3]	—	33,000

Notes:

[1] Figures for 1979 do not take account of the reduction in nurses' standard working hours in 1980–81 from 40 to 37.5 hours per week, and are therefore not directly comparable with figures for later years.

[2] Excluding agency staff.

[3] Learners are nurses on traditional nurse training courses, and are directly employed by the NHS HCHS. High-cost Drugs

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been refused prescription of (a) growth hormone, (b) interferon beta, 1B and (c) erythropoietia on the grounds of cost in each of the last two years. [17384]

Mr. Malone: Data are not collected on the number of patients refused particular treatments.

Infant Formula Milk

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what microbiological testing of infant formula baby milk is (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by Government Departments; and if he will make a statement; [18456]

(2) what responsibility his Department has with regard to microbiological testing of infant formula baby milk; and if he will make a statement. [18454]

Mr. Horam: It is the responsibility of food businesses to ensure that the food they produce is safe, in compliance with all appropriate food safety legislation. Local authority environmental health departments are responsible for enforcing this legislation. The Government, in line with European Union policy, promote microbiological safety through adoption of the hazard analysis critical control point approach.

Sleep Disorders

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities in England make provision for the diagnosis and treatment of sleep disorders; and if he will make a statement. [18417]

Mr. Burns: Sleep disturbance most commonly arises as a result of mental illness such as anxiety and depression. All health authorities will provide a spectrum of treatment ranging from general, primary and care-led, to specialist services.

Behaviourally Disturbed Young People (Prescriptions)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which officials of (a) his Department and (b) the chief medical officer's office attended the meeting arranged in London on 27 January under the auspices of the British Association for Psychopharmacology regarding prescription of medicine for behaviourally disturbed young people; and if he will make a statement. [18488]

Mr. Burns: Officials were not available to attend the meeting, but they will consider reports when available.

Bug Busting Programme

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the (a) current and (b) future level of funding of the bug busting programme. [18561]

Mr. Horam: The bug busting programme, which is run by the voluntary organisation Community Hygiene Concern, has a three-year project grant of £25,000 a year from the Department of Health under the section 64 general scheme; 1997–98 is the third year. Any application to renew funding will be carefully considered.

NHS Employees' Pay

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS employees currently earn less than £4 an hour. [18734]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally.

Speech and Language Therapy

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of expenditure by each health authority in England for speech and language therapy services for children (a) with and (b) without a record of needs in each year between 1992 and 1996. [18711]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not centrally available.

NHS Trusts (Chief Executives)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many chief executives and senior managers of (a) NHS trusts and (b) health authorities have been dismissed in each of the last three years; and how many have retired before the normal retirement age. [18714]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally.

Ashworth Special Hospital

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations have been made to him concerning the number of patients at Ashworth special hospital who might more suitably be treated elsewhere; what is his estimate of the number; and if he will make a statement concerning all three special hospitals in this respect. [18974]

Mr. Burns: The Reed report of 1994 relating to high secure provision suggests that a number of patients are inappropriately accommodated in high secure settings when their needs could be met in services with lower levels of security.

The Government's response to the concerns raised in the Reed report are set out in a national health service executive document, "High Secure Psychiatric Services: Changes in Funding and Organisation", which was published in June 1995.

The high security psychiatric services commissioning board was set up on 1 April 1996 to oversee these changes to forensic services as part of the Government's response to the Reed report. These changes were designed to establish a clear purchaser-provider structure to allow future service planning to occur in circumstances similar to the rest of the NHS and to foster integration and more regionally focused ownership of future problems and solutions for these services.

The board aims to develop a co-ordinated strategy for commissioning high and long-term medium secure psychiatric services within the NHS and is working, as a matter of priority, to identify the most effective use of available resources to provide high-quality services at the level of security the individual patient requires.

Cryptosporidium

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State of Health what machinery exists for the early identification of risks to public health from the contamination of the water supply; and if the Government will review it in the light of the cryptosporidium outbreak in the Three Valleys Water area. [18912]

Mr. Horam: Since privatisation, water companies are required to report to the drinking water inspectorate all incidents in which water quality might be affected. They are further required to report to health and local authorities any event giving rise to a significant risk to health.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings there have been between his Department, and (a) Thames Water, and (b) representatives of water companies about the increase in the number of incidents of cryptosporidium in the water supply. [18906]

Mr. Horam: None. The number of incidents of cryptosporidium in the water supply reported to the drinking water inspectorate remains at a low level.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to meet the health authorities in the areas affected by the most recent outbreak of cryptosporidium in the water supply. [18917]

Mr. Horam: Responsibility for investigation and control of such outbreaks lies with local public health specialists. Officials from the Department have been in close contact with these specialists since the problem came to light and are available to attend meetings of the incident management team should this be considered necessary.

Paracetamol and Methionine Compound

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the paracetamol and methionine compound was blacklisted for prescription on the NHS in 1986; what is his Department's current policy on the compound; and if he will make a statement. [18372]

Mr. Malone: The decision to add Pameton, which contains paracetamol and methionine, to the list of medicines which general practitioners may not prescribe at national health service expense was taken following advice from the advisory committee on the NHS drugs. The committee took into account that Pameton was considerably more expensive than paracetamol, that a doctor who was concerned about the effects of paracetamol on a patient could prescribe an alternative instead, that allowing the product to be prescribed would have no effect in potential suicide cases where paracetamol tablets were bought over the counter, and that, while the value of methionine after paracetamol overdose was well documented, evidence of benefit from methionine when administered at the same time as paracetamol was limited. The committee continues to keep the matter under review and will advise the Department of any recommended changes on the prescribing of such products.

Drug Overdoses

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many overdoses from non-prescription drugs were recorded in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [18374]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not held centrally.

Swine Fever

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects on humans of the consumption of pork and ham infected with swine fever. [18427]

Mr. Horam: There is no evidence that this disease has ever affected humans.

Connective Tissue Disease

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom suffer from connective tissue disease (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the population. [18826]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Prostheses

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what clinical trials are (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on human prostheses, prior to their being made available through the national health service. [18827]

Mr. Horam: Under the medical devices regulations which came into force on 1 January 1995, manufacturers who wish to run clinical trials on medical devices must submit their protocol to the Medical Devices Agency for assessment prior to the commencement of the trial.

Since that date, there have been 20 applications for trials on human prostheses. As part of the marketing approval system under the regulations, designated independent certification organisations may assess the results of such trials as part of the conformity process prior to the product being placed on the market and being available for use in the national health service or more generally.

Alpha-1-Antitrypsin Deficiency Disease

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated concerning Alpha-1-Antitrypsin deficiency disease; and if he will make a statement on the incidence of the disease. [18821]

Mr. Horam: None. Information on the incidence of the disease is not collected centrally.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which hospitals in Essex have reported cases of MRSA in the past 12 months; how many cases there were in each hospital; and in how many cases MRSA contributed to or caused death; [18990]

(2) how many hospitals have reported cases of MRSA in England in the past 12 months; how many cases there were in total; and in how many cases MRSA was the cause of or contributed to death. [18995]

Mr. Horam: Information on the total number of cases of infection or colonisation with methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus is not collected centrally. Some health authorities monitor the occurrence of MRSA, but these are likely to be subject to local variations in the type of data collected and the methods of collection used.

Data on the occurrence of MRSA, compiled by the public health laboratory service, are derived from isolates submitted voluntarily by hospitals in England and Wales for typing. These show that 177 hospitals in England reported incidents of MRSA affecting a total of 19,385 patients in 1996. Similarly, data held by the PHLS for 1996 show that three hospitals in Essex reported incidents of MRSA affecting 88, 59 and 15 patients respectively. An incident is defined as three or more patients with the same strain of MRSA in a month from the same hospital. It is not know in how many cases MRSA contributed to or caused death.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in making available the MRSA combating drug developed by the team headed by Professor Brian Austin at Heriot-Watt university; and if he will make a statement. [18994]

Mr. Horam: We understand that Professor Austen's work is at a very early stage.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital screen patients for MRSA on admission. [18988]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are being taken to prevent the spread of MRSA outside hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [18993]

Mr. Horam: In May 1996, the Department issued a leaflet on methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus to health authorities, social services departments and nursing and residential homes, and guidelines on the control of infection generally in residential and nursing homes. These guidelines advise that MRSA rarely presents a danger to people in these settings and that basic measures to prevent the spread of any type of infection, should prevent the spread of MRSA. Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public money is being directed to researching into the cause, extent of, possible cures for, measures to combat and drugs for MRSA; and if he will make a statement. [18989]

Mr. Horam: Information in the form requested is not held centrally. For information on the Department's expenditure on research into MRSA and developing new antibiotics, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 22 January, Official Report, columns 15-16.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18933]

Mr. Horam: The figures in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" represent an estimate of expected spend on private finance schemes. All private finance schemes being prepared within the national health service were taken into account when these figures were estimated.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18822]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury St. Edmunds, (Mr. Spring) by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–7.

Capital Projects (Greater London)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was the income spent in Greater London on capital projects in the NHS in each of the last five years; and what is the projected spending in each of the next five years; [13703]

(2) if he will list the capital projects costing over £100,000 which are planned to start in Greater London in the five years from 30 September 1996, indicating the number and sums allocated in each year. [13702]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 31 January 1997]: With regard to past expenditure on capital schemes, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on 22 January, Official Report, columns 664–65. Only information relating to capital schemes costing over £1 million, for which national health service executive approval is required, is available. Details of planned schemes in this category, starting in Greater London after 30 September 1996, for which outline or full business case approval has been granted by the NHS executive, are given in the table. Schemes costing below £1 million are a matter for individual NHS trusts.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Hill Farmers

14. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on financial support for hill farmers since 1992. [17559]

Mr. Boswell: Expressed in real terms at 1992 prices, total direct livestock subsides to the less favoured areas, including hill livestock compensatory allowances, have gone up from £460 million in 1992 to an estimated £575 million this year, an increase of 25 per cent. This confirms the Government's on-going commitment to help farmers in the hills and uplands.

Fish Breeding Areas

15. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy towards the creation of non-fishing areas of sea where fish can breed. [17560]

Mr. Baldry: Off our coast, there are already a number of no-fishing areas to protect spawning herring. The Government are always ready to consider proposals for further such areas.

Food Imports

16. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of United Kingdom food imports are of products also grown within the United Kingdom; and what action he has taken to increase the proportion of home-produced food consumed. [17561]

Mrs. Browning: Provisional figures for 1995 show that 57 per cent. of our food imports were classified as indigenous food products or materials. Our farmers and growers already produce world-class products and we are working with the industry to help develop a similar level of excellence in marketing.

Fish Quotas

17. Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on North sea fish quotas. [17562]

Mr. Baldry: The North sea fish quotas agreed for 1997 represent the best possible deal for British fishermen consistent with scientific advice and the conservation of stocks for the future.

Small Food Producers (European Directives)

18. Mr. Booth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ensure that the supply of food and produce from small-scale producers, with special reference to garden, allotment and small market garden growers, is not eliminated as a result of European directives. [17563]

Mr. Boswell: Yes. This is already Government policy, but I am not aware of any moves by the European Union which would affect gardeners, allotment holders and market gardeners.

Battery Hens

19. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the welfare of egg-laying hens kept in battery cages. [17654]

Mrs. Browning: We have pressed the European Commission to complete the overdue review of the EU directive. The scientific veterinary committee's updated report was published in October last year. The Commission has said that its proposals for revised Community standards will soon follow.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

20. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount of funds distributed under the arable area payments scheme in 1996. [17565]

Mr. Baldry: Total payments under the arable area payments scheme by MAFF in the 1996–97 financial year are forecast at just over £1.1 billion.

British Food

21. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent initiatives his Department has taken to promote British food. [17566]

Mrs. Browning: At the recent international food and drink exhibition held at Earls court, the Department co-sponsored the British speciality food section with Food From Britain to help raise the profile of this important sector of the food and drink industry. This initiative received universal praise from exhibitors and buyers, and the exhibition received a record number of trade visits.

Hedgerows

22. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to encourage farmers to preserve hedges and hedgerows. [17567]

Mr. Boswell: Regulations to protect important hedgerows were laid before Parliament on 3 March 1997.

Enhanced incentives for the restoration and planting of hedges, which form an important part of the countryside stewardship scheme, were announced on 17 February. Grants are also available under the environmentally sensitive areas scheme, and the Department funds ADAS and the Farming and Wildlife Advisory Group to provide free initial conservation advice. Farmers are also required not to damage, destroy or remove hedges on or adjacent to set-aside land.

Chocolate Manufacturers

23. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to protect the interests of United Kingdom chocolate manufacturers; and if he will make a statement. [17568]

Mrs. Browning: When negotiations begin on the proposal to amend the 1973 EC chocolate directive, the Government will seek to protect the right of British consumers to continue to choose established British products under their traditional names.

In the meantime, we have ensured that other member states are fully aware of the UK position on the proposal and have drawn the attention of hon. Members and Members of the European Parliament to the important issues for United Kingdom chocolate manufacturers in the proposed amendments to the chocolate directive.

Milk Marque

14. Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the functioning of the milk market since the establishment of Milk Marque. [17569]

Mr. Baldry: I am very pleased with the results of the Government's deregulation of the milk market. In its recent report on the UK dairy industry and the common agricultural policy regime, the Agriculture Committee concluded that deregulation has been highly successful.

British Beef Ban

25. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on recent discussions at the Council of Ministers on the lifting of the ban on British beef sales. [17570]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The procedures envisaged for lifting the export ban involve the Standing Veterinary Committee and other advisory Commission committees, not the Council Nevertheless, I have kept the Council informed on the UK's progress in fulfilling the preconditions laid down under the Florence agreement. Now that we have fulfilled all the preconditions and I have sent Commissioners Fischler and Bonino our proposals for a UK export certified herds scheme, I will be telling the next Agriculture Council what we have achievedandpressingforearlyprogress.

Fish Conservation

26. Dr. Spink: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from non-sector fisherman regarding sea fish conservation. [17571]

Mr. Baldry: I am in frequent contact with non-sector fishermen about sea fish conservation and related issues. Most recently, I met non-sector fishermen from Kent and Essex, accompanied by my hon. Friends the Members for Castle Point and for Basildon (Mr. Amess), on 27 January to discuss a range of issues including the closure of the North sea sole fishery to vessels of 10 m and under until 21 April.

Set-aside

27. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what actions are being taken by his Department to ensure preservation of natural habitats in set-aside land. [17572]

Mr. Boswell: The UK's management rules for set-aside were drawn up in consultation with farming and environmental organisations and are designed to protect wildlife and the environment while allowing farmers to carry out their normal agricultural operations. For example, environmental features such as hedgerows, streams and ponds on or adjacent to set-aside land may not be damaged, destroyed or removed. The rules are regularly reviewed and from 1997 have been further modified to help protect groundnesting birds.

BSE

28. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many confirmed cases of BSE have been recorded so far this year; and if he will make a statement on trends in the number of cases. [17573]

Mr. Baldry: As at 21 February 1997, of the 891 cases placed under restriction in Great Britain in 1997, 72 had been confirmed. Throughout the epidemic there has been a delay between slaughter and eventual confirmation due to the requirement to permit fixation of brain tissue prior to its examination. The BSE epidemic has continued to decline markedly during the last year and is now at its lowest level for eight years.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the methods of disposal that are (a) permitted and (b) currently in operation for (i) specified bovine material and (ii) non-specified bovine material from cattle with bovine spongiform encephalopathy, including the condensate and washwater produced from rendering of such material. [18696]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The carcases of virtually all BSE-suspect animals are incinerated: in 1996, 9,643 carcases were incinerated and three buried. No material from BSE suspects is allowed to go for rendering.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the number of carcases of cattle with bovine spongiform encephalopathy that was buried in each site for each year from 1986. [18697]

Mr. Hogg: It is not possible to provide details of the number of BSE-suspect carcases disposed of at specific landfill site, as a complete set of records is not held centrally. A complete record could be provided only at disproportionate cost. It is however known that the total number of BSE-suspect cases disposed of by landfill is approximately 6,120. This figure represents approximately 3 per cent. of the total number of BSE suspects slaughtered.

Animal Welfare

29. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has already taken to improve animal welfare; what further steps he is considering; and if he will make a statement. [17574]

Mrs. Browning: My right hon. and learned Friend has secured agreement in the Council of Ministers to measures which will result in a significant improvement in the welfare of calves. The use of the close confinement veal crate, already banned in the UK, will be phased out across Europe by 2006. Other changes, including a ban on unacceptable diets, will come into effect from 1 January next year. We have also been preparing national implementing measures which will give effect to improved EU rules on welfare in transit. We will work hard to ensure that other member states implement and enforce these rules too.

We will continue to press for improved measures to protect the welfare of laying hens and, at the intergovernmental conference, for the adoption of a protocol endorsing the Community's role in the protection of animal welfare.

Infant Formula Milk

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what responsibility his Department has with regard to microbiological testing of infant formula baby milk; and if he will make a statement. [18455]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him today by the Under-Secretary of State for Health.

Quarantine

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will announce the result of his review of the quarantine regulations. [18675]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Members for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) and Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 27 February 1997, Official Report, column 326.

Swine Fever

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps he is taking to monitor the spread of swine fever in Germany; [18429]

(2) when he plans to meet his EU counterparts to discuss the export of live pigs or pig carcases infected with swine fever; [18430]

(3) when he plans to meet his EU counterparts to discuss the sale of German pork and ham infected with swine fever. [18428]

Mrs. Browning: I have no plans to meet my EU counterparts on this topic, which is being kept under continuous review by the EC Standing Veterinary Committee. Community legislation lays down the internal control measures against swine fever which the German veterinary authorities must apply, and additional controls specifically applicable to the export of live pigs and fresh and processed pigmeat products from Germany. These measures have been implemented to prevent the spread of disease within Germany and to other countries. They include restrictions on the movement of live animals and products within Germany, a total ban on the export of live animals and pigmeat products from infected regions and additional safeguards applicable to exports from other regions.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide a breakdown by project of PFI schemes for which his Department is responsible as identified in Table 5.5 of the Red Book. [18923]

Mr. Boswell: The financial provision in the Ministry's entry for 1999–00 in Table 5.5 of the Red Book is an outline for non-PFI procurement only which will be subject to revision when PFI tenders have been received.

It relates to two projects:

(a) Whitehall HQ Building (Accommodation).

(b) Sea-Going Research Vessel Services.

Abbotsland Farm

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if Abbotsland farm, Capel le Ferne, is operating as a staging point, as defined under EU law; and if he will make a statement. [18999]

Mrs. Browning: No. Defined criteria for staging points under directive 91/628, as amended, have yet to be agreed by the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

ADAS

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the advantages of the privatisation of ADAS. [17553]

Mr. Boswell: The privatisation of ADAS will realise some £23.5 million for the taxpayer. ADAS's work for MAFF and the Welsh office is now on a sound contractual basis and future liabilities on Government have been minimised. ADAS will be free to develop its business in response to customer demand.

Running Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer of 17 January, Official Report, columns 398–400, on administration costs, if he will provide a breakdown of the additional running costs provision for the Agriculture Departments. [17956]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 27 February 1997]: Details on the additional administration provisions for the Agriculture Departments to fund BSE measures are below. The figures for MAFF include amounts for enforcement costs specified bovine material controls and research and development.

Flock Mark

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his Answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 658, if he will set out the method whereby a flock mark to all registered holdings ensured that each holding was individually identifiable. [18998]

Mrs. Browning: Each flock has been allocated an individual alpha-numeric mark.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what percentage of bills to his Department were paid (a) in accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice where no contractual conditions applied in the last year for which figures are available. [18817]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the Hon. Member to the answer given by the Economic Secretary on 17 December 1996, Official Report, columns 506–507. Any additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 291

SESSION 1996–97

24th February—6th March 1997

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
